APPOINTMENT OF GARESCHE TO U. S. BENCH UNCERTAIN

Senator Spencer Declared to Have Expressed Unwarranted Confidence in Success of Efforts by Himself.

HITCHCOCK NAMED AS POSSIBILITY

Former Circuit Judge Mentioned for Eastern Missouri District Following Investigation of Field Here.

By CHARLES G. ROSS,
Chief Washington Correspondent of the Post-Dispatch.

WASHINGTON, Dec. 9.—There are unmistakable signs here that the appointment of Circuit Judge Vital W. Garesche, of St. Louis, to the vacant Federal Judgeship of the Eastern Missouri District is by no means so well assured as Senator Spencer, Garesche's backer for the place, professes to believe. Opposition to Garesche has crystallized to such an extent in the last week that several well informed Missouri politicians, who have kept in close touch with the trend of Department of Justice opinion regarding the appointment, are predicting that Garesche will be passed over.

Whatever statement may have been made to the contrary, it is a fact that the department has not yet recommended or decided to recommend Garesche's name to the President. The contest for the judgeship is still open. It is Senator Spencer's practice when recommending an appointment, say members of the Missouri delegation in the House, to try to head off discussion of other candidates by giving the impression that his man had been virtually decided upon. He is said to have followed that course in the case of Garesche. It has not, however, had the desired effect.

The visit of Assistant Attorney-General Rush L. Holland to St. Louis to look into the qualifications of various aspirants did not, it was learned on good authority today, help Garesche's chances. An official of the department is said to have expressed the opinion, following the Holland investigation, that the appointment of Garesche would be unwise both from a political standpoint and that of the public interest.

Reported Alliance of Garesche.

Protests, it is known, have reached the department to the effect that Garesche is too closely allied, politically, with "Spencer and his crowd"—with the influences that sought to get a Federal job for Nat Goldstein and thereby brought a first rate scandal upon the administration—for his appointment to take well with the public.

The opposition to Garesche seems to have made headway. Not so much by public attacks of a more or less personal nature — though such have been made—as by insistence that his legal and political career in general indicates a lack of the qualities that ought to be outstanding in a Federal Judge.

Hitchcock Mentioned.

Thus far, the name most prominently mentioned for the place, should Garesche not be appointed, has been that of former Circuit Judge George Hitchcock. It is certain that Hitchcock has been given very favorable consideration by the Department of Justice since the visit of Holland to St. Louis.

The fact, however, that Hitchcock has been supported by the anti-Spencer forces may work against him. The department may reason that to appoint him, after turning down the recognized Spencer candidate, would be to fly too directly in Spencer's face.

This line of reasoning suggests to some observers that the department may seek a compromise candidate and turn to a field that includes such names as those of former Judge Eugene McQuillan, Judge H. A. Hamilton, Frank Y. Gladney, David W. Hill, former Speaker of the Missouri House of Representatives, Robert Burkham and others.

Sentiment Against Garesche.

The prevailing sentiment of the Missouri Republicans in Congress is against Garesche. Spencer ignored them in recommending Garesche, just as he has done, to their chagrin, in other matters of patronage.

Should Garesche be named and Senator Reed object, a fight against confirmation might follow. Senator Pat Harrison, who led the contest against Goldstein, has received letters of protest against Garesche, but has said that whether or not he would make them the basis of an attack would depend on the attitude of Senator Reed.

HARDING GIVEN SARAZEN'S DRIVER, BUT CAN'T USE IT

President Finds Champion's Club Is Five Inches Too Short for Him.

Post-Dispatch Bureau,
No. 20 Wyatt Bldg.

WASHINGTON, Dec. 9.—Gene Sarazen's driver, which helped win him the national open golf championship and several other titles, is now a part of President Harding's golf equipment. Sarazen presented it to him at the White House today, and accepted Harding's challenge for a match—date not specified and no handicap mentioned.

Although the prized club assisted in the defeat of the great Walter Hagen, it will not improve President Harding's score and must be kept by him merely as a souvenir, for Sarazen uses a club with a shaft five inches shorter than the President requires. The driver has a rough leather grip, large head and a wide hitting face.

The gold champion was introduced to the President by Secretary Christian. In Harding's office he proceeded to show the correct driving form, following through with much interest to two representatives of the Tokio Chamber of Commerce, Goichi Ake and Misinoshe Okumma, who were present. Ake ventured that golf was not a national pastime in Japan.

"Do you think it ever will be?" Sarazen asked.

"Not from the way they are hitting the balls now," Ake was quoted as replying.

Sarazen is in Washington giving lessons.

JAIL TERM TO BE PENALTY FOR INDECENT DANCING IN NEW YORK

Woman Deputy Police Commissioner Warns Hall Owners "Demoralizing" Steps Must Be Barred.

By the Associated Press.

NEW YORK, Dec. 9.—New York today was washed by a terpsichorean reform wave. Proprietors of 400 public dance halls were warned by Mrs. George W. Loft, Deputy Police Commissioner that they would be jailed unless they put a stop to "indecent, demoralizing dancing."

"We have tried to regulate dancing with women police," said Mrs. Loft, "and we have failed. The regular police, therefore, have been ordered to arrest proprietors and floor managers who permit violations of the dancing rules we have made.

"Cheek to cheek dancing and movements known as the scandal walk, the cradle rock, the Chicago camel, the syncopating shimmy and the chicken shakes are terrible. They must cease."

3 KILLED IN FIGHT BETWEEN PLANTERS AND LABOR AGENTS

Men Engaged by Mississippi Land Company to Hire Negroes From Louisiana Plantation.

CONFLICTING STORIES OF BATTLE TOLD

District Attorney Says Men Who Hired Agents Are Responsible; Will Prosecute.

By the Associated Press.

VICKSBURG, Miss., Dec. 9.—Three men were killed and three wounded in a gun and pistol battle between labor agents and planters at Duckport, La., onthe Mississippi River, near here, early today. The dead:

An unidentified white man.
Will Crofton, negro.
Jake Stevens, negro, labor agent.

The injured:
Unidentified planter.
William Wooten, white.
Tom Dangerfield, negro.

Wooten and Dangerfield came to Vicksburg in a boat and went to the police station where they reported the battle. The police took them to the hospital.

Reports Are Conflicting.

Reports of the circumstances leading to the trouble were conflicting. Wooten told authorities that Jake Stevens, negro labor agent, and he were engaged by R. L. Kirtley, representing the Black River Land Co., near Vicksburg, to go to Duckport to get four or five negro families who were to work on the land company's plantation.

Accompanied by Stevens and several others, he ran his boat to a point near Duckport. Fifteen or 20 white men and negroes were on the river bank. They hailed the boat and he made for the landing when the men on shore opened fire with automatic guns and pistols, Wooten said.

Stevens had a revolver and returned the fire, according to the story. A second fusillade of shot from the men on shore brought Stevens and two others on the barge down. Wooten said he cut the boat loose from the barge and drifted down with Dangerfield. He said the men on shore continued to fire at his boat until it was out of range.

District Attorney Will Prosecute.

Sheriff Andrew Sevier and District Attorney Jeff B. Snyder of Madison Parish made an investigation of the shooting and the latter declared he will prosecute the men who engaged Wooten and Stevens for going to Louisiana to get labor, trespassing and for shooting.

The District Attorney said the men arrived at a place between Delta Point and Duckport at midnight. They went to the negro quarters of a plantation, he said, attempted to persuade the negroes to leave and raised a disturbance. The home negroes sent word to the planters, and in a short time several planters came upon the scene and asked what the men wanted. They answered by firing at the planters, according to the District Attorney, and the planters returned the fire.

BODY OF DRY AGENT SLAIN BY MOONSHINERS RECOVERED

Officer Shot While Leading Raid on Cave in Hills of Menefee County, Kentucky.

By the Associated Press.

MT. STERLING, Ky., Dec. 9.—Federal prohibition agents and members of a posse tonight recovered the body of Agent Robert C. Duff, 50 years old, killed today in a skirmish with moonshiners who were barricaded in a cave in the hills of Menifee County, east of here. Members of the band had fled farther into the hills when the posse arrived.

Duff was killed while leading a raiding party to the cave, where officers believed a still was in operation. The occupants opened fire when the party approached. In the subsequent exchange of shots, the fire of the defenders became so heavy the raiding party was forced to retire without Duff's body.

Bringing word of the battle here, Duff's companions obtained reinforcements and returned to the scene. Entering the deserted cave they found evidences of moonshining, but the plant proper had been removed. The slain man had been stripped of his arms and ammunition.

HYDE ARRIVES TO PASS DAY SIGNING 5000 ROAD BONDS

Governor Figures He Can Sign at Rate of 600 an Hour—Bound for Washington.

Gov. Hyde arrived at the Claridge Hotel last night to remain until tonight, although the 24 hours held no enchanting prospect for him. He expects to pass most of his waking hours signing 5000 State road bonds sold last week to the First National Co. of St. Louis. He reckoned that he could sign at the rate of 600 an hour and dolefully calculated that meant more than eight hours with the pen.

The Governor, who is accompanied by Mrs. Hyde, will go from St. Louis to Washington to remain until Thursday, when he will depart for White Sulphur Springs to attend the annual conference of Governors. He said that he had no official or political mission in Washington. He will return to Jefferson City about Dec. 20. Lieutenant-Governor Lloyd will take charge of the Governor's office in Jefferson City tomorrow.

BERT J. LOWE CONVICTED OF MURDERING SISTER-IN-LAW

Court in Greeley, Colo., Finds First Degree Verdict for Death of Illinois Woman.

By the Associated Press.

GREELEY, Colo., Dec. 9.—Bert J. Lowe was found guilty by a jury in District Court here tonight of first degree murder of his sister-in-law, Miss Edna Fern Skinner of Leroy, Ill., last July 2.

The verdict was returned at 10:20 o'clock. The case was given to the jury at 6:30 o'clock tonight.

Judge Bradfield congratulated the jurymen on their verdict. He declared they had brought in a just and fair finding in the case.

Under the instruction given the jury by the Judge this afternoon, the verdict of first degree murder was the only one which could have been brought in, except acquittal.

Lowe had retired for the night, and was sound asleep when a bailiff went to his cell to summon him to the courtroom to hear the verdict of the jury.

Judge Bradfield granted the defense 30 days for filing a motion for a new trial.

The State charged that Lowe killed Miss Skinner in the home with a machine hammer, which was found in the house shortly after the discovery of her body, and that he then set fire to the body and house, after dismantling a gasoline stove in the kitchen to make it appear as though it had exploded.

FAMILY OF FOUR AND MOTHER OF THREE KILLED IN AUTO

The Three Children and Their Father Injured When Car Plunged Into Ditch of Water.

OKLAHOMA CITY, Ok., Dec. 9.—All members of a family of four and the mother of three children were killed when a motor car in which they were riding plunged off a culvert into a ditch filled with water on the Norman road, about five miles south of here tonight. Three children and their father were injured.

The dead are:

Mrs. Ernest Howell.

The injured:
Ernest Howell.
Norma Gene Howell, 5 years old.
Nonnie Howell, 3 years old.
—— Howell, 2 years old.

The dead and injured persons were brought to Oklahoma City. Two of the Howell children are in a critical condition, their lungs being filled with water when they were brought to a hospital.

The persons who lost their lives were pinned beneath the motor car, and were drowned.

It was reported that the driver of the car became confused because of the bright lights of an approaching automobile. The other machine did not stop.

ROBBERY OF POSTOFFICE AT WASHINGTON PARK FRUSTRATED

Village Marshal of East St. Louis Suburb Fires at Men Trying to Break in Door.

Attempted burglary of the postoffice at Washington Park, a suburb adjoining East St. Louis on the north, was frustrated by the appearance of Village Marshal Walter Vincent at 11:45 o'clock last night. He was driving past the grocery of Mrs. Henry Bloemker, 5300 Forest boulevard, who conducts the postoffice there, and saw four men trying to break in the door. As he approached they ran for their automobile, a red machine bearing a Missouri license.

The Marshal and the robbers exchanged several shots. Vincent said he thought he hit one of the men, for one of them was seen to stagger and be assisted into the machine by his companions. One of Vincent's shots broke the windshield of the robbers' machine and one of their shots passed through his raincoat, on the left side, without injuring him.

The robbers headed their automobile for East St. Louis. The postoffice funds are taken each night to the main postoffice in East St. Louis.

BRITAIN WOULD RECONSIDER DEBT CANCELLATION IN EVENT OF REPARATION SETTLEMENT

TCHITCHERIN WARNS TURKS OF DANGER IN PLACING THEIR TRUST IN ALLIES

Soviet Foreign Minister Assembles Journalists at Lausanne by Urgent Invitation and Stresses Dependence of Nations on Each Other for Safety.

POINTS TO BRITISH DESIGNS ON PERSIA

Action Regarded as Proof of Bolshevists' Dissatisfaction Because Ismet Pasha Has Abandoned Them on Dardanelles Question.

By the Associated Press.

LAUSANNE, Dec. 9.—Proof that Bolshevik Russia is highly dissatisfied with Turkey because Ismet Pasha has abandoned the Russians on the question of the Dardanelles was found today when M. Tchitcherin, the soviet Foreign Minister, issued an urgent invitation to the Turkish journalists and in the course of a long speech warned them of the dangers of placing their trust in the allied nations.

M. Tchitcherin did not want to say anything in the way of criticism of the Turkish plenipotentiaries, but thought the Turkish people at home should know of the trend of things at Lausanne.

Tchitcherin charged that France had abandoned Turkey in favor of England, and the consideration was probably some concessions on the reparations problem from England.

"But it remains to be seen," he continued, "how far France and England will agree when the Brussels conference is held."

He rejoinced that Turkey and Russia had finally come together because they were vitally important to each other; their interests were the same.

"The independence and strength of Turkey is security for Russia," he added, "and Turkey cannot be strong and independent unless the straits are closed."

The Bolshevik leader declared that to allow foreign warships to pass through the straits would mean the handing over of Constantinople to the strongest navy. Naval units would seize Constantinople, then attack Russia. Therefore, if Constantinople was in danger, Russia also was in danger.

Points to British Designs.

Turning his attention to England, Tchitcherin told the Turkish correspondents that Great Britain had here eye on Northern Persia. The way to Northern Persia was through the Caucasus; the way to the Caucasus was through the Dardanelles. He asserted that the Russian program at Lausanne was based on a community of interests between the Russian and Turkish peoples and he hoped that the end of the conference would find the two countries nearer together.

If the Turks insisted on their right to fortify the Straits and defend Constantinople, Russia would feel more secure and could take up with the neighboring states on the Black Sea the question of demilitarizing that water.

Some of the correspondents remarked that Turkey, weary of war, had a natural desire to establish durable peace in the Near East, but M. Tchitcherin emphasized that it was a great mistake to put trust in the European Powers.

The correspondents withdrew and sent long dispatches to their newspapers in Constantinople, Angora and elsewhere. Some of them appeared deeply distressed, as they said they did not want to embarrass their delegates.

There are indications that the bolsheviki are inclined to believe that some of the members of the

MORATORIUM FOR GERMANY NECESSARY, PREMIERS AGREE

Mussolini, in Declaration for Granting Delay, Says "Time Has Come for Realities; Reparation Is Not Whole Thing."

By JOSEPH W. GRIGG,
London Correspondent of the New World and the Post-Dispatct.

(Copyright, 1922, by the Press and Pulitzer Publishing Cos., the New York World and the Post-Dispatch.)

LONDON, Dec. 9.—A German moratorium is necessary. The four allied Powers have agreed upon that in principle as a result of the deliberations of the first day's sessions of the London conference on reparations.

Premier Poincare, however, told the delegations emphatically that France would demand very definite guarantees in return for the moratorium. What guarantees would be demanded was not revealed, today, but in all likelihood they will involve the mines and forests of the Ruhr, and the creation of a customs barrier.

Premier Mussolini of Italy was the dominant figure of the day. He placed a quite definite plan before the allies.

"Time for Realities."

He said it was time to get back to realities. He declared that a moratorium for Germany was necessary. He further declared that the present financial position of Europe and the world—and especially Germany—made it absolutely imperative that the whole question of reparations and interallied indebtedness be re-examined. His words were that the allies would not be facing realities if they re-examined only the reparations problem, because it was too closely linked with the debt problem.

Mussolini's remarks were short and to the point. As one of his colleagues said tonight, his plan was a "bid for financial peace."

There is every indication that Mussolini tried to force the conference to get to grips with the debts of his plan.

But Premier Law, who presided over the conference, said that it would be necessary for him to consult his Cabinet before he could come to any decision.

Outline of Poincare's Plan.

Neither did Poincare seem to be in any great haste to lay all his cards on the table. He sketched in very general terms at the outset of the morning session the main outlines of his planu as follows:

A moratorium for Germany on the condition of guarantees.

A loan for Germany.

A possible examination of the question of Germany's total reparation obligations.

The question of inter allied debts.

It was seen that both the French and Italian plans link the problem of reparations and interallied debts.

While bonar Law declared that the British Government entered the conference free to reconsider its position on the Balfour note—which held that Great Britain could not cancel any allied debts when she was obliged to pay her debt to America—No one knows just how far he is prepared to go on the question of cancellation. There is a formidable opposition to it in this country, but how any reduction of the total of German reparations can be efected without the sacrifice by Great Britain of what has been termed "imaginary assets" puzzles those who realize the stand which Poincare is likely to take.

In Italian quarters tonight there was some talk of an agreement in principle being reached before Monday, but this optimism is not general.

According to the "Weekly Dispatch," Poincare has indicated that "France is determined, in default of an allied agreement to take action herself against Germany to enforce payment, and "may have to advance to the occupation of the Ruhr Valley."

Persons who were present at today's discussions, however, say that Poincare did not make any such remark, although similar intimations may have been let drop outside.

MUSSOLINI, IN EVENING CLOTHES, AT STATE DINNER AT 10 DOWNING STREET

By the Associated Press.

LONDON, Dec. 9.

BENITO MUSSOLINI, blackshirted, black-fezzed Fascisti leader two months ago, but now Italian Premier, emerged from his apartments in London's finest hotel tonight clad in immaculate evening clothes with conventional silk hat, to motor to the Prime Minister's residence at 10 Downing Street, where he dined with the leading statesmen of Europe.

Mussolini, when he arrived here last night, wearing derby hat and fur-collared overcoat, advocated full publicity for the conversations of the Premiers and promised to review today's proceedings to the press. But tonight he paid no more attention to the group of waiting French, English and American correspondents than if they were members of the Italian Chamber. Consequently the newspaper men had to content themselves with the brief Downing Street communique.

TWO MEN KILLED, ONE INJURED WHEN COUPE STRIKES TRUCK

Auto Coming From Rear Struck Standing Machine at Hamel, Ill.

Two men were killed and one seriously injured when a coupe in which they were riding at 9 o'clock last night struck a standing truck of the St. Louis Bonded Hauling Co. at Hamel, Ill., on the concrete road 10 miles north of Edwardsville.

August Mull, 22 years old, a carpenter of Staunton, was killed, and Dukes Brauer, 21, also of Staunton, died about an hour after the accident when being taken to Staunton.

Neal Groves of Gillespie, owner of the automobile, was severely cut and bruised. A surgeon who attended him at Staunton said he would recover. Groves is believed to have been driving the coupe when the accident occurred.

Ben Adams, of St. Louis, operator of the truck, was held for the coroner's inquest, which will be held today. He was returning to St. Louis from Springfield and when near Hamel the engine developed trouble. Adams said he employed a mechanic at Hamel and had drained the radiator and was refilling it when the coupe came from the rear and struck the truck. Constable George C. Cassens, of Hamel, who arrested Adams, stated that witnesses had informed him that there was no tail light on the truck.

KLAN PARADE BRINGS FIGHT WITH ROCKS IN TEXAS TOWN

Several Persons Bruised and Car Windows Smashed; March Continued After Disorder.

By the Associated Press.

McKINNEY, Tex., Dec. 9.—A Ku Klux Klan parade here tonight developed at one time into a free-for-all rock-throwing fight between klansmen and men watching the parade. Several klansmen received bruised heads, it was said, and several of the unmasked participants were bruised. Windows in a passing interurban car were broken by flying missiles.

The disorder lasted but a short while. Officers succeeded quickly in quieting the paraders and other participants in the fight and the parade continued. It was estimated that 500 klansmen were in the parade.

The mask was jerked from the face of one klansman.

SENATE PAGE BARS MARSHALL

"I Used to Work Here," Former Vice President Says.

By the Associated Press.

WASHINGTON, Dec. 9.—Former Vice President Marshall visited the Capitol today, but was barred from the Senate chamber by a diminutive page boy.

"That's all right; I used to work here," Marshall said, but the page, the youngest and newest of the flock, refused to admit the former Vice President until he was properly vouched for.

CUT IN DEMAND ON GERMANY TO 30 OR 40 BILLION MARKS DISCUSSED

Bonar Law Outlines Solution Favored by Him, to Include Moratorium Sufficient for Stabilization of Mark and Opposing Any Military Action by French.

POINCARE PLEASED AT BRITISH ATTITUDE

Belgium's Plan, Presented at London Meeting, Calls for 35,000,000,000 Marks Loan in Seven Years, by All Nations.

By the Associated Press.

LONDON, Dec. 9.—Premier Bonar Law caused a sensation at the second session of the Allied Premiers today, when, in the course of his reply to M. Poincare's moratorium plan, he gave a clear indication that the British Government would be quite willing to reconsider the question of cancellation of the French debt, provided such a step was made possible by a reparations settlement satisfactory to Great Britain.

Law had previously intimated that America's insistence on payment of the British debt had made it very difficult for England to discuss remission of the French war debt.

The British Prime Minister's declarations at the afternoon meeting greatly encouraged Premier Poincare, who was extremely pasimistic early in the day over the outcome of the conversations.

While the Premiers are far from an accord as yet, it was said by the French delegation this evening that Law's pronouncement on the debt had made an agreement much more likely.

Premier Bonar Law began by saying that the Balfour note not longer existed for the British Government and that he was free to consider the whole question.

"I am prepared to reconsider the question of cancellation of debts," he went on, "if such cancellaiton would insure a settlement satisfactory to the British Government."

Poincare to Reply Today.

Poincare, although reserving his formal reply to the new suggestion until tomorrow, expressed deep pleasure at the British attitude. The British Prime Premier briefly outlined the kind of settlement he desired—a moratorium sufficient for Germany to re-establish her finances and credit and stabilize the mark, no military action of any character by the French and a reduction of the indemnity to between thirty and forty billion gold marks.

This statement is expected to have the effect of making M. Poincare more conciliatory and less inclined to talk about military measures, although he himself believes that military measures would not prove very effective.

Another new element which may help the conference developed tonight when it became known that Karl Bergman, German financial expert, had arrived in London with Chancellor Cuno's new scheme for a settlement. Herr Bergman communicated the plan to Bonar Law today who, in turn, probably will present it to the other Premiers at 11 o'clock tomorrow morning. He will submit the plan at Germany's request, and Great Britain has in no sense approved the suggestions.

The German proposal is said to embrace allied participation in German industries instead of an external loan.

The Belgian plan, Presented by Premier Theunis at the afternoon meeting, calls for a two-year moratorium for Germany and a loan to be participated in by all nations at

INTIMATION GIVEN BY CLEMENCEAU HE HAS ACHIEVED OBJECTS OF VISIT

In Final "Formal" Speech at Philadelphia, He Says He Is Certain He Has Convinced America That France Is Not Militaristic or Imperialistic Nation.

AGAIN DELIVERS HIS "PEACE MESSAGE"

Sees Liberty Bell at Independence Hall — Sits in Chair Used by John Hancock in Signing Declaration of Independence.

By the Associated Press.

PHILADELPHIA, Dec. 9.—Georges Clemenceau, the grizzled French war-time Premier, today ended his "formal" speaking mission to America before the Philadelphia Forum, in the Academy of Music, with the broad intimation that he believed he had accomplished all three purposes for which he forsook his cottage by the sea in France.

Of two of them he evinced no doubt. He was confident he had convinced America that France was not a militaristic nor an imperialistic nation. He was equally sure he had spread conviction that France intended to pay its debt to America—not immediately, perhaps, but ultimately.

He requoted a paragraph from President Harding's annual message to Congress yesterday as an indication that the third point—bringing America back to the side of France and England—also was being accomplished.

The paragraph was the President's comment on the four-Power pact which, the executive said, had brought "a new confidence in maintained peace" and which he suggested "might be made a model for like assurances, wherever in the world any common interests are concerned."

"I told your chief," Clemenceau continued, "that, when he had pondered on what I had said to him, I believe his feeling would find its way toward us. And I believe it has, but I don't know what the diplomatists will make of it."

"Peace Message" Again.

It was again his "peace message" that Clemenceau delivered to the representative audience that faced him in the gayly decked Academy of Music. But it was a plea for a peace based on France's ideals, and these ideals, he declared, France would defend to the last drop of her blood, even if she had to defend them alone.

All the five formal addresses he had made before were blended in this last of the series. Now he was the fiery "Tiger," flashing defiance against France's enemies; now, the advocate, carefully stating his case; now, an old man pleading for his native land, that she be not misunderstood.

Several times he was interrupted by applause. At the end he was given a long ovation.

Clemenceau spoke at 11 a. m., after he had been taken through crowded downtown streets to Independence Hall, the cradle of the nation's liberties, where he saw the historic Liberty Bell, and sat in the chair that John Hancock used when he signed the Declaration of Independence.

Crowds had massed about Independence Hall and he was cheered as he entered and as he left the famous old structrue.

Escorted by Famous Troop.

His escort was Philadelphia's proudest military body, the First City Troop, attired in resplendent dress uniforms of a pattern antedating the American Revolution. It was the troop which has had the honor of escorting every President who has visited Philadelphia since the days of George Washington.

Another crowd swirled about his automobile as he emerged from the Academy after he had finished his speech, and it was with difficulty that police were able to restrain enthusiasts who wanted to get a close-up view of the distinguished visitor.

The "Tiger" drove immediately to his private railroad car, on which he left at 3:28 p. m. for Chicago, where Monday he will deliver a special message to the nation's farmers at a farmers' convention.

Talks With Baruch.

Among M. Clemenceau's guests at luncheon on the car was Bernard M. Baruch, who was one of President Wilson's advisers during the peace conference in Paris. Clemenceau adn Baruch discussed economics, and it is understood that Baruch gave the former French Premier some information which he may use in his Chicago speech.

Clemenceau plans to spend tomorrow resting at Cresson, Pa., on the crest of the picturesque Allegheny Mountains, resuming his journey in the evening in time to reach Chicago Monday morning. He will speak at noon and will start for New York at 5.30 p. m. the same day, arriving at 5:28 p. m. Tuesday.

Proceeds of "Tiger's" Tour to Field Service Fellowship Fund

By the Associated Press.

WASHINGTON, Dec. 9.

IN memory of his student days in the United States, Georges Clemenceau will give the proceeds of his lecture tour to the American Field Service fund for fellowship in French and American universities. The "Tiger" today so advised Representative A. Piatt Andrew of Massachusetts, who organized and directed the American Field Service, the agency through which hundreds of young Americans gave aid to France before the United States entered the war.

When the war ended, it was decided that the names of 127 men of the field service should be perpetuated by the creation of a like number of scholarships, by which young American university men could be sent to French universities and young Frenchmen could be sent to American universities. A total fund of $3,500,000 is the object, but so far only $500,000 has been obtained and only 30 scholarships have been created. Like the Rhodes scholarships, one of the objects was to stimulate friendship between the nations.

When the field service was disbanded the fellowship fund was created to be managed under the direction of a large number of trustees, including Ambassador Jusserand, Representative Andrew, Ambassador Herrick and Paul D. Cravath of New York.

Although more than 100 requests were made of the former French Premier to give his lecture proceeds to various causes, he selected the field service, which he remembered as the agency of succor through which hundreds of young Americans risked and gave their lives for the French wounded.

In a telegram of reply, Andrew said:

"Your gift will revive among countless American youths memories of their great days in France. It will help to perpetuate that ancestral friendship between the youths of France and America which began when our country began and which we intend shall continue always."

TCHITCHERIN WARNS OF DANGER IN PLACING TRUST IN ALLIES

Turkish delegation are dissatisfied with Ismet Pasha's conciliatory policy on the Straits problem and that the Russians were trying to play upon this sentiment to their own advantage.

It Made Ismet Pasha Laugh.

When Ismet Pasha was asked tonight about the Athens report that the Grecian army would attack the Turks in Thrace if Greece was unfairly treated in Lausanne, he replied:

"That makes me laugh."

European delegates who attended the meeting of the subcommitteemen devoted to discussion of the treatment of foreigners in Turkey and the disposition of the Ottoman debt describe the attitude of the Turkish representative participating therein as recalcitrant. The question at issue before the former subcommitteemen today was the position of foreign property holders and two young deputies who recently arrived from Angora adopted an attitude which seemed to augur intransigence when the vital question of foreign powers is to be considered later. No advance was made at the session. At the meeting of the subcommitteemen on the Ottoman debt the Turks said they would refuse to accept responsibility for the entire Turkish debt contracted during the Great War, and insisted that it should be divided pro rata between Mesopotamia, Syria and those parts of Greece, Bulgaria and Jugo-Slavia which formerly belonged to Turkey.

Deadlock on Question.

The allies have announced that they cannot accept this view, and a deadlock exists on the question.

Premier Stamboulisky of Bulgaria declared today he would not present to the conference his country's demand for the right to continue compulsory military service in view of the fact that revision of the treaty of Neuilly is not being considered here. He added, however, that the Bulgarian Minister in Paris was constantly pressing the matter before the allied military and naval officials whose work is connected with the enforcement of the Versailles and related treaties.

M. Stamboulisky says Bulgaria's position is such that he must have compulsory service. He expects that the country is almost exclusively agricultural with no unemployed who might be attracted by the small wages paid to the soldiers. If there was not compulsory service there could be no army.

NAMES EX-SUITOR IN ASSAULT

Man Says Friend of Woman Companion Shot at Him.

After being shot at and then knocked down by one of two armed men in front of 3544 Washington boulevard at 10:35 o'clock last night, William Karides of 5944 Bartmer avenue, a restaurant owner, jumped to his feet and chased the two men down the street, he told policemen. But he was outdistanced in a block.

Karides said the pair stopped him and Miss Maude Martin in front of her home when they were returning from a theater. He said a former suitor of the young woman leveled a revolver at him, but he knocked the weapon in the air as a shot was fired. Karides was felled by a blow on the head, inflicted with the revolver.

BRITAIN WOULD RECONSIDER DEBT CANCELLATIONS

the rate of 5,000,000,000 gold marks per year for seven years, making a total of 35,000,000,000. This should represent the total reparations indemnity. The loan would be guaranteed by the wealth of the German republic.

References to America.

America was prominently before the conference despite the fact that none of the customary official observers was present. America's position regarding the allied debts was discussed at some length by the Premiers, who apparently agreed that any settlement of this question for at least several years would probably have to be made with the United States out of it.

There continues to be much comment over the presence here of the American Ambassadors, Houghton and Fletcher, and United States Senator McCormick. Ambassador Fletcher departed tonight for Brussels, but Houghton and Senator McCormick are remaining. It was said in well informed British quarters tonight that Great Britain wanted to invite the United States to the meeting, but M. Poincare opposed this, wishing to limit the discussions to the four allied Powers.

Allied observers are still wondering if America will make her views known during the conference. The British say that the American view coincides with theirs and is opposed to all forms of military pressure and favors a moratorium. It is said in French circles that Ambassador Harvey will see certain of the allied officials now in London. Ambassador Houghton has insisted that his visit to London at the same time as the visit of Ambassador Fletcher and Senator McCormick is a mere coincidence and that he has no instructions or plans respecting the conference.

Brief Communique.

The second session of the conference adjourned at 6:40 p. m. A brief communique was issued, stating that the decision of reparations and allied debts had been begun.

It is admitted by journalistic observers that Premier Bonar Law's policy of secrecy may be successful if he keeps the visitors away throughout ths day and invites them to dinner each evening, but it is doubted that this plan can be carried out if the conversations continue longer than the week-end.

Any Debt Cancellation Plan Must Omit United States.

Special to the Post-Dispatch.

WASHINGTON, Dec. 9. — The United States Government has no intention of intervening in the Allied-German reparations squabble. No thought has been given to an offer of mediation in the event the other Powers agree to Premier Poincare's plan to seize additional pledges.

This attitude was emphatically expressed at the State Department today.

The United States is watching carefully every development in the reparations situation, administration officials believing that a definite agreement among the Allies is of the highest importance.

At the same time officials feel that since the United States has no direct interest in the reparations payments, the problem is peculiarly one for solution by the allied Powers.

Keen interest was shown in official quarters today in the proposal that France would make a substantial cut in her reparations demands provided Great Britain forgave France's war debt. It was pointed out that the United States could not consistently back such a proposal so long as it is not in position even to reduce the debts which the allied Powers owe us. Therefore, any proposal for the cancellation of allied debts must omit the United States, since under the terms of the refunding act the Harding Administration can do nothing further than arrange for payment within a period of 25 years.

"Talk About Injustice All Nonsense."

THREE INDICTED, CHARGED WITH TEACHER'S MURDER

Former Convict's Efforts Lead to Action in Case of Kentucky Girl Who Was Slain in 1920.

HE HAD OVERHEARD TALK OF PRISONERS

Went to Scene of Crime and Found Stained Clothing in Tree; Two Negroes and an Officer Named.

Special to the Post-Dispatch.

HARLAN, Ky., Dec. 9.—Unceasing efforts of a former convict have resulted in the Harlan County grand jury returning indictments against three men, charging them with the murder, Sept. 7, 1920, of Miss Lura Parsons, Pine Mountain settlement school teacher.

Those indicted are John Marcum, prohibition agent of Winchester, who was in charge of a prison camp at the time of the murder; Jerry Reed, negro, one of the prisoners under Marcum at the camp, and now serving a term at the Frankfort Reformatory, and James Robinson, negro, another of the convicts under Marcum. He was tried for the murder shortly after the crime and acquitted. He fled from Harlan several days ago after seeing some of the convicts enter the courthouse. The murder of Miss Parsons, which shocked the entire state, apparently had dropped out of the interest of all save John Bramley, former convict. It was an unsolved mystery so far as authorities were concerned because numerous investigations led nowhere. Barmley, who was a prisoner in the Frankfort Reformatory at the time of the murder, had heard conversations, however, which the officers investigating the case strove in vain to uncover. He was at the prison when Jerry Reed was sent back from the camp, and declared he saw Reed sell the pocketbook carried by Miss Parsons to another convict. Bramley finally succeeded in getting it. Meanwhile Dr. H. C. Winnes of Cincinnati, a veterinarian, was tried for the murder.

The trial attracted state-wide attention because the veterinarian had traveled over the road taken by Miss Persons from Dilion to the Pine Mountain school. Dr. Winnes arrived, but the teacher did not. Her body with the skull crushed by a fence picket was found on a ledge by the trail a mile and a half from the prison camp. Dr. Winnes was freed in spite of the damaging testimony of Reed, one of the negroes now charged with the crime. Robinson then was tried and acquitted. Funds were raised to carry on the investigation.

Began Own Investigation.

When Bramley was freed from prison he at once set out to gather evidence in the case. Acting upon information he had gained from a conversation overheard he followed the trail from Dillon past the site of the former convict camp to the small schoolhouse.

Bramley stopped near the spot where the victim was attacked. After walking from tree to tree he found the one he sought. It was a hollow gum tree. Bramley obtained a long stick, pushed it up into the hollow and a suit of stained underwear fell down. On the clothing, in indelible ink, was the prison number of Jerry Reed. Once before Bramley had told the authorities he had valuable information concerning the murder but little attention was paid to him. This time he had more than his word. The underwear needed no identification and the pocketbook was recognized at once by the father and brother of Miss Parsons.

Secret Investigation Started.

It is said that President Harding is receiving but little encouragement from his cabinet ministers in recommending an extension of alliances, even if he contemplated stabilizing the Near East situation by so doing. It is not believed that Secretary Hughes has indicated a willingness to place himself behind a policy of this nature.

The irreconcilables will not look with more favor upon an alliance dealing with the Mediterranean situation than a compact relating to Africa. The four-Power pact slipped through the Senate because of the arguments that it protected the Hawaiian Islands, the Philippines, Guam, Yap and the commerce lanes to the Far East. But for these peculiar conditions and the undoubted interests of this country, the four-Power agreement would have been easily rejected.

Bitter-end Senators asserted today that the President should have heeded their warning and made not even his slight reference to what they describe as further entanglements.

They argue that Clemenceau immediately grasped the great significance of President Harding's reference to additional compacts. The utterance had all the force and effect of a formal recommendation to Congress, they point out, and Clemenceau at once realized that France would be the equal beneficiary of any agreement intended to stabilize conditions in the Near East and that a treaty relating to the Mediterranean would be as valuable to France as the Anglo-France-American alliance negotiated and brought home by former President Wilson.

Fear Clemenceau Misunderstood.

Senators who hold these views fear Clemenceau will go home with some degree of faith that the administration will sooner or later formally take up the arrangement of a pact to restore peace in the Mediterranean.

The more radical of the irreconcilables declare without mincing words that the League of Nations, unchanged and without reservations, would be vastly preferable to a series of compacts adjusted to meet situations in every section of the world. They contend that the four-Power pact, relating to the Pacific, marked the utmost limit to which the United States should go.

It already has been stated by Clemenceau that he will bring the suggestion of President Harding to the officials of his Government. In his concluding address here he regarded it as an "overture." This may have the effect of expediting approval of the four-Power and naval treaties, with the expectation that new negotiations will be opened.

It is realized that France would not desire partnership with Germany, but the inclusion of that country is regarded as essential in any pact for the guaranteeing of peace in Europe. Hence, a five-Power agreement as applied to Europe is the only one suggested, but any treaty to preserve peace in Europe will bring on virtually endless debate in the Senate.

SENATE RESENTS HARDING'S HINT OF FUTURE ALLIANCES

Suggestion That 4-Power Pact May Be Used as Model for Assurances Stirs Storm of Discussion.

RADICAL CHANGE IN HIS VIEWS NOTED

President, Said Now to Favor Going to Europe's Rescue —Bitter Enders Threaten Reprisals.

Post-Dispatch Bureau.
No. 20 Wyatt Building.

WASHINGTON, Dec. 9.—One brief and passing reference in President Harding's message of yesterday remarking that the four-Power pact of the earstwhile arms conference "might be made a model for like assurances wherever in the world any common interests are concerned," has succeeded in reviving another storm of discussion here as to just what is behind that simple but portentous phraseology.

The Post-Dispatch correspondent was informed from sources close to the President today of a remarkable background to that brief reference, depicting the President, first as having utterly abandoned his pre-election association of nations scheme, and having veered so far around in his views as to be at the present moment a converted champion of going to the rescue of Europe.

Added to this, however, was the account of how the most influential forces in the administration, horrified at the conversion and fearful of its political consequences, exerted their utmost pressure on him to steer clear of any such dangerous ground in his message and of how, forced to give in, he contented himself with his meager suggestion buried toward the end of the address.

Through With Powwows.

Senatorial powers, it is understood, succeeded in diverting the President from his intended course, pointing out to him that the Senate would never agree to any more proected alliances or permit him to call any more international powwows, no matter what the contemplated subject, until something tangible has come out of the arms conference.

Some of the bitter-end faction in the Senate are reported to have threatened reprisals in the form of open hostility to all of the administration's program if Mr. Harding sought to put over any policy of plunging into the European whirlpool at this late date with a four-Power pact life saver.

He was informed bluntly that the Senate, which was none too cordial to the arms conference grist as it was, subsequently, developed considerable resentment over the failure of France, in particular, to ratify the naval treaty and it would be personal folly, if not party suicide, to try now to plaster that same sort of thing on the rest of the world.

While the old guard bitter-enders thus succeeded in heading him off, they did not keep him from that mild yet strongly suggestive hint of what he would like to do, and this hint has been enough to set speculation going and hence to arouse the ire of the irreconcilables. They did a good deal of informal conferring among themselves today, pledging allegiance to each other and counting, after taking soundings, on ample support from the Lodge group of reservationists.

Getting Little Encouragement.

It is said that President Harding is receiving but little encouragement from his cabinet ministers in recommending an extension of alliances, even if he contemplated stabilizing the Near East situation by so doing. It is not believed that Secretary Hughes has indicated a willingness to place himself behind a policy of this nature.

The irreconcilables will not look with more favor upon an alliance dealing with the Mediterranean situation than a compact relating to Africa. Clause 2. Party of the second part will mind her own business almost all of the time.

Clause 3. Dutch lunches and beaux permissible; coffee essential, waffles indispensable.

The contract, according to Attorney Vollintine, was signed, sealed and delivered in the most approved legal manner.

The artist lives in New York. Mrs. Cook, said to be the widow of an oil operator, lives in New York and Baltimore.

RAIN IS AID TO FIREMEN IN QUENCHING ASTORIA FIRE

Plan "City Beautiful" to Rise From Ashes—Damage Put at Between $10,000,000 and $12,000,000.

By the Associated Press.

ASTORIA, Dec. 9.—Rain fell from the leaden skies today on the ruins of Astoria's business district, helping the firemen to quench the smouldering remnants of the blaze which yesterday wiped out the heart of this century-old city. But neither the rain nor the gloomy aspect quenched the spirit of Astoria's leading citizens, who vigorously attacked the job of rehabilitation.

The vision of a "city beautiful," to replace the one gone up in smoke was before the men who gathered to plan the reconstruction. To avoid the springing up of a "shack town," they made provision for the erection of temporary structures outside the burned area under permits issued by authority of a committee which took charge of the situation.

MUSIC FROM COAL BUNKER TRACED TO A STOWAWAY

Piccolo Player's Devotion to Playing Frightens Stokers Until They Cause Search and Disclosure.

By the Associated Press.

HOBOKEN, N. J., Dec. 9. — A weird piping coming from a coal bunker on the trans-Atlantic liner America, shocked Otto Schmidt, a coal passer, to death, so his fellow stokers insisted, when the liner arrived from Bremen today. The ship's doctor, however, said it was heart disease.

In any event, the stokers were full of the story of haunted ship. They said the "tweet, tweet" kept coming from the bunkers and they all got so frightened they appealed to the captain for action. He investigated and as a result a stowaway who has aspirations to play the piccolo in the opera orchestra here was brought to the deck. His ambition was so great, he said, he could not resist the temptation to practice. He is going back.

WOMAN AND FOUR CHILDREN BURN TO DEATH IN HOME

ELDORADO, Kan., Dec. 9.—Mrs. C. C. Cotton and her four small children were burned to death tonight at Haver Hill, 12 miles south of here, according to a report reaching here. When Cotton returned to his home from a trip to Augusta he found his wife outside the house dead with her clothing burned from her body. The house was burning and the cries of the children could be heard. They were dead when he fought his way through the flames and carried them out.

E. MONT REILY OBTAINS LEAVE FROM PORTO RICO

Executive, Leaving on Own Initiative, May Not Return, Rumor States.

Post-Dispatch Bureau.
No. 20 Wyatt Bldg.

WASHINGTON, Dec. 9.—At his own request, E. Mont Reily, Governor of Porto Rico, is coming to the United States on leave of absence, sailing Dec. 12. In making this announcement today Secretary of War Weeks said that Gov. Reily is making the trip entirely upon his own initiative. He asked for leave for four or five weeks. Asked whether Gov. Reily would have any difficulty in obtaining an indefinite extension of his leave, Weeks declined to make any comment. No surprise would be occasioned here if Gov. Reily does not return to his post.

John B. Huyke, Commissioner of Education, has been appointed Acting Governor by President Harding, to serve during Reily's absence or until a new governor is sent to Porto Rico. Commissioner Huyke is a native of Porto Rico, but a supporter of Reily. Under the law the President is required to designate a member of the Governor's cabinet as acting governor during the latter's absence from Porto Rico.

Resident Commissioner DaVila of Porto Rico, expressed satisfaction at the news that Gov. Reily is leaving the island.

He is of the opinion that the vacation will be made permanent. DaVila has been fighting Reily from the outset of the governor's administration. Some weeks ago, he threatened to impeach Reily from the floor of the House, stating that he has strong evidence of serious offenses committed by the Governor. DaVila has said nothing on this score recently, which gives rise to the belief that he has held his peace under some sort of "gentleman's agreement that Reily would be withdrawn gracefully."

NEGRO LYNCHED FOR SHOOTING DEPUTY SHERIFF IN ARKANSAS

Special to the Post-Dispatch.

WASHINGTON, Dec. 9.—A delegation representing levee districts of Southeast Missouri is in Washington to ask for continuation of Government aid in flood control work on the Mississippi. The $45,000,000 appropriation under which this work has been carried on for last seven or eight years will be exhausted next year. The need for new funds, it is pointed out, has been intensified by the damage by the recent flood.

Arrangements have been made for the delegation to appear Monday before the Flood Control Committee of the House. Its members are L. T. Berthe, Hugh McPheeters and R. A. Barry, from Levee District No. 1, with headquarters at Charleston, and Julius Misfeldt and Albin Anderson, of the Scott County District.

CHOIR SINGER GETS VERDICT

Charged U. R. Conductor Beat Him for Entering by Exit Door.

Roy E. Russell of Webster Groves, a church choir singer and student at Washington University, yesterday obtained a jury verdict for $7500 in Circuit Judge Fahrnbainer's court against the United Railways for injuries resulting from his being thrown off a Grand boulevard car at Chouteau avenue on May 21, 1921. It was alleged that Russell was forcibly ejected by the conductor because he entered the car through the exit passage. Russell said he was beaten and kicked by the conductor. He sued for $40,000.

The street car company's defense was that no conductor had reported the occurrence; also that it had been granted permission by the State Public Service Commission to designate entrance and exit doors for passengers.

FAMOUS SCULPTOR IN HOME FOR AGED

Johannes Gelert Without Funds on Seventieth Birthday—Too Many Works "for Love."

By Leased Wire From the New York Bureau of the Post-Dispatch.

NEW YORK, Dec. 9.—Johannes Sophus Gelert, Sculptor, Born Schleswig, Denmark, Dec. 10, 1852.

This is an entry in "Who's Who" followed by a closely packed half column record of artistic achievement and recognition, both in America and Europe.

The man about whom it was written will spend his seventieth birthday tomorrow as an inmate of the Danish Home for the Aged, in Brooklyn.

Gelert came to America in 1887, after having exhibited successfully in European salons. He has executed many important commissions here within the last 35 years, among them being the statue of Denmark on the customs house in New York, the Haymarket Statue, in Chicago, the statues of Hans Christian Andersen and of Beethoven in Lincoln Park there, and a series of statues representing Roman civilization, made for the Brooklyn Institute of Arts and Sciences. He became an American citizen in 1892.

Had to Close Studio.

A memorandum of his birthday, made by one of his compatriots who admired his genius, led to a search for his address today, and the discovery that the old sculptor, poor, feeble and partly paralyzed, after a long and losing fight to keep his independence, had been obliged to close his studio and enter the Danish home.

One reason, Gelert smilingly told a correspondent of the Post-Dispatch today, was that he created too many of his works "for love."

"I suppose I have done 300 which never brought me a cent," he said. "Others, which brought me much praise from critics, I was obliged to sell for very little. I have often wondered how a work could be exhibited in many cities in America and Europe, and bring me gold medals and all sorts of recognition and yet nobody would even ask its price. I have so many that I am at a loss to know how to clear them out. I cannot keep them here; there is no place for them," he added, glancing round the tiny room in the Danish home which he shares with another old man.

Right Arm Paralyzed.

Three years ago Gelert's right arm was attacked by creeping paralysis. It is now almost entirely helpless. He struggled to work in spite of it and his last piece, a memorial tablet to the Rev. Thomas Slicer, unveiled last January in All Souls' Unitarian Church, was executed entirely with his left hand.

Gelert has a wife, two sons and a daughter, living in East Orange, N. J. He declined to say why he is not with them, and they could not be found. Danish friends, who recently learned of Gelert's condition, will visit him tomorrow with remembrances.

ILLINOIS ANTISALOON LEAGUE TO MOVE ITS HEADQUARTERS

Change From Mt. Vernon to East St. Louis—Harding Answers Charge of Lax Enforcement.

Special to the Post-Dispatch.

MT. VERNON, Ill., Dec. 9.—The headquarters of the Illinois Anti-Saloon League, here since March 1, 1920, will be moved to East St. Louis, Jan. 1, Leo Howard, in charge of the local office, has been notified. Prohibition enforcement headquarters is in East St. Louis.

Howard recently wrote to President Harding, protesting against alleged lax enforcement of the prohibition laws, and the appointment of enforcement agents with a view to political services, instead of "men whose hearts are in the work." The following was received in reply, under date of Dec. 4:

"The White House,
Washington, D. C.

"My dear Mr. Howard: The President has seen your letter of Dec. 1, and directs me to say to you in reply that the Federal Government is deeply interested in making more effective the enforcement of the prohibition laws.

"Sincerely yours,

Billikens Name Quirk As Captain

Tackle, Who Will Play His Last Year of Collegiate Football in 1923, Is Honored at Banquet.

22 ATHLETES ARE AWARDED LETTERS

Notre Dame Game Is Only One Officially Announced —Dallas Would Meet St. Louis in Texas.

Leo Quirk, the roly-poly tackle, who has one more year of collegiate football, was elected captain of the 1923 St. Louis University eleven, at a meeting of the members of the Billiken eleven at a banquet tendered the team last night by the Missouri Council of the Knights of Columbus and the Student Conclave of the university.

Quirk, who was one of the stars of the 1922 team, succeeds Quarterback Eggler as captain.

Coach O'Rourke made a talk on tradition. It also was brought out that no eleven is stronger than its alumni and the alumni was urged to work with the authorities in building up a team.

Letters were awarded to 22 St. Louis University football players for play during the 1922 football season. Thirteen freshmen received the numerals emblematic of yearling service. A letter was also voted to Student Manager John Murphy.

Those who received letters are as follows: Betz, Geraghty, Kalkman, Thornton, McCarthy, Quirk, Schwartz, Dolan, Avis, Kelly, Halloran, Roche, McConachie, O'Leary, McKenzie, Quigley, Hannegan, Klausner, Schaeffering, Quinn, Eggler, Grennan, Manager Murphy.

The Freshmen who received numerals are: Ramacciotti, McMonagle, Tegethoff, O'Toole, Russell, McTernan, Starck, DeNoya, Riley, Kinder, Tibi, Nienan, Rousseau.

The Billiken authorities have not completed the 1923 schedule of the Blue and White school and did not announce any dates with the exception of the Thanksgiving card against Notre Dame. But one of the athletic officers of the Billikens made the significant remark that the St. Louis University will attempt to wipe out the defeats incurred by the Billikens during 1922 by victories over the conquerors in the 1923 campaign. This indicates that the Billikens will attempt to book Missouri and Grinnell.

There is a strong movement on hand at the school to bring the Michigan Aggies back to St. Louis next season. The team went to a 7—7 draw Thanksgiving and there seems a probability that the Aggies will be invited for a November game next year.

It is likely that the Blue and White will journey to foreign parts for at least one game. Dallas University has invited the Billiken team to show in the Texas City sometime during the coming year. Whether this offer will be accepted or some other date arranged has not been definitely settled. It is likely that the Billikens will book the out-of-town date for Nov. 17, leaving the local field clear for the Missouri-Washington contest. This has been the policy of the Blue and White in former years, when the Tigers appeared against the Piker team.

MUNICIPAL BODY WILL HOLD AMATEUR BOXING SHOW AT ARMORY DEC. 27

The suppression of professional boxing in St. Louis has worked to the direct advantage of the amateurs. It has been many years since such interest has been displayed in the younger boxers.

With a view to selecting a team to represent this city in the National A. A. U. tournament at Boston in April, the Municipal Athletic Association will hold its second meet at the Armory on the night of Dec. 27. Three and possibly more amateurs will be brought here from Indianapolis to furnish added attractions.

Raymond Hahn, the Indianapolis lightweight, who won from Joe Moore here in the last Municipal show, will return for a match with Charlie Woods of the St. Louis A. C. Eddie Kaiser, 112 pounds, a brother of Johnny Mulholland, Indianapolis, featherweight, will be pitted against a local boxer.

Entries for the event may be made through Rodowe Abeken, room 330 Municipal Courts Building.

Eleven Nebraska Men Placed on All-Star Valley Football Teams

Cornhuskers Gain Four Places on First Squad and Seven on Second—Washington Fails to Earn Position on Either Team, Though Thumser Gets Honorable Mention.

The selection of an All-Star football team of the Missouri Valley Conference by the coaches of the nine institutions represented, divides the honor of positions on the first team among players from Nebraska, Drake, Missouri, Kansas Aggies and Oklahoma.

Iowa State, Grinnell, Kansas and Washington failed to place on the first eleven, although players from these colleges ranked on the second team and received honorable mention.

The Nebraska Cornhuskers, conquerors of Notre Dame and generally acknowledged champions of the valley on the strength of five Conference victories and no defeats, are honored by four places on the mythical eleven. Sheerer, an end; Weller, a tackle; Peterson, center, and Hartley, fullback, are the selections.

Requests to name an all-star team were sent to the nine coaches in the conference. Coach Dawson of Nebraska declined to pick an eleven; Coach Bachman of Kansas Aggies could not be reached and Coach Rider of Washington, not having seen Nebraska or Kansas in action this year, did not include those two teams in his consideration of an all-star squad.

Therefore the selection of Hartley and Weller of Nebraska was virtually unanimous, each getting six votes possible, with only six coaches considering Nebraska. Hahn and Bunker received six votes out of a possible seven.

Drake University of Des Moines, which has a legitimate claim to share the Conference title with Nebraska, based on four victories and no reverses, is awarded three places. Denton, guard; Orebaugh, quarterback, and Boelter, halfback, are the three members of the Bulldogs selected.

The two Missouri University players elected are Bunker, guard, and Lincoln, halfback. Marsh, Oklahoma's captain and star end, was awarded the other wing position.

Perhaps the relative strength of the various elevens in the Conference is better reflected by the selections for the second all-star team. On this eleven, which, on the gridiron would probably prove as strong as the first, Nebraska is given no less than seven positions. This gives the Cornhuskers a total of 11 places on the two teams, and clearly indicates the wealth of material at Coach Dawson's disposal.

The other four positions are divided among Ames, Oklahoma, Kansas Aggies and Grinnell. Norelius of Grinnell, chosen as center on the second eleven, was the choice of several coaches for center of the first team, but Nebraska's candidate, Peterson, received one more vote and consequently is given the preference.

"Baldy" Thumser of Washington received honorable mention in the backfield, as did McAdams, Kansas; Whitehill, Grinnell, and Stark of the Kansas Aggies. Linemen who received honorable mention are: Black and Higgens, Kansas; Lingenfelter, Drake; Smith and Lewis, Missouri; Sebring, Kansas Aggies, and Nichols, Grinnell.

Siki Now Willing To Meet Carpentier "For Glory Only".

By the Associated Press.

PARIS, Dec. 9.

BATTLING SIKI has accepted challenge for a return match with Georges Carpentier, conditional upon his reinstatement by the French Boxing Federation. He says he is willing to fight "for glory only," thus waiving all the money demands for which he has hitherto held out.

In sporting circles, however, it is generally conceded that the fight cannot possibly take place until the boxing federation has completed its investigation of Siki's charges that he had to agree to a "frame-up" in order to get Carpentier into the ring the first time.

Offers for the privilege of staging the return bout are coming from promoters in all parts of France, but they are not taken seriously by the newspaper experts, who point out that the promoters are risking little in offering millions at this time, with everything hanging on the outcome of the Federation's investigation.

BATTLING SIKI REFUSES TO APPEAR BEFORE INVESTIGATING BOARD

By the Associated Press.

PARIS, Dec. 9.—Battling Siki refused to appear before the Investigating Committee appointed by the French Boxing Federation which held its first session today in an attempt to clear up the Carpentier-Siki frameup charges. The Senegalese, through his counsel, sent a letter to the committee saying that inasmuch as the federation had already taken away from him his license and title of champion without giving him a hearing, thus placing him under the necessity of suing them before the courts, he failed to see why they should ask to hear him now; it might cause prejudice to the legal actions which would be heard by a tribunal.

The committee will hold its next meeting on Tuesday.

Zbyszko, Who Wrestles Lewis Here Thursday for the Title, Has Lost Only 3 of 2000 Bouts

Pole, Whose Exact Age Is Unknown, Because of "Doctored" Records When He Was a Boy, Was Defeated by Gotch in Historic Contest and Twice by Present Champion.

From a Special Correspondent of the Post-Dispatch.

CHICAGO, Ill., Dec. 9.—The secret of Stanislaus Zbyszko's age is still a secret and probably always will be. Even the Pole himself doesn't know it. At least that's what Jack Herman, manager for the heavyweight wrestler, declares.

Herman has "Ole Zib" matched with Strangler E. Lewis for the world's title next Thursday in St. Louis and the age old age question is agitating local fans.

Zbyszko hails from Poland, which at the time of his birth was a sort of adopted child to either Russia or Germany. Military training was compulsory and the Poles to keep from serving in what they looked upon as an enemy army would bribe officials to hide birth records or else alter them, sometimes making a difference of as much as 10 years. Russia and Germany, both made a practice then of inducting boys into service at the tender age of 15 or 16 years. If a Polish family succeeded in cheating five or six years in the records, its particular son might not be called until he was well of age.

Probably About 48 Years Old.

According to Herman, that's what happened to Zbyszko, but the rub comes in the fact that neither Zbyszko, nor his parents ktpt a record of just how many years they dropped off his life. The Poles' passport and birth certificate, which were taken from the supposedly doctored records, show him to be 43 years of age, hence right now he is really somewhere between 48 and 53.

Regardless of the age, those years have seen a highly colorful career. Manager Herman figures Stanley has engaged in more than 2000 matches, counting numerous exhibitions. Real honest to goodness contests number more than 1200 and in all of that time he has lost only three matches.

Ed. Lewis beat him twice and Frank Gotch once. It was from Lewis that he won the heavyweight crown and it was Lewis, who took it away from him. He beat the Strangler in New York, met him again in Wichita and lost it. They wrestled a few months later at Kansas City and again the Pole lost. Gotch's match with Old Zib is a mat classic. Frank reached out as though to shake hands; instead he grabbed the Pole's foot, clamped on the toe hold, fractured the ankle and it was all over.

Narrow Escape During War.

Zbyszko almost lost his life during the late war. It caught him during a visit to his old home and he was taken prisoner by the Russians. Several times he was tossed into the ring with Russian strong men and informed that if he lost, his life would be the penalty. Zybszko is still here, which is proof of the result.

To call him a marvel is putting it mildly. On his return to this country several years ago, the Pole's weight had increased to 290 pounds. He mapped out a daily routine of training which he has stuck to religiously. When he met Gobar here the other day, he was down to 224 pounds. That Gobar match proved to Chicagoans that his age hasn't made any inroads on his strength. Anyway, the Hindu weighs 260 pounds, but Zbyszko actually raised him six feet into the air and slammed him into the mat. He won the fall in less than three minutes.

The Pole is a highly educated fellow, having graduated at law. He started to practice, but found the elusive dollar answered his call more readily when he went after it with brawn, not brain.

Lewis adherents say Strangling Ed has the sign on the Pole. The Pole's backers assert Zbyszko wasn't right, that he was suffering from a mild attack of "flu" when he lost both of his matches to Lewis.

John Contos, the Greek who is promoting this match, is known here, but not as a promoter. He was a restaurant employe and apparently had never mingled with the supposedly affluent promoting class. He, however, has staged matches in Moline and Pittsburg.

Ruction With Landis Passes as Result of Meeting Place Switch

American League Owners Will Attend Gathering Called by Commissioner for Next Thursday at New York.

By Leased Wire From New York Bureau of Post-Dispatch.

NEW YORK, Dec. 9.—With Ban Johnson, president of the American League, satisfied to come to this city for the annual meeting of the junior league, the promised war between the A. L. and Kenesaw Mountain Landis, commissioner of baseball, has passed. Johnson originally called the A. L. meeting for Chicago, Dec. 13, a day before the joint gathering called by Judge Landis.

Then Johnson had a change of heart. He decided that the A. L. moguls would gather in the Windy City, Dec. 12.

That would have made it hard for the magnates to reach this city in time for the joint meeting called by Commissioner Landis and pressure was brought to bear on Johnson. So yesterday the A. L. head transferred the meeting to this city. All of which means that once again harmony prevails in baseball circles, at least as far as the majors are concerned.

Four Meetings This Week.

This city next week will have its fill of baseball meetings. They are as follows: International, Monday; National, Tuesday and Wednesday; American, Wednesday, and Joint meeting on Thursday.

However, the big interest is not in what the magnates do. Baseball followers are not thrilled by the politics of the national pastime. They want to know who is going to play with this or that club. Player trades that may come are as follows:

Eddie Collins of the White Sox will play with the Yanks if Miller Huggins can get him. "Hug" likes the idea of Collins as a Yank, but is only hoping that a deal can be arranged.

Edd Roush won't come to the Giants. The famous holdout center fielder of the Cincinnati Reds probably will land with the Cubs or Pirates.

Mike Gonzales, former Giant catcher, may get a job with the Yanks Whether he does or not all depends on whether Huggins makes a deal that will send one of the catchers he now has (not Schang) away from the Yanks.

McGraw Is After Pitcher.

John McGraw will be on hand at the meeting of the National League to see if he can get an unwary manager to let him have a good pitcher. If he gets even one he will consider the world's champions "set" for the campaign of 1923.

The Cincinnati club has a 10-day option on Rube Benton, the former left-hand star of the Giants, and Tom Sheehan, both with the St. Paul club. Several American League clubs tried to get Benton after the A. A. season closed, but were warned off by Ban Johnson, who didn't like his record. Apparently what Johnson says doesn't go with Garry Herrmann any more.

Charles H. Ebbets of the Brooklyn club was accused of trying "to peddle" Zach Wheat at Louisville because the star outfielder asks a big increase in salary. The chances are that the Brooklyn captain will land with another National League club before the springtime.

Wilbert Robinson, manager of the Brooklyns, is looking for a pitcher, catcher, first baseman, second baseman, shortstop and two outfielders. Outside of that he is O. K. in the matter of players.

Miller Huggins on Hand.

Getting back to the Yankees, Miller Huggins arrived in town today. He said:

"I like Collins and would like to have him on our ball club. But I don't know whether it can be done. I simply hope. I don't know who will be given for him, for I don't know what the other fellows have asked. Kerr, I think, is out of the question, for he played a lot of ball with outlaw players. I would like to get an infielder and outfielder and Jake May, that lefthander from Vernon. Then we would be all ready."

At a meeting of the New York Chapter of the Baseball Writers' Association in this city today, the organization went on record in a series of resolutions to the effect that the .400 batting average recently credited to Ty Cobb of the Detroit club by President B. Johnson of the American League should not be recognized in official record publications.

The Man Who Puts the Phillies Through Their Paces Usually Ends Up by Getting the Gate Himself

Davis' Nomination Boosts Chance of St. Louis Net Body

Officials Figure It Will Aid Them in Obtaining Clay Court Title Tourney.

TO RAISE $3000 FUND

Money Will Be Obtained by Selling Season Tickets for Championship Event.

By Davison Obear.

The St. Louis District Tennis Association is raising a guarantee fund of $3000 to defray expenses of the national clay court tennis championship if it is awarded to this city. The United States Lawn Tennis Association at its annual meeting in February awards all national title events.

At a meeting of the District Executive Committee last night it was decided to proceed with plans for raising the fund. Over 300 tennis players and officials will be asked to assist the organization in its efforts.

The fund will be raised under the direction of Roland M. Hoerr, secretary of the Missouri Valley Tennis Association and member of the local district committee. During the coming week books of application will be distributed to 40 men who will interview other tennis enthusiasts.

The plan is unique as it has probably not been tried by any other city seeking the clay court event. Each person will be asked to sign an application which provides an agreement to purchase at least one season ticket for the tournament at a cost of $5. The agreement stipulates that the purchase is effective only in case the tournament is awarded to St. Louis. Persons are privileged to purchase more than one ticket if they desire.

$1500 Already Pledged.

The plan is in the nature of an advance sale and it is hoped that at least the $3000 will be raised before January 15. No money will be required at this time and no person will be obliged to guarantee any funds other than mentioned in the application. Purchasers will be given the choice of reserved seats. Tennis enthusiasts desiring applications are requested to get in touch with Roland M. Hoerr, 1416 Central National Bank Building.

Nearly $1500 of the guarantee fund has been pledged by members of the Executive Committee of the District Association and other tennis officials.

At its annual meeting last January the district obdy voted to apply for the clay court event. During the past season a large amount of preliminary work has been done. The local association is being greatly assisted by the Missouri Valley and other tennis organizations.

Last July the district sent five players to take part in the tourney at Indianapolis. These players were coached by Wray Brown and Karl Kaufmann of the Washington University team. President Lynn and Dr. Rice, treasurer, also made the trip to get pointers on how to conduct the tournament.

Davis' Nomination Helps.

Dwight F. Davis, C. Drummond Jones and Dempster Godlove spent considerable time in the East last summer advocating St. Louis as the place for the 1923 tournament. Several sectional delegates have also agreed to support this city.

The plan to obtain the tournament was given a big boost when Dwight F. Davis was nominated as president of the U. S. Lawn Tennis Association.

In an interview last night, President Lynn of the District Association said: "We are greatly pleased that Dwight Davis has been nominated for the highest honor in American tennis. It will help our chances for obtaining the clay court tournament.

"The selection not only recognizes St. Louis but the Central West. Heretofore the president of the national association has been selected from an Eastern city. The Nominating Committee has appreciated the work of the Missouri Valley Tennis Association and its members as well as giving honor to a St. Louisan who donated the world's greatest tennis prize, the Davis Cup.

"If Davis is elected and we are awarded the clay court event this city will have the greatest tennis season in history. Should the tournament be played here we expect to obtain the entry of high ranking players from every section of the country."

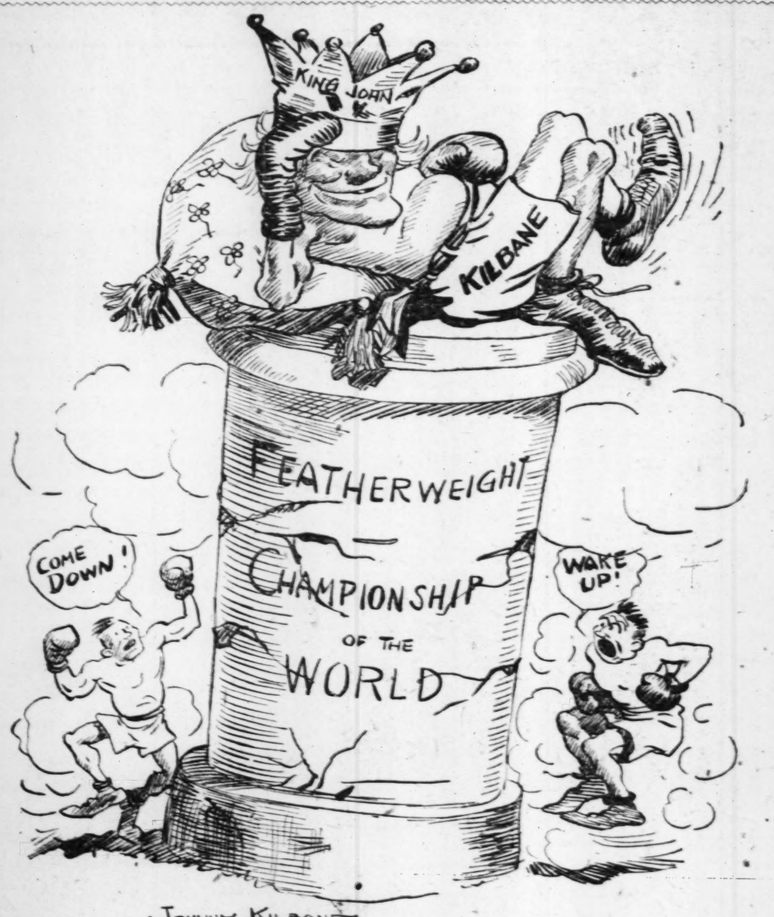
A Meaningless Title — By Edgren



JOHNNY KILBANE REFUSES TO BE DISTURBED AS LONG AS THE OLD PEDESTAL STANDS.

Kilbane Now Is the Only Fossil Holding a Boxing Championship

Interest in the Featherweight Class Will Be Restored When Johnny Is Knocked Off His Safety First Pedestal by a Fighter Willing to Defend His Crown, Edgren Writes.

By Robert Edgren.

(Copyright, 1922.)

Johnny Kilbane is the only ring fossil still holding a championship. One by one, the rest of the old timers have been pushed out of the way by younger and more active rivals. Which is a very good thing for boxing.

Kilbane won the featherweight championship from Attell in 1912, taking the decision at the end of a 20-round bout. Attell was a ring fossil himself at that time. He had been clinging to the championship for years by fighting a great number of no-decision bouts.

But Attell, when he was good, had the one virtue of being able to fight and unafraid to fight anyone in or out of his class. His favorite amusement was fighting Battling Nelson, and anyone who fought Bat in those days was up against a tough game.

Kilbane was a better boxer than Attell, and he could fight when he wanted to. Kilbane never had any sign of a reckless streak in his makeup. After winning the championship he fought a lot of the best men in the country, but when up against a rugged opponent contented himself with using all his rare speed and skill to win on points.

In the early days of his career as champion Kilbane was a great boxer. He knocked out a number of fairly good featherweights, but when there was a decision at stake he was very careful. Johnny Dundee, then a youngster and coming fast, fought Kilbane 20 rounds to a draw, and Joe Mandot, a clever and dangerous youngster, drew with him in 12 rounds.

Later Kilbane cut out decision fighting entirely. In '16 he made a spurt, stung by much criticism of his playing-safe methods, and fought George Chaney in a decision battle, knocking Chaney out in the third round.

He knocked out Patsy Cline and Willie Jackson in the same year. In '17 Kilbane took a chance again by meeting Benny Leonard in a no-decision bout in Philadelphia. Decision or no decision, there was risk in meeting Leonard. Benny knocked Kilbane out in three rounds.

John Refused to Risk Title.

Since that time Kilbane has done no real fighting and has avoided meeting Johnny Dundee and all other challengers who might give him trouble.

Johnny is now in his thirty-fourth year, has grown gray and has put on weight, so that there is some doubt he could compete as a featherweight, but he still clings to the title. He has made a fortune in the ring, and has increased it through good business investments. He has no ambition to be an active champion. He should either retire or meet his challengers, and he will do neither. This has caused stagnation in the featherweight class and few good new featherweights are being developed. There is little interest in featherweights because the class has no active champion.

Another poor champion is Johnny Wilson, who still holds the middleweight title simply because he has dodged meeting any one of half a dozen middleweights who could take it away from him. Wilson isn't quite a ring fossil yet.

He might be able to fight a little if he had the courage to risk his title in a real contest. It was only a little over two years ago that he beat Mike O'Dowd in a 12-round decision bout in Boston, winning the championship. He is 29 years old.

Dempsey's Idleness Forced.

The heavyweight class has one of its greatest champions in Jack Dempsey, who is unfortunate in not being able to find opponents to meet him. Several heavyweights who would take a chance are barred by various boxing commissions on the ground that the matches would be one-sided.

Dempsey will probably meet Harry Wills, the 220-pound black challenger, next July, in a decision bout.

Benny Leonard has been anything but a fossil champion among the lightweights. At one time or another since he knocked out Freddy Welsh in 1917, Leonard has fought nearly every top-notch lightweight in the country. He has knocked most of them out. Only one man has given Benny real trouble—Lew Tendler of Philadelphia.

Jack Britton Fought 'Em All.

Jack Britton was nearly in the fossil class when he was beaten by Mickey Walker a few weeks ago. He had skill and speed, but lacked a champion's punch. Britton had held the title for four years and had claimed it years before that. He was 37 years old and had been fighting for 18 years. Britton was a real champion. He never dodged anyone.

Another ring fossil was displaced when game Johnny Buff went down under the flying fists of Pancho Villa, the Filipino. Buff hadn't held his championship title very long, but he was old in years. He was a veteran when he became champion.

It's only fair to Buff, however, to add that sickness put him out of the championship class, more than age. He had barely recovered from an attack of "flu" when he lost the world's bantam title to Joe Lynch, and was still weak and lacking in stamina when he was beaten by Villa.

Villa is fresh enough. He was just a few days over 18 when he won the championship, which made him one of the youngest American champions on record.

Scullins Likely to Beat Hoovers

Feature Game of Soccer Double-Header a Test of Defense.

Two teams that have proven themselves wonderful defensive units, but, at the same time, most unreliable scoring machines, the Scullins and Hoovers, will meet at High School Field this afternoon in the feature game of the St. Louis Soccer League double-header.

The first game, between the Ben Millers and the Bulcks, will be started at 2 p. m. Halves will be of 30 minutes each.

On past performance, the Scullins should win. There is little to choose between the defensive elements of the Scullins and Hoovers. Bartnett excels Oellerman in goal; Brady and Bentley are a shade better than Pepper and Daley, and Nolan, Zarchel and Hennessey more reliable than Vaughn, Schweppe and White, but not so far superior as to make the affair lopsided.

In the forward line, the Scullins are far ahead of their rivals of today. There is not the semblance of teamwork in the play of the Hoover forward line except for an occasional flash by Diederichsen and Fitzgerald, a really forceful combination. Jimmy McCaffrey's judgment at centerforward has recently been anything but good, whereas Schwarz of the Scullins is noted for his cool deliberation in feeding his wings and in directing the forward moves.

If the Hoovers escape defeat it will probably be due to the excellent defensive play of the backs and not to the scoring proclivities of the forwards.

Under the management of Walter Devoy, some changes are anticipated in the lineup of the Millers and, if the defense of the eleven can be strengthened, they will be real contenders. They can score frequently enough, but have allowed their opponents even more freedom in this very important department of the game.

The Scullins and Hoovers are tied for the league lead.

Pikeway Quintet Will Have First Test Thursday

Washington Basketball Squad to Scrimmage Against Scott Field Aviators.

Followers of Coach Clarence Applegran's Pikeway basketeers will have their first opportunity to estimate the Red and Green court prospects this year when the Pikers have their informal scrimmage workout at Francis Gymnasium Thursday night with the Scott Field quintet. It will be a practice workout which only university students and those immediately interested in the two squads will witness.

Like the Pikers, the Aviators are still in the early stages of development and are giving most of their time to fundamentals. The team, consequently, has played no games yet. However, the Scott Field outfit should be able to furnish the Pikers some stiff competition, for many of the players on the squad were formerly members of college teams.

Coach Applegran has been drilling his men regularly and should have them in good shape by Thursday. Beginning tomorrow, he will begin to instruct them in some of the finer points of team play. Up to now, all the practice sessions have been devoted to elementals.

Gradual Conditioning Process.

The workouts have consisted mainly in drills on short and long passes, dribbling, quick turns and pivots, shooting and general handling of the ball. Much attention has been given by the coach to gradually rounding the men into shape and conditioning them for the strenuous schedule ahead.

In spite of the fact that many of the Pikers played football regularly this fall before coming out for basketball, it was soon discovered that being in condition for football and being in condition for basketball are not quite the same thing. The players have to accustom themselves to breathing in action indoors and care has to be taken to accustom the feet to the hard floor.

The Pikers will probably oppose the Aviators without the services of their star and captain, "Baldy" Thumser. Thumser suffered a severe muscle bruise on his shoulder during the Thanksgiving day football game. He has practiced with the team every day, but only for a short period and not in scrimmage. He may see action for a part of the contests with the Cadets, but Coach Applegran will probably use him only a little while in order to save him for the Pikers' opening game the following Saturday with Illinois.

Stars Injured on Gridiron.

Two other basketball stars suffered injuries toward the close of the football season which will keep them off the court for several weeks. Ralph Walsh broke an anklebone in the Missouri game and is still hobbling about on crutches. It will be at least five or six weeks before he can attempt to play. He may be lost for the season.

Frank Greene also hurt his anklebone in the early stages of the Turkey day scrap with the Sooners, and is not expected to be able to play basketball for several weeks.

Coach Applegran is somewhat puzzled over the conduct of Maury Cristal, regular center on the team last year. Cristal, who is known to his mates as "Dynamite," because of his natural disinclination to dispense energy, has not yet shown up at practice or made known his intentions to try for the team. Cristal is a good man when in condition and an excellent shot when on his game.

BOWLING

Blouin and Smith Start 60-Game Title Match at Chicago, Saturday—K. of C. League Reserves Eight Alleys at A. B. C. Tourney.

For the third time this season Jimmy Blouin, the Blue Island star, will defend his title as world's individual champion. Blouin, who already has defeated Phil Wolf and Mort Lindsey, this time will face Jimmy Smith, the Milwaukee star. Smith for many years was considered the world's champion. The dates for the match are Dec. 16, 17, 18 and 19, and the Randolph alleys, Chicago, the scene of action. A total of 60 games will be bowled.

This should result in one of the best matches of the entire season. Blouin has already defeated the Milwaukee star in a special match and then finished ahead in the world's title tourney in the Windy City last spring.

That Smith is rolling good tenpins is evinced by his scores in the intercity doubles match against Chicagoans, by his work in the Middle West tourney, when he averaged better than 200 for nine games, and in a match against George Herzog, a Racine star, against whom he rolled 224, 279, 235, 210 and 300 for an average of 249 3-5. Blouin, in defeating Lindsey recently, averaged better than 200 for 6% games.

K. of C. Bowlers to Organize.

Four officials of the Knights of Columbus Bowling League, including President L. Hoffman and Secretary Tom Carroll, will go to Milwaukee Dec. 17 with the idea of forming a permanent K. of C. bowling association. This organization would have jurisdiction over all national and special tournaments, and also league competition.

St. Louis will be a bidder for the 1923 rolling of the national K. of C. tournament.

The Knights of Columbus League has reserved eight alleys at the American Bowling congress tournament to be rolled at Milwaukee for March 22, next. Present plans are to take 20 teams to the Wisconsin city to bowl against K. of C. quintets of Milwaukee.

Soutar Defeats Englishman for Racquet Title

American, Bald-Headed and Short, Takes Seven Out of Eleven Games.

MEN ARE PROFESSIONALS

Charles Williams, the Challenger, Held World's Championship in 1913.

By Leased Wire From the New York Bureau of the Post-Dispatch.

NEW YORK, Dec. 9.—Just to show that he is a real champion, and that he is in a class by himself when it comes to playing racquets, J. J. "Jock" Soutar of Philadelphia retained the world's professional title by winning the first four games of the second half of his championship match with Charles Williams of England at the Racquet and Tennis Club here this afternoon.

Soutar, moving his short legs around the massive-looking slate court and occasionally rubbing his hand over his bald head, defeated his dark-haired and slender English challenger by a score of 15—9, 15—0, 15—8, 15—5. As Soutar won three out of the seven games in Philadelphia last week, he retains his crown by a score of 7 games to 4.

The decisive way in which Soutar outplayed, outgeneraled and outdrove Williams came more or less of a shock to the gallery, which numbered a few over a hundred. The visitor from England was fairly bewildered by the Tildenlike service of the champion, and there was never a question of supremacy after the match got under way.

Former Champion.

Back in 1913 Williams was the kingpin of the racquet players. Soutar challenged him and the first half of the match was played in London. Williams won four out of six games, just as he did today. In fact, not once during the match did the expression on his face change. His business is playing racquets and the kind that he exhibited today was of the unbeatable variety.

Williams, being the challenger, was the first to make his appearance. He came into the court with a can of resin in his right hand and a bundle of racquets under his left arm. After testing out his stroke he disappeared and then the champion sauntered out. Williams was the more impressive, but when the match began the Englishman was a trifle nervous.

His nervousness became more evident after the second game in which the champion in his wizard-like way ran off 15 points and won a love game. After this game Williams went to the front wall of the court for a new racquet, and while on his way began snapping his fingers.

Soutar began serving and right at the outset of the match he scored a service ace, Williams missing the ball. The Englishman scored a placement on his serve, but after that was outplayed all the way and was helpless before the terrific service of the champion. So furious was the service of the champion that he won the second game in four hands. On his second service alone he tallied eleven straight points. Williams drove the little white ball into the tell-tale no less than five times. The Englishman was all at sea in this game and his stroke was weak.

Williams on Defense.

The champion never slackened his pace and kept Williams on the defensive most of the time. Soutar was a genius in anticipating his rival's shots and was nearly always in a good position. Once he had to think quickly as the ball broke right in front of him. He swung his racquet under his leg and made a perfect shot.

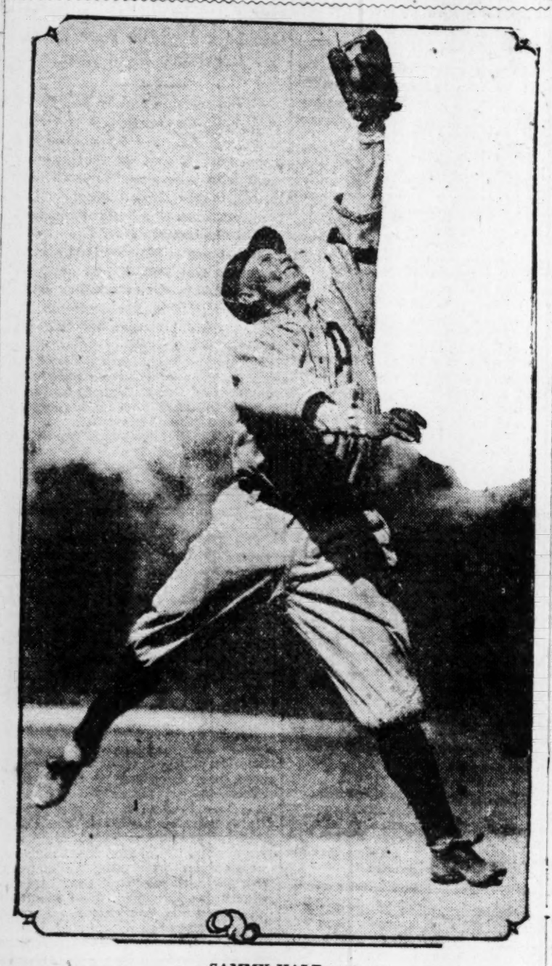
Williams steadied his playing in the early part of the third game and at one period led by four games to three. The champion, however, scored five straight aces near the end and won by 15 points to 8. The Englishman led for a brief spell at the start of the fourth and last game, scoring an ace and a placement shot on his third serve.

Soutar matched those two points on his fourth serve, picked up three more on his fifth and then in the sixth made the championship safe after America by tallying nine straight points. His serve ended when he drove the ball against the skylight. A few minutes later the match was over when Williams drove the ball into the tell-tale.

It was probably one of the quickest championship matches ever played. The men were on the court less than 45 minutes. The majority of Soutar's points were earned as he made 18 service aces and 2 placement shots.

Williams played Soutar's low smashing drives poorly and drove the ball into the tell-tale 18 times. He made only four service aces and eight placement shots.

Connie Mack's Latest Phenom



SAMMY HALE.

Reports from Louisville during the National Association meeting said that the Athletics paid $75,000 for this athlete, a former Detroit player. Hale in 1922 played with Portland and batted .365. He is a third baseman.

Marquette Star One of Season's Kicking Marvels

"Red" Dunn Beat Detroit U., 6 to 3 With Two Place Kicks—Marquette Undefeated.

MILWAUKEE, Wis.—Marquette University of Milwaukee has thrust itself into the football spotlight, at least in the Midwest.

In the season just concluded Marquette played nine games and won them all, scoring 152 points to three for the opponents.

The only time Marquette was scored upon was in its game against Detroit U., when Hogan registered on a drop kick from beyond the 35-yard mark.

No team was able to get within Marquette's 20-yard line at any time this season. When it is born in mind that the Detroit U. team handed Washington and Jefferson a 20 to 9 drubbing, it may be realized that Marquette's 6 to 3 victory was something of a remarkable accomplishment.

Marquette's record for the season follows:

Marquette, 0; Ripon, 0.
Marquette, 27; Carroll College, 0.
Marquette, 50; U. S. Air School, 0.
Marquette, 23; Creighton, 0.
Marquette, 12; Haskell, 0.
Marquette, 6; N. Dakota, 0.
Marquette, 6; Detroit U., 3.
Marquette, 38; S. Dakota, 0.

Remarkable as is the record of the Milwaukee team, the performance of one Joe "Red" Dunn is even more worthy of attention. The quarterback of the Marquette team scored 77 of the team's points. The fact that he is an all around star is overshadowed by his wonderful ability as a kicker.

He won the Detroit game with two place kicks. The score was 6 to 3.

He won the North Dakota game, 6 to 0, with two drop kicks.

He scored one place kick against Creighton.

He scored two place kicks against Haskell.

Dunn was the keystone of the Marquette attack. He was one of three letter men left from last year's team around whom Coach Frank Murray, former Tufts College star built his team. Dunn is 21 years old and weighs 154 pounds. He has one year of football left under the three-year rule in vogue at Marquette. He is captain of the basketball squad which starts play immediately.

WHITE ROSES LED IN HITTING AND FIELDING

Official averages released today by the Missouri-Illinois Trolley League disclose the fact that the White Rose team of Belleville led the circuit in both team fielding and team batting. Mount Vernon was a close second in both departments. A peculiar feature of the season's batting is the fact that the White Roses failed to make a single home run.

Hunting Laws as Applied to the Mississippi River Are Interpreted Assistant Attorney-General, in Official Opinion, Defines Status of Sandbars and Islands and Sets Forth Rules to Be Observed.

By E. T. Grether,
Chief Deputy Game and Fish Commissioner, State of Missouri.

Sportsmen of both Missouri and Illinois will be deeply interested in the opinion rendered by Assistant Attorney-General Merrill E. Otis of Missouri because of its clear interpretation of the laws relating to hunting waterfowl upon the waters of the rivers which form the boundary line btween our own and adjoining States, especially as it has been the subject of endless dispute between officers and private citizens of Missouri and Illinois.

The Missouri Game and Fish Department prepared its own opinion as to the law's requirements in all possible questions which might arise in law enforcement, and this statement was given to the legal department of Missouri, asking that each point be considered in detail and a legal opinion rendered by the Attorney-General's office. That opinion, herein given, will henceforth be the requirements which will be enforced for hunters of waterfowl:

"1. The game and fish laws of Missouri, as all other of its laws apply over the whole of the Mississippi River, between the States of Illinois and Missouri as does, also, the jurisdiction of your department and other departments of this State.

No Jurisdiction.

"2. The State of Missouri has no jurisdiction over, nor do its laws apply in ony island in the Mississippi River which belongs to the State of Illinois, and which is subject to taxation by that State.

"3. A sand bar of a temporary nature and having no private ownership, is under the exclusive jurisdiction of the State to which it belongs by reason of its location with reference to the middle of the main channel of the river.

"4. A hunting license issued by the State of Missouri is good for hunting privileges anywhere upon the main waters of the Mississippi between Missouri and Illinois, but not upon the lands, islands or sand bars of Illinois.

"5. Hunting upon the main waters o fthe Mississippi River between Missouri and Illinois is restricted, both by the State laws and by the migratory bird treaty act regulations.

"6. A hunter licensed by the State of Missouri can hunt anywhere upon the main waters of the Mississippi between Missouri and Illinois or upon the islands or sand bars of his own State, but he must observe the migratory bird regulations as fixed by the migratory bird treaty, unless the same are still further restricted by his own State laws, in which case he must obey such additional restrictions.

"7. One holding a hunter's license must observe the laws of his own State and cannot exercise greater privileges than those conferred by the license, notwithstanding the regulations of Illinois may be more liberal than those of Missouri.

"8. A hunting license issued by the State of Missouri confers no privileges outside of the jurisdiction of this State, including its concurrent jurisdiction over the Mississippi River.

"9. Game and fish taken into Missouri become subject to the laws of Missouri to the same extent as if they were originally produced in this State.

"10. The violation of a State law by importing or exporting game contrary to the local laws, is a violation of the Lacy act, approved March 4, 1909."

"Very truly,
MERRILL E. OTIS,
"Assistant Attorney-General."

The Missouri Game and Fish Department had, some months past, taken up the subject with Mr. H. C. Norcross of the Illinios Sportsmen's League with the suggestion that the Illinois organization could urge cooperation between Missouri and Illinois in connection with the boundary line requirements.

Missouri has therefore obtained an opinion from her legal department and it is now up to our neighbors in Illinois to do likewise so the followers of rod and gun may enjoy their sport and recreation with a clear understanding of the legal requirements of both states.

Shifting Channel.

From the above opinion it will be seen that certain islands of the Mississippi are owned by persons who pay their taxes for said island on account of its being a part of a Missouri county, though the island is now upon the Illinois side of the main channel of the Mississippi River on account of the shifting of the channel boundary line. Several clubs or individuals have leased the hunting privileges upon these islands and have been heretofore required to obtain both Illinois and Missouri licenses rather than testing the law upon such subject. They need only the license of their own State from now on. The same rule would apply to residents of Illinois in regard to any island similarly situated in regard to tax payment.

Each licensee of either State would be required to live up to the provisions of its own State game and fish laws though exercising its hunting privilege anywhere upon either side of the public waters of the main river, but not upon the islands or sandbars of the opposite State nor upon the main shore of said State. This includes seasons, bag limit, or any other feature of either law, but does not permit hunting with motor boat, power boat, sail boat or any kind of a boat which is towed or propelled by such boats, nor by any airplane flying over the public waters. This provision is included in both State and Federal regulations. The fishing privilege is under the same rule of action but in no way effected by the rule for power boats sometimes used while "jugging for fish," etc.

The fisherman or hunter requires a license under all circumstances, according to laws of one State or the other, as the case may be.

The Attorney-General in a recent decision ruled that the words "birds and game" apply to the pelts of fur-bearing animals, likewise that shippers of such fur pelts, within Missouri, must exhibit a regular hunter's license to authorize the shipment. The transportation company must demand such license to be exhibited by all persons. The United States Postal requirements cover the same rule, under Federal authority.

FORMER GOVERNOR SOUGHT IN GIRL'S SEDUCTION SUIT

Case Halted to Permit Effort to Find Witness Desired in Action Against Present Mississippi Executive.

GOV. RUSSELL'S WIFE TESTIFIES

Campaign Manager Tells of Alleged Threat on Part of Miss Birkhead to Kill Man She Says Wronged Her.

By the Associated Press.

OXFORD, Miss., Dec. 9.—Interest in the damage suit instituted by Miss Frances Birkhead against Lee M. Russell, Governor of Mississippi, centered tonight in efforts being made to locate Theo. G. Bilbo, former Governor, and wanted as a witness by the plaintiff.

The case was halted late today when attorneys for Miss Birkhead requested a continuance until Monday to permit an eleventh-hour effort to find Bilbo, for whom an attachment has been issued. The continuance was ordered over protest by the defense.

Major William Perry, of the Governor's staff, also is to be called to the witness stand, if he can come to Oxford before the trial ends.

It was explained that Major Perry is detained at his home by the illness of a member of his family.

The defense completed the presentation of evidence at the morning session of court, and the plaintiff exhausted its witnesses after an hour of the planned afternoon session.

Mrs. Russell, wife of the Governor, and A. B. Schauber, campaign manager for Russell in his contest for the governorship, were the last defense witnesses, while less than a dozen witnesses testified in rebuttal for the plaintiff. Miss Birkhead was on the witness stand as the last witness of the day.

Schauber testified relative to allegations that money payments had been made to Miss Birkhead. Statements in connection with these allegations figured in the testimony of several previous witnesses.

Schauber said that friends of the Governor made up a fund of $600 to be given to Miss Birkhead, when it was reported that she planned to make allegations against the Governor public.

Speaks of Alleged Threat.

Schauber also declared that Miss Birkhead had threatened to kill the Governor, and that after a scene in the office of the Governor at the capitol, she gained possession of a pistol, but was disarmed.

Gov. Russell knew nothing of the plans, Schauber testified. Russell had declared that no payment would be made with his consent, Schauber testified, and at all times in conference with his friends, according to the witness, had proclaimed his innocence of the charges based on an allegation of seduction, the basis of the present suit for damages.

W. R. Ross, assistant chief of police of Jackson, one of the witnesses called in rebuttal, denied that he was summoned to arrest Miss Birkhead when she was in Jackson, and was alleged to have threatened to kill the governor and burn the executive mansion. Ross could not recall that Miss Birkhead ever resided in Jackson.

Testimony of Mrs. Russell.

Mrs. Russell, testifying for her husband, said she and Russell were married in 1905, adding "our life has been congenial in every way."

She and the Governor decided to give Miss Birkenhead employment during Russell's campaign and to bring her to their home in Oxford to make the work more convenient, she testified.

At the time, she said, the young woman was in trouble and had made serious allegations against the head of a State institution.

"We've helped lots of boys and girls and wanted to help her," Mrs. Russell said. "She promised to forget all about it and be content."

Bringing her narrative to the time Miss Birkhead made her allegations against the Governor—during a stormy scene in the Capitol in July, 1920, at which Schauber was present—Mrs. Russell said the Governor told her of the charges immediately.

Mrs. Russell told of a subsequent scene in a Memphis jewelry store when, she said, Miss Birkhead accosted the Governor and repeated her allegations.

Testimony on Dance at Home.

Witnesses testified in denial of statements that the young woman had been drinking while at a dance at her former home in Yazoo County.

Miss Birkhead, the final witness today, declared that testimony of several witnesses, that she at one time made charges of seduction against Dr. Henry Boswell, head of a state institution, was not true. Incidents of alleged misconduct testified upon by other witnesses, were declared to be "absolutely untrue" by the young woman. Likewise, she denied that she visited a Chinese restaurant in Jackson or that she participated in a roadhouse party in New Orleans, which, the witnesses who told of the alleged incident declared, ended with members of the party climbing out of a rear window "to beat a taxi bill."

Miss Birkhead took issue with the claim made by Schauber that Gov. Russell knew nothing of any money payment made to her. She asserted that one payment of $90 was given to her in the presence of Russell. Schauber declared the money was given to her from his pocket in the absence of the Governor.

She said she understood the $600 paid to her was from the governor. "Otherwise I would not have accepted," said the plaintiff.

Expectations tonight were that the case would go to the jury Monday.

Letter Tells of K S D Triumph in Rochester

Woman, Praising Broadcasting of Post-Dispatch Station, Writes That She Heard Every Note of Symphony Concert.

The concert given last night by the St. Louis Symphony Orchestra at the Odeon was broadcast by the Post-Dispatch radio station, K S D, and, as has been the case on other Saturday nights, was enjoyed by thousands of persons listening in at points far distant from St. Louis.

The following letter from a woman in Rochester, N. Y., is an indication of the success with which these concerts have been broadcast. It was written while the concert of the Symphony Orchestra was being sent out Saturday night, Nov. 25, when there was a program of music by German composers and Mme. Olga Samaroff, distinguished St. Louis pianist, was soloist. The salutation of the letter refers to the fact that K S D has a woman announcer. The letter:

"Dear Madame K S D.: In an adjoining room our radio is transmitting your St. Louis Symphony concert so clearly that I am not missing a single note of Wagner's music played by the orchestra. I take off my hat to you 'from Missouri' who have 'shown us' what perfect music perfectly broadcast can be! It is wonderful. The applause is so energetic and so prolonged there that it seems unnecessary to add this long-distance tribute. But we do want to say 'Thank you' with all our hearts.

"We hope that some of you mid-Westerners may enjoy as fully the music sent out from our own Eastman School of Music. Last week we enjoyed Paderewski's concert from our own W H A M (the University of Rochester Station), and we did not receive his notes a 'whit more clearly than the brilliant Mme. Olga's this evening.

"Before I close this first—and probably last—note to you, I want to present you a private little nosegay just for yourself, 'Lady K S D.' You are the only woman announcer 'on the air,' and your voice carries beautifully, the notes round and clear and low, and your enunciation sharp cut without being of the 'bally-hoo' variety some of the men seem to think necessary to annihilate space. Thanking you once more for a delightful evening, I am 'signing off' at 11:30 Eastern time.

"NELLE VAN HORN BRADSTREET.

"Mrs. Samuel Woodman Bradstreet II, Woodman road, Irondequoit, Rochester, N. Y."

Mrs. Bradstreet's letter is typical of hundreds received by the Post-Dispatch from distant points.

ILLINOIS EXECUTIVE ASKS REJECTION OF NEW CONSTITUTION

Gov. Small in Statement Charges Proposed Code Would Protect Special Interests at People's Expense.

By the Associated Press.

SPRINGFIELD, Ill., Dec. 9.—Charging that the proposed new State constitution has been "so cunningly prepared that the controlling direction of governmental agencies by powerful corporate interests will be assured for years to come," Gov. Len Small today urged voters of Illinois to "rise in their might" and prevent ratification at the polls on Dec. 12.

"Protects Special Interests."

The many provisions incorporated in the new constitution to protect and promote special interests at the expense of the general public outweigh the few desirable changes, the Governor said.

"The new constitution provides for the abolition of property tax on hidden wealth consisting of stocks, bonds, franchises and so forth. In lieu of the present personal property tax, it provides for an income tax upon all incomes over $500 from whatever source; but the Legislature is forbidden to fix a rate on great incomes amounting to millions of dollars, higher than three times that charged on the smallest incomes above $500.

Urges Rejection by People.

"I firmly believe that the interests of the people generally demand the rejection of the new constitution, and I earnestly hope that the voters of Illinois will rise in their might on next Tuesday and defeat the constitution offered them, thus protecting and preserving the fundamental principles of free, representative government."

WM. ALLEN WHITE CASE DISMISSED; STATE CRITICISED

Judge Rebukes Administration for Way in Which Proceedings Against Emporia Editor Were Handled

By the Associated Press.

EMPORIA, Kan., Dec. 9.—The State's case against William Allen White, Emporia editor, charged with violating the Industrial Court law by placing a placard expressing sympathy for striking shopmen in the window of his newspaper office, was dismissed at 4 p. m. today in District Court, Judge W. C. Harris presiding. White appeared in court with his attorney.

In dismissing the case, Judge Harris declared the rumors arising from the State's refusal to bring the case to trial had done White an injustice. He criticisedt he administration of Gov. Henry J. Allen for the way in which the case had been handled.

"This case was commenced maliciously or recklessly, without investigation of the facts to ascertain whether the procecution was justified," the Judge said.

White, in a statement after the hearing, declared he had been "Ku Kluxed," and "by a court thatdid not have the courage to pull out their shirt tails and give a Ku Klux parade."

R. M. Hamer, attorney for White, asked Judge Harris if he would make a statement as to whether White had been done an injustice by the administration's actions.

After reviewing the information and declaring that three times White has appeared and demanded trial, and that three times the State had refused to try him, asking continuances, Judge Harris said:

"The State has a legal right to a dismissal of its case, but it is a great wrong to charge a person with a criminal offense and humiliate him by arrest, maliciously or without probable cause; the lay mind associates arrest with guilt. The Court is forced to the conclusion in this case by the conduct of the moving party, that this case was commenced malliciously or recklessly, without investigation of the facts to ascertain whether a prosecution was justified, and in either event the action was equally reprehensible. A defendant in a criminal prosecution is entitled to fair treatment. I do not think the defendant in this case has had it. He is left in a most embarrassing position."

ST. LOUIS COUNTY COURT WILL REOPEN ROAD WORK BIDS

Protests Had Been Made by Some Contractors That Building Was Restricted by Specifications.

The St. Louis County Court has decided to reopen bids for certain roadmaking materials as a result of the injunction suit filed Wednesday by representatives of the Clean Election League, coincident with the opening of bids for materials for a number of important roads.

The protest and suit followed complaint by some contractors that they could not bid unless they planned to use materials provided only by certain companies, because of the specifications. The County Court has decided to alter the specifications to the satisfaction of these contractors. Bids under the changed specifications will be receivable up to Dec. 27, and it is expected to award contracts soon thereafter. Bids opened Wednesday for rock and gravel will be retained, Presiding Judge Wiethaupt said, because there was no complaint about them, but the others will not be acted on.

The suit charged that the opening of bids Wednesday was intended to hamper the three Judges-elect, who will comprise the County Court after Jan. 1. These men were elected in the victory of the Clean Election League, which opposed the three present Judges.

INQUIRY SENT SIDENER ABOUT ELECTION CASES

Board Wants to Know What Action, if Any, Has Been Taken Regarding Eight Men.

An inquiry was sent by the Board of Election Commissioners yesterday to Circuit Attorney Sidener on the disposition, if any, of the cases of eight men whose names were submitted to the Circuit Attorney in connection with alleged irregularities in the election Nov. 7.

A previous letter asking the same question, sent Dec. 4, had not been answered, the Commissioners said.

Sidener told a Post-Dispatch reporter yesterday that he had not received the inquiry, nor the Dec. 4 letter of the board, but asserted he was desirous of co-operating with the Election Commissioners and was willing to place the matter before the grand jury this week.

The view that the cases should be placed in the hands of the Prosecuting Attorney was expressed by Sidener, but he said he was ready to take action on any cases the Election Commissioners turned over to him.

The Election Board received police reports on the eight men on election day. One was alleged to have interfered with election officials, another was charged with attempting to vote a second time under another name, and six were alleged to have attempted to vote on registrations from addresses where they no longer resided, or where they were not known. The cases were referred to the Circuit Attorney by the Election Commissioners.

Names of 70 judges and clerks of election who failed to serve on election day, without first being excused, have been sent to the Prosecuting Attorney for action. This offense constitutes a misdemeanor. The board also instructed the chief clerk to furnish the Prosecuting Attorney with the names of 15 lodging housekeepers who failed to comply with the law requiring that lists of lodgers be furnished the Election Commissioners following a registration of voters.

LIFE SENTENCE OF MAN AS HABITUAL CRIMINAL UPHELD

State Supreme Court Sustains Sentence of Man Sent to Prison From Kansas City.

JEFFERSON CITY, Dec. 9.—The Supreme Court today affirmed the judgment of the Jackson County Criminal Court in the case of James H. Asher, convicted as a habitual criminal and sentenced to the State penitentiary "for the rest of his natural life."

The appellant complained that the information, so far as it involved the aid of the habitual criminal act, was insufficient. The Court overruled the contentions of the appellant and upheld the action of the Jackson County Court.

Asher has served previous prison terms, one sentence having been for life, but he was pardoned.

The specific charge against Asher is the robbery of a pharmacy in Kansas City. Asher and two companions entered the store with drawn revolvers, compelled the clerk, the delivery boy and three customers to lie on the floor while they rifled the cash drawer of $210 and also are said to have taken other valuables. All three were masked.

STOLEN WHISKY CACHED NEARBY, POLICE BELIEVE

Watchman Declares That They Heard Truck Returning for Second Load After 20 Minutes.

MAY HAVE BEEN MOVED AGAIN LATER

Value of Liquor Taken From Jack Daniel Company's Bonded Warehouse Estimated at $7188.

Belief that 118 cases and 16 barrels of pre-prohibition whisky, stolen from the bonded warehouse of the Jack Daniel Distilling Co., 3960 Duncan avenue, Friday night, were carried only a short distance from the warehouse governed the investigation by the police last night. Federal agents also were carrying on an investigation.

Two watchmen at the warehouse and two negro watchmen at neighboring concerns were held captive at the warehouse while the liquor was carried away. One of the negroes told detectives that the sounds he heard indicated that an automobile truck had been loaded with whisky and driven away, returning within 20 minutes for a second load. It had been deduced at first, from the sounds, that two trucks were there.

Chief of Detectives Hoagland characterized the robbery as a "short-haul job," and assigned detectives to investigate the vicinity of the warehouse. It was taken into consideration that there was a possibility that the liquor later was removed from a nearby cache to one more distant.

It seemed apparent that the robbers knew of a protective agreement the warehouse watchmen had with the negro watchmen.

Value Placed at $7188.

The cases each contained three gallons of whisky in bottles and the barrels contained 45 to 50 galoln each when put in storage five yea-s ago, but allowing for evaporation, they probably held an average of 38 gallons when stolen. The case goods are to have been shipped yesterday. The whisky in cases is sold legally to druggists and hospitals at $10 a gallon and some of the barreled liquor has been sold at $6 a gallon. The value of the loot on this basis is placed by Thomas A. Heffernan, president and treasurer of the company, at $7188. Druggists charge $3 to $4 a pint for whisky on prescriptions. The "bootleg" value of the loot is probably $30,000 or more.

Two watchmen who were on duty when the robbers went to the warehouse at 10:10 p. m. Friday, were William Sullivan of 3741 Laclede avenue, employed by the company, and Walter Eason of 3747 Laclede avenue, a Government warehouse agent. They were taken to Police Headquarters yesterday morning and questioned at length by Chief of Detectives Hoagland. Eason, who is 63 years old, was not detained. Sullivan, who is 56, was detained until 4 p. m., when he was released, after further questioning. Both men said they would be unable to identify the robbers, but would be glad to do so if they could, in spite of threats the liquor thieves made.

"Everyone Drank Whisky."

Sullivan said he was formerly a policeman here and later conducted a saloon at Glasgow and Cass avenues. He admitted that he drank some whisky after the robbery, but said "the police and everybody" did likewise. The three robbers who accosted him as he went outside to punch his watchman's clock in a key affixed to an exterior wall, he said, were "undersized young punks" whom he "could have licked if they hadn't all had guns." He said that no one had ever suggested to him a plot to steal the liquor.

Sullivan has been a watchman there for 10 months, at $20 a week. Eason has been in the Government's employ for 18 months, at $120 a month.

Detectives were busy yesterday on several theories, and Federal Prohibition Agent Nations directed an independent investigation. He said last night that he was working on certain ideas about the robbery, but would have to admit he did not know where the whisky was. Collector of Internal Revenue Hellmich made an investigation at the warehouse in the morning.

Robbers Knew Plans.

The robbers marched Sullivan inside and made him and Eason face a wall, with a fourth robber as guard. The watchmen were not allowed to observe what was going on, but the three robbers they saw wore handkerchiefs over their faces and carried revolvers. Three men similarly masked and armed successively routed two negro watchmen from offices of neighboring concerns and lined them up with the warehouse watchers.

Sullivan and Eason had had an agreement with the negroes whereby no outcry would be made if anything suspicious was observed at the warehouse, but the negroes would call the police quietly. The capture of the negroes led the police to believe the robbers knew of this arrangement.

The cases of whisky were taken from a room on the first floor, the door of which was broken open with a crowbar, and the barrels were brought down in an elevator from the second floor. All were loaded on automobile trucks on the west side of the building, which is in a district largely devoted to storage yards and warehouses. A barrel of whisky was broken open upstairs and the contents ran over the floor. The robbers remained more than an hour.

Watchmen Unarmed.

Neither Sullivan nor Eason was armed when held up. Their revolvers and another revolver and a Government Springfield rifle were taken from the office by the robbers, who also cut the telephone wire after they heard the bell ring. President Heffernan said that a "few thousand dollars" burglary insurance was carried. August H. Reimler, Government storekeeper and gauger in charge of the warehouse, said the company would have to pay $2.20 a gallon casualty tax on the 16 barrels of whisky stolen. Tax had been paid on the bottled liquor.

In January, 1921, it was learned that Government agents had been trying for some time to trace 50 barrels of whisky that had been taken from this warehouse Nov. 30, 1920, for shipment to a New York distillery on what that distillery declared was a forged permit. No record of the shipment was found at the time and it could not be learned who took the liquor away. The New York distillery declared that no whisky had been bought from the local company. The investigators concluded local bootleggers had got hold of the whisky.

Dry Agent Uses Railroad Ticket to Get Whisky

R. J. Samardick Says Physician Thumped His Chest and Precribed Liquor.

Robert J. Samardick, in charge of a detail of general prohibition agents working in St. Louis, bought a ticket for Omaha on Dec. 5, and then, by use of the ticket, sought to learn what success a departing visitor would have in search of a "nip" to take along.

He visited the Gebhardt Drug Co., at 1704 Market street and exhibiting the ticket asked for two pints of whisky. He was referred to a physician, with an office nearby. He visited the physician who asked him what ailed him. "Not a thing," he replied, but the physician thumped his chest, Samardick said and prescribed a pint of liquor. The prescription was filled in the Gebhardt store.

Obtained Whisky.

Next he visited the Draper Drug Co. at 1801 Olive street. He again was referred to a physician, but the physician was out of blanks. The clerk in the drug store, Samardick declared, then sold him two pints of whisky for $13, saying that he would have to charge that sum as he would have to get prescriptions for the liquor later.

Members of Samardick's squad went to the Draper store yesterday and reported that they found 18 uncanceled prescriptions in the files. They said that the clerk, Albert J. Kaegel, 4569 Delmar boulevard, said it was the custom of the store to keep three or four blank prescriptions on hand for "cash customers" and gave the names of two physicians, who, he said, furnished the blanks. Kaegel was arrested and the agents announced that they would apply for warrants against the two physicians named, the proprietors of the store, the proprietor of the Market street store and the physician who thumped Samardick's chest.

Impersonated Coal Driver.

When Samardick first appeared in St. Louis last spring, he impersonated a coal driver and went among saloons, several arrests following his successful effort to get liquor.

CHUM OF SCOUT LEADER HELD, CHARGED WITH HIS MURDER

Bruise Found on Head of Man Who Was Supposedly Drowned; No Water in Lungs.

Special to the Post-Dispatch.

DETROIT, Mich., Dec. 9.—Harold H. Mendell, 42, a draftsman, was arrested today on a charge of first degree murder which followed investigation of the circumstances under which his chum, Roland M. Morgan, 33, metallurgist and head of the Congregational Church Boy Scout troop, was supposedly drowned while swimming with Mendell last August.

The Sheriff asserts that disinterment of Morgan's body showed the lungs free from water and established the presence of a large bruise on the head.

Morgan took Mendell swimming with him at the scout camp on the Kawkawlin River, Aug. 9, as he had often done before. The pair had been inseparable friends for 12 years.

After splashing around a few minutes Mendell rushed back to the caretaker's cabin and reported that Morgan had dived and failed to come up.

A few days later a woman called at the county jail here and told the Sheriff the case would stand investigation. Mendell voluntarily made a statement when he learned the case was being investigated.

WAITRESS LOSES DAMAGE SUIT

U. R. Not Liable in Case of Woman Beaten on Car.

A jury in Circuit Judge Taylor's court yesterday decided that the United Railways was not liable for damages in the suit of Mrs. Alma Dettra, 23 years old, 4146 Delmar boulevard, for $15,000 from the company because of alleged failure of the crew of an Olive car on which she was a passenger, to protect her from assault by four striking waitresses.

Mrs. Dettra was employed as a waitress at a restaurant which was picketed by members of the Waitresses' Union. She was attacked, she said, on Nov. 11, 1920, by the strikers, who boarded the car at the same point she did downtown after she had quit work for the day. She said they talked with her for several blocks and then set upon her and severely beat and injured her, leaving the car unmolested by the car crew.

The company's defense was that the assault occurred without warning to the crew.

WASHINGTON, Dec. 9.—Arthur Sears Henning, of the Chicago Tribune, was elected president of the Gridiron Club at the organization's annual dinner today. The club is composed of Washington newspaper correspondents. William E. Brighton of the Boston Transcript was elected vise president.

On another page of today's Post-Dispatch there is printed an account of the dinner, in which Vice President Coolidge is mentioned as being present. He did not attend.

SLAYER, FREED, KILLED BY HIS VICTIM'S SON

Shooting in Grayson, Ky., Comes Less Than Hour After Acquittal by Jury.

Special to the Post-Dispatch.

GRAYSON, Ky., Dec. 9.—Carrying out the universal idea in the mountains vendetta, a son this afternoon shot to death the slayer of his father. The man killed today had been free less than an hour of the charge of having killed the parent of the man who took retributive justice into his own hands.

Paul Herron, 35 years old, a farmer of this county, was indicted for the killing last July of William Blanton. The Blanton and Herron families, it is stated, long had been at outs. Herron's plea before the trial jury was self-defense. When the verdict of acquittal was returned this afternoon and Herron had received the congratulations of his family and friends, he went down to the business section of this little town, crowded with people from many parts of the mountains here to buy their Christmas goods.

Herron was preparing to go home when, it is alleged, Harrison Blanton, young son of the man for whose death Herron was tried, came running through the crowd. Though many people are said to have noticed the young man had a pistol, he fired at Herron before anyone could stop him. Herron died almost in his tracks. Seeing his enemy down and his idea of justice satisfied, young Blanton made no attempt to escape, but surrendered himself and his pistol when the Carter County Sheriff arrived.

Blanton was hurried to the courthouse where he had heard his father's slayer freed an hour before and taken before the grand jury, which immediately indicted him for murder. Blanton has a wife and two small children. Herron was married and had one child.

Herron's body was taken by his widow and friends to the little home where he told her he would come tonight freed from any blame in the Blanton killing. Blanton, in jail, has made no statement. The elder Blanton was slain in front of a bank about a block distant from where today's killing occurred.

Man Killed and Four Wounded When Family Attacks Another.

Special to the Post-Dispatch.

HICKMAN, Ky., Dec. 9.—Scenes of the frontier were re-enacted on Island No. 8, in the Mississippi River, 10 miles below here, when two families engaged in a battle, one advancing on the home of the other. The fight ended when one of the attacking party was killed and four others were wounded, two of whom are expected to die.

Richard Johnson, 21 years old, is dead. The seriously wounded are: Bob Johnson, 23, shot in face and chest, Garland Johnson, 28, shot in the face and chest, J. H. Royer, 75, and J. L. Johnson, 65, are slightly wounded.

J. H. Royer, it is said, seeing the three Johnson brothers and their two employes advancing on his home as they had threatened to do in an altercation a few minutes before, barricaded the doors and windows and with his two sons, awaited the attacking party.

Royer and his sons did not fire, it is said, until the opposing force was within ten yards of their front door.

The trouble started when J. L. Johnson went to the Royer home to rent some land from the elder Royer.

MORE PLANES JOIN IN MISSING AIRMEN HUNT

Nine Craft in Ten-Mile Sweep Search for Two Aviators Last Heard of Thursday.

By the Associated Press.

SAN DIEGO, Cal., Dec. 9.—The most comprehensive aeronautical search instituted by the Government since the air forces of the army and navy combined in efforts to find Lieutenants Cecil H. Connelly and Frank Waterhouse, several years ago in Lower California, was put into effect today in an effort to clear up the mystery surrounding the disappearance of Col. Francis H. Marshall and Lieut. Charles L. Webber.

As dusk approached, however, no definite word regarding the fate of the two officers who left Rockwell Field Thursday for Fort Huachuca, Ariz., in a De Haviland airplane with Webber as pilot, had been received, and another day's search was planned.

At noon today five De Haviland airplanes from the Twelfth Observation Squadron stationed at Fort Bliss, under command of Maj. Leo F. Heffernan, joined the Rockwell Field aircraft forces at Tucson, under Capt. Lowell H. Smith. Before 1 p. m., nine military airplanes, extending in a line estimated to be nearly 10 miles wide, swept southeast from Estrella, Ariz., where the missing plane last was reported seen, searching territory that had not yet been covered.

Capt. Smith reported by telegraph that Lieut. Webber's plane had circled Estrella at a low altitude at 1 p. m. Thursday, evidently to check his bearings, and then had veered off to the southeast, in the mountains of that section, but military aviators said today it would be hard for a plane to land in any of them without serious damage to the machines.

Maj. Henry H. Arnold, Rockwell Field commander, said late today that the scouting planes seeking the two missing officers would make Tucson their base.

Stokes' resignation was effective July 1 last.

SENATOR EDGE WEDS MISS C. L. A. SEWALL

Couple Expected to Pass Honeymoon in Canada and Along the Riviera.

Special to the Post-Dispatch.

BATH, Me., Dec. 9.—Senator Walter E. Edge of New Jersey, and his bride, formerly Miss Camilla Loyall Ashe Sewall, to whom he was married at noon today in Grace Episcopal Church, are believed to be on their way tonight to Quebec in a private Pullman car attached to a train which they picked up somewhere in Maine late this afternoon. They are expected to enjoy a few days of winter sports in the old French city before going to New York the latter part of the week, to sail on Saturday on the steamship Majestic for Southampton and then cross to the Continent to pass the New Year along the Italian Riviera.

Among the guests were the Vice President and Mrs. Coolidge, Senator and Mrs. Joseph S. Frelinghuysen of New Jersey, Senators Richard P. Ernst of Kentucky and Frederick Hale of Maine, Representative and Mrs. Nicholas Longworth of Ohio, and the Governor of Maine, Percival P. Baxter, besides scores of Washington, New York and Boston friends of the newly married couple.

Wore Historical Veil.

The ceremony was in Grace Episcopal Church, and the service was read by the rector, the Rev. Charles Myron Tubbs. The lace veil worn by the bride was the one worn by the wife of Admiral Farragut, a great aunt of the bride, when she was presented to Queen Elizabeth at the Austrian Court.

One message of felicitations was from the President and Mrs. Harding, who previously had sent the bride an oil painting by Aston Knight.

Following the breakfast there was dancing. The temporary absence of the bride was not noted until she appeared in a traveling dress of black velvet, jacket of white fur, and black velvet hat. They jumped into the groom's waiting car and dashed away amid the cheers and congratulations of the guests left behind, refusing to make their destination known.

Mrs. Edge is the youngest daughter of Mr. and Mrs. Harold Sewall. She received most of her education in private schools in the United States and abroad. She made her debut in Boston in 1919 and passed last winter in Washington, where the family lived while Sewall was a member of the Advisory Committee of the American delegation to the disarmament conference.

MOTION PICTURE CENSORSHIP TO BE TAKEN UP MONDAY

Constitutional Convention to Consider Change in Wording of Bill of Rights.

PROVISION WOULD SIMPLIFY INDICTMENTS

Would Necessitate Statement in Plain Language of Facts Constituting Alleged Offense.

By a Staff Correspondent of the Post-Dispatch.

JEFFERSON CITY, Dec. 9.—The fight urged by motion picture interests to protect themselves from censorship legislation in Missouri by a constitutional provision may come to a vote before the Committee of the Whole of the Constitution Convention Monday.

The report of the Committee on Preamble, Boundaries, Bill of Rights and Distribution of Powers recommending adoption of Section 14 of the bill of rights providing for freedom of speech as it is in the present Constitution, is before the Committee of the Whole. Substitution of a minority report on that provision by Paul S. Conwell of Kansas City, and L. M. Henson of Poplar Bluff, is now being urged. Henson had opened the fight on the floor today when the convention adjourned until Monday.

The present Constitution declares that "every person shall be free to say, write or publish whatever he will on any subject." The Conwell-Henson substitute provides that "every person shall be free to say, and by any mode of impression or republish his ideas, opinions and sentiments on all subjects whatsoever."

Provision to Simplify Indictments.

Lawyers of the convention today were endeavoring to determine how far reaching would be the effects of final adoption of a new constitutional provision, seeking to simplify indictments in criminal cases, tentatively adopted by the Committee of the While late yesterday. This provision reads:

"Section 12. Criminal prosecutions must be by indictment or information; that no person shall be prosecuted criminally for felony or misdemeanor otherwise than by indictment or information, which shall be concurrent remedies; that the indictment or information shall be sufficient to state in plain and concise language the facts constituting the alleged offense; but this shall not be construed to apply to cases arising in the land or naval forces in the militia when in actual service in time of war or public danger, nor to prevent arrest and preliminary examination in any criminal case."

That language of the section represents a marked difference from the language of the present Constitution, which reads:

"Section 12. Criminal proceedings must be by indictment or information. No person shall be prosecuted criminally for felony or misdemeanor otherwise than by indictment or information, which shall be concurrent remedies, but this shall not be construed to apply to cases arising in the land or naval forces or in the militia men in actual service in time of war or public danger.

Supreme Court Ruling.

Under the present Constitution it was explained the Supreme Court has held that indictments must follow the rule of common law. While the proposed section does not fix a definite form for indictments, it was declared that the courts, under the proposed constitutional change, would be required to recognize as valid any indictment setting forth all facts constituting the alleged offense, if stated in plain and concise language, regardless of the form.

Freed After 18 Months in Jail on Charge of Conspiring to Kill Her Suitor

—Pacific and Atlantic Photograph

MRS. MADALYNNE OBENCHAIN.

THIS photograph shows Mrs. Obenchain as she looked last Monday when she was released from jail after an imprisonment lasting for 18 months on a charge of conspiring with Arthur Burch to murder J. Belton Kennedy, a suitor, who, it was alleged, was growing tired of her. During her stay in jail she was tried twice and Burch three times, all the juries failing to agree. The state thereupon lost hope of convicting either of them, and dismissed the cases against them.

ARTHUR BURCH FREED AFTER SANITY INQUIRY

Was Charged, With Mrs. Obenchain, Also Freed, in Connection With Kennedy Murder.

By the Associated Press.

LOS ANGELES, Cal., Dec. 9.—Arthur C. Burch, formerly of Evanston, Ill., had his freedom tonight, after standing trial three times on a charge of murder and being investigated for sanity. The juries in the murder case all disagreed, and the alienists at the insanity hearing did likewise, but the weight of expressed belief of the latter was that Burch was sane, or harmless if insane.

Burch said he did not know what he would do.

The action today completed a long chapter of trials, all based on the murder of J. Belton Kennedy, a young broker, who was shot down on the steps of his summer cottage in Beverly Glen, 17 months ago. Burch and Mrs. Madalyn Obenchain were indicted, charged with the crime. Mrs. Obenchain was tried twice and the juries disagreed, as did those in the case against Burch.

Mrs. Obenchain recently was freed when the District Attorney dismissed the murder indictment. Burch was held for an insanity hearing on the petition of his attorney, Paul W. Schenck. Schenck and the Rev. W. A. Burch, father of Arthur, both testified today they believed he was insane and gave instances of what they said were unusual conduct. After alienists had disagreed Judge Bertram A. Weyl, presiding, held that the question seemed to resolve itself in Burch's favor, and directed that he be freed.

LEGION'S STATE EXECUTIVE BODY TO MEET THURSDAY

Gathering of Post Commanders and Adjutants to Follow—Headquarters at Marquette Hotel.

St. Louis American Legion officials are arranging a meeting of the State Executive Committee at the Marquette Hotel Thursday to be followed by a conference of post commanders and Adjutants Friday and Saturday. About 500 visiting legionnaires are expected.

The headquarters of the American Legion in St. Louis has been transferred from the Planters Hotel to the Marquette Hotel. This was made necessary through the closing of the Planters. All legion activities hitherto permanently named for the Planters Hotel will be given at the Marquette Hotel.

At a recent conference between legion and the Red Cross management here it was decided to let the Red Cross look after disabled former service men, while the legion will take care of former soldiers out of employment or otherwise in trouble.

CONNELL CASE CHARGE DENIED BY HOAGLAND

Says He Did Not Volunteer Information Which Resulted in Acquittal.

Chief of Detectives Hoagland last night denied that he had volunteered information, when testifying for the defense in the trial of John (Kink) Connell for the murder of "Alibi Charley" Vance, which resulted in the acquittal of Connell, who gave an alibi. The charge that detectives, on the stand, had volunteered information harmful to the State's case was made by Circuit Attorney Sidener in a letter to President Brockman of the Police Board, as told in another section of today's Post-Dispatch.

Hoagland made a statement in response to inquiry by a Post-Dispatch reporter. He took exception to other statements made by Sidener and said he would welcome an investigation by the Police Board.

"The facts have been misstated," Hoagland said. "I did not just appear in court, as was made out. I was regularly subpenaed and did not pay any particular attention as to which side it was for. I notified the date and appeared in response, as was my sworn duty.

Called by Defense.

"The first man I saw in court was Assistant Circuit Attorney Johnson. He said he had not subpenaed me, but that the defense must have, and that he believed they wanted me to testify as to statements Connell was supposed to have made, threatening witnesses. I was questioned on the stand by Sigmund Bass, attorney for the defense, which had subpenaed me, as to whether I had overheard Connell say in my office that no witnesses would testify against him.

"I testified that I had not heard any such threat. I did not volunteer information. I was asked by Johnston about the identification of Connell by Vance's sister, in my office, and I said she identified him as the slayer of Vance.

Informers Protected, He Says.

"It is absolutely untrue that I made any statement about my office causing the indictment of Vance as a bank robber. As to the names of informers being made public by my office, that's absolutely untrue. We always give witnesses all the protection we can and the newspapers cooperate where danger exists. I have refused, even under oath in court, and was upheld by the court on several occasions, to divulge the names of persons giving us information. In the first place the rules of the department forbid my giving such information and in doing so I would be violating my oath of office. I consider it my duty as a police officer, citizen and man, whether under oath or otherwise, always to speak the truth and I would not testify to an untruth for or against a defendant."

Companion of U. S. Grant Dies.

Funeral services for Philip Hetzel, retired brick contractor, 89 years old, who died Thursday, will be held at 2 p. m. today from the home, 2117 Nebraska avenue, to Bellefontaine Cemetery. Hetzel came to St. Louis from Germany when a child and liked to tell of hauling wood from the Meramec River bottoms with a neighbor boy, Ulysses S. Grant. He is survived by a daughter and two sons.

ANALYSIS OF WOMAN'S STOMACH ORDERED

Poisoning Suggested as Cause of Death of Miss Anna Case, Found in Doctor's Office.

A chemical analysis of the contents of the stomach of Miss Alice Case, 25 years old, of 27 South Euclid avenue, who was found dead Friday in the office of Dr. Frank B. Fry, Humboldt building, 537 North Grand boulevard, by whom she was employed as secretary, was ordered yesterday by the Coroner. The inquest was continued pending this examination.

The report of the autopsy physician suggested cyanide of potassium poisoning and stated the young woman was in a delicate condition.

Body Found on Lounge.

Miss Sadie Screaton, 1564 Irving avenue, St. Louis County, who is employed in an adjoining office, discovered the body lying on a lounge when she went to Dr. Fry's office at 11:40 a. m. to accompany Miss Case to luncheon. No other person was in the office.

Physicians who were summoned said the young woman had been dead about 30 minutes.

Complaint had been made by Miss Case of stomach trouble about three months ago, Dr. Fry told the Coroner yesterday. He sent her to Dr. H. H. Shackelford, with offices in the same building, for treatment. Dr. Shackelford told the Coroner he had treated her for stomach trouble for several weeks and that Miss Case had not revealed her real condition until early Friday morning. An X-ray examination at the beginning of the treatment had not revealed this, he said.

Had Named No One.

A further consultation had been planned for Friday afternoon, Shackelford said. He recalled that Miss Case had expressed much fear of the effect on her family, but said she did not name anyone in connection with her condition.

Robert A. Cook of 4908 Euclid avenue, brother-in-law of Miss Case, stated to the Coroner that she frequently had complained of ill health recently. On one occasion, he said, she talked at length to members of the family on the deadly effect of cyanide of potassium.

TOM WAND FUNERAL FROM HIS UNDERTAKING ESTABLISHMENT

Services Tomorrow Afternoon—Widely Known in Livery Business Years Ago.

Funeral services will be held at 1:30 p. m. tomorrow at the undertaking establishment of Smithers & Wand, 4233 Olive street, for a member of the firm, Tom Wand, 70 years old, who died Friday night of heart disease at the home of his daughter, Mrs. E. E. Chapman, 3854 Page avenue. Wand was ill only a few hours.

Wand was born in St. Louis. He formerly was master mechanic for the Wiggins Ferry Co. and the belt line railroad which preceded the Terminal Railroad Association. He established an undertaking business at Sixth street and Clark avenue in 1885, but abandoned the livery business with the appearance of the taxicab in numbers about 1910. His carriages for many years stood before the Planters and Southern hotels and Faust's cafe. He was a Democratic member of the House of Delegates during the Francis administration.

SOCIOLOGIST SEES HOPE FOR A NEW RACE IN U. S.

Crudity of American Culture Gives It Better Starting Chance, Prof. Steiner Says.

Prof. Edward A. Steiner, head of the department of sociology at Grinnell College, Grinnell, Ia., who is to lecture tonight at Sheldon Memorial, 3648 Washington boulevard, under the auspices of the Community Forum, is among the thinkers on race problems who sees hope for America.

He told a reporter yesterday that the United States possessed human material for the development of a distinct race, but that at present its people were going the way of other nations. The goal of American civilization should be the fashioning of a true democracy, Prof. Steiner believes, so that America can leave a legacy of its own to the world as Judea, Greece and Rome have done.

"America began as an ideal," he said. "But she has not followed her possible destiny. Instead her peoples have united in a borrowed culture and have gone on the chase for wealth.

"The sociologist sees hope for her because her culture is so crude and because the great masses of population have fundamentally the same social and governmental ideals. The various race problems which would seem to threaten a move toward the better race are not so serious as they seem. While America cannot ethnologically assimilate the negro race it can absorb it culturally. Our immigrants can be assimilated first by culture and second by intermarriage.

A Problem of Culture.

"Thus the problem in building a better race remains a problem of culture—or ideals. We have seen a gradual decadence of ideals in America. The present age is sensuous. It is not revolt, it is disintegration. The modern flapper is not casting aside conventions because they are old and she has found something newer and better and finer. She is merely proclaiming a declaration of freedom in badness and is but copying her elders. We have no young movement in this country. Our youth is not leading anywhere; nobody is leading anywhere.

"Fundamentally, American culture is wholesome. Its crudity gives the better race a starting chance. There is no legal aristocracy and no peasant class and the only hard and fast element which makes for perpetual disintegration is religion. Aside from religion the new race has a vast commonality of ideals if leaders can call the people away from the present thoughtlessness.

"Some simple philosophy of life is needed as the fundamental of the chastity, poverty and duty to God might offer suggestions.

"Given an impetus and direction, the real American race would grow speedily. We already have come from our youth to maturity, skipping our adolescence. If we abandon aimless, sensuous pleasure seeking and awake to a realization that we must develop here a real democracy the better race is ready for birth."

To Lecture This Evening.

Prof. Steiner is to lecture on "The Making of a Great Race" this evening. His caree rhas been influenced by Count Tolstoy. Steiner is a Czecho-Slovakian, but received his education at the University of Heidelburg in Germany. He came to this country 30 years ago and settled in New York.

While he was learning English, he worked for several years as a tailor and also in coal mines. He then became a teacher. About 15 years ago Steiner made a pilgrimage to Tolstoy's estate, where he became a disciple of the great Russian.

The publication of a book on immigration after his return to America brought him into prominence among sociologists. He met the late Ben Blewett, then head of the St. Louis public schools, through this interest and the two became close friends. Prof. and Mrs. Steiner are guests of Blewett's sisters.

ACCUSED OF PLOTTING TO KILL HUSBAND

Woman Asserts She Was Tricked Into Marriage by Alleged Relative of Ford.

By the Associated Press.

DETROIT, Dec. 9.—That she had been tricked into marriage by visions of great wealth and generosity, and that she had been "driven so nearly frantic" by the actions of her husband, that at times she suffered loss of memory and responsibility will be the defense of Mrs. May Blenn Ford when she goes on trial here charged with plotting the death of her husband, Ney J. Ford, of Dearborn.

Mrs. Ford, held in jail here because she cannot procure $25,000 bail, is charged with offering to hire a local detective, who posed as a gunman, $20,000 to kill her husband and burn the body.

Mrs. Ford declared she first met Ford when she was employed as a masseuse in a Toledo beauty parlor.

"Ford first wrote to the manager of the place, said he was a near relative of Henry Ford, that he had great wealth, was generous, and desired a wife," she said. "The letter was turned over to me and I answered it. Immediately a reply in which the matter of riches and relationship to Henry Ford was enlarged upon. He came to see me and we were married.

"Ford took me to his farm at Dearborn to live. I found a house that had been bachelor's quarters for nearly seven years. I asked for money to buy dishes and was given $5. I papered the house, varnished the floors, and cooked for 10 or 15 men during the harvest season.

"And then I learned that my husband did not even know Henry Ford, to speak to him. The latter passed our place, looked curiously at the name on the mail box, and then drove on."

The campaign which the Federation of Jewish Charities is conducting to raise $150,000 will close Tuesday night with a meeting of the chairman and the 25 team captains at the Columbian Club. While the total amount collected is not known, it is said to be in excess of $80,000.

The organization supports 14 charitable associations. The Federation last year cared for 23,000 sick persons and provided vacation outings for 5000 children.

How the Democratic Senators Filibustered Dyer Lynching Bill to Death Without Speechmaking

Demonstrated That Underwood Knew What He Was Talking About When He Told Republicans That No Measure Opposed by Even a Small Minority Determined to Beat It Can Be Passed.

By Charles G. Ross,
Chief Washington Correspondent of the Post-Dispatch.

WASHINGTON, Dec. 9.

ALL the old-timers at the Capitol agree that never in the history of the United States Senate has there been such a neat and efficient filibuster as that by which the Democrats prevented consideration of the Dyer anti-lynching bill. After four legislative days in which not a scrap of business was transacted, Republican leaders bowed to the inevitable and agreed that the Dyer bill should be laid aside for the balance of the extra session and the whole of the regular session beginning Dec. 4.

Thereby was established the verity of a statement made in these columns last January, after the House, under the lash of political expediency, had passed the bill by a vote of 230 to 119. It was said that the bill was doomed to soporific treatment in the Senate. Representative L. C. Dyer of St. Louis, father of the measure, took warm exception to this forecast. As it turns out, "soporific" was a mild term. The Democratic filibusters of the Senate did not merely put the bill to sleep; they mauled it and manhandled it and finally consigned it to a deep obscurity whence it will not be resurrected for a long time, if ever.

"To filibuster," in the legislative sense, is, according to Webster, "to delay legislation or action in an assembly by dilatory motions or other artifices." The definition as applied to the tactics pursued against the Dyer bill is quite pat. Senators Underwood of Alabama, Caraway of Arkansas, Harrison of Mississippi (the latter two of whom are sometimes called the "playboys of the Senate") proved themselves highly efficient artificers of means of delay. Valuable assistance was rendered by various other Democrats. Had any one of the filibustering party faltered for a moment in the manufacture of dilatory artifices—which, as it happened, nobody did—another would have been ready with his own pet artifice. Senator Reed, for instance, was prepared with his specialty, a long speech, but it was necessary.

Carried Out Through Roll Calls.

The filibuster was undoubtedly the most loquacious ever waged in the Senate; it was carried through almost entirely by means of motions requiring time-consuming roll calls. The Democrats could have fought it out along the same lines all winter, spring and summer.

Some day, perhaps, somebody will invent and the Senate will install an electric scoreboard for the quick recording of votes. Meantime it takes a clerk about 15 minutes to drone through the list of 96 names and record and report the result. A roll call can be had on every affirmative motion proposed. In addition, any Senator at any time may "suggest the absence of a quorum," in which case the presiding officer must direct the secretary to call the roll. So two roll calls, consuming half an hour, are possible in any transaction. As Senator Underwood pointed out to the Republican majority at one stage of the proceedings, there were pending a large number of nominations, and to act upon only 10 of them, with the minority insisting on roll calls, would require the ordinary legislative day of five hours, even if no Senator opened his mouth more than to say "Aye" or "No."

How long it would require if Senators Reed, Caraway, Heflin, Harrison and others should get into oratorical action is left for some other mathematician.

Got Help From Other Side.

One reason why the Democrats were able to conserve their voices in this manner was the fact that they got much help from the other side. It is hard to goad a senatorial opponent into making a speech. Give him a good sound forensic smack and he will not turn the other cheek. He opens his mouth and begin giving back as he got—as good in quantity certainly, if not in quality. He will get his views into the record as an offset to the mistaken views of the distinguished—always distinguished—and personally beloved colleague. So the Democrats received considerable aid from Republicans who were stung into talking.

Senator Willis of Ohio was one of these. Willis is a big man—physically—with a voice like the roaring of Niagara. His conversational voice exceeds the average oratorical voice. His oratorical voice—heaven forbid that it should ever be put into a sound amplifier. He keeps his voice in trim through frequent use; only a slight sting, only a gentle prod, and he will rush into action. Willis is the Senator who, with Spencer, concocted the resolution that both convicted and acquitted Newberry.

Willis arose in his place on the second day of the filibuster to answer some remarks made on the previous day by McKellar of Tennessee.

"I certainly shall not lend myself to the filibuster which has been going on here," said Willis, "and therefore I shall occupy but a very few minutes."

Willis' "Few Minutes" Helped.

Now, a woman's "few minutes" is traditionally an elastic term; the average Senator's is more so, and Willis' is more than that. He talked for nearly an hour. Harrison, Underwood and Caraway lolled back in their chairs; no need for them, so long as Willis talked, to rack their brains for strategems. Whenever Willis showed signs of subsiding, McKellar gave him a prod. His contribution to the filibuster was the equivalent of two roll calls.

After he had finished, and after Senator New, another Republican, had helped along the filibuster by denouncing it, Senator Caraway arose and drawled a reply to Willis. Caraway gratefully acknowledged the aid given by Willis.

"I presume," said Caraway, in his funereal manner, "that our purposes are all the same. Some of us frankly announce them and others seek to conceal. We are all engaged in a filibuster. The Senator from Alabama stated that as our purpose until this measure should be laid aside. The Senator from Ohio stopped a roll call that he might read into the Record nearly everything which was said yesterday, so that without being put to the trouble of thinking up anything original to say, he could consume nearly an hour of the time of the Senate."

Liked the Quoted Part Best.

When Caraway gets after an antagonist he is like a dog worrying a bone. He kept right on after Willis. He knew that the Senator would not think him critical when he said that the best part of the Senator's speech was the quoted part. He had listened, he said, to many of the Senator's speeches, and he thought that this was the best the Senator had ever made. He would always be willing for the Senator to interrupt him and interject a speech.

"The Senator," said Caraway, "makes so much noise and beats his desk so viciously that he illustrates what he says without saying it."

With that parting compliment, the Arkansas Senator then tore into the bill itself. He said the bill was proposed for the purpose of paying a political debt. It was written, he said, so that the kinds of violence which are committed in the states of Senators favoring it would not fall within its provisions.

"Where men are murdered because they want to work or do not want to work," said Caraway, "or where, because of their color, they are not wanted in some particular locality of a city in which they might wish to live, as they were in Chicago and East St. Louis, this bill does not give any protection. It is therefore only where the man has committed a public offense, or is believed to have committed a public offense, or where it is believed he intends to commit a public offense, that the provisions of the bill will apply. If a man is killed for any act not a crime, his murderers go unwhipped of justice; if he is killed for the most fiendish crime, then it is desired that the Federal Government shall punish his punishers."

Another idea advanced by Caraway against the bill was this: That where the Federal authorities are given the right to punish crime, it is the tendency of the states to 'let Uncle Sam do it.' He ventured the assertion that 50 times more liquor was being sold in the State of Ohio than was sold before the Federal Government was given concurrent power with the State to enforce the law. Assumption by the Federal Government of this power, said Caraway, "broke down the public morale of the states."

"The result is," he said, "that the states do not enforce the law, and the Federal Government cannot."

Caraway quoted the St. Louis Post-Dispatch as having said that the bill was reported from the Senate Judiciary Committee with the expectation that it would not be passed, and that all but two members of the committee believed it unconstitutional. This reference was to an article by the Washington correspondent of the Post-Dispatch published Sept. 21.

Senator Cummins of Iowa, a member of the committee, thereupon got into the fray with a denial of the accuracy of the Post-Dispatch analysis of committee sentiment. He admitted, however, that there was "very great opposition to certain phases of the bill as it came from the House and that "a good many members" were doubtful of the constitutionality of parts of it. He felt sure, he said, the majority of the committee believed that the bill "as reported to the Senate" (that is, as amended in the Senate committee) was constitutional.

Caraway and Cummins argued at great length, with the utmost politeness to each other, about various points in the bill.

Shortridge Has His Turn.

Senator Shortridge of California, Republican, one of the most ardent sponsors of the bill, a tall man and of most lubricous aspect, began to bob up and down, making remarks. No sooner had Cummins left off his duel with Caraway than Shortridge entered the lists. Caraway introduced him as follows:

"I am in favor of the Senator having the floor. I love to hear him speak. I think that he is possibly the most eloquent man who has sat in the Senate since I have been in public life. I listen with much pleasure when he addresses the Senate. His reasoning is always good, though sometimes his conclusions are not in line with his argument. However, he is always interesting."

Then the two—Caraway and Shortridge, the short and the long of the Senate—with solemn countenances and always with a note of

LLOYD GEORGE Replies to CLEMENCEAU

"The time has come for saying these things and if they are not said in high places, humanity will one day call those who occupy high places to a reckoning"

This is the first of a series of articles which Mr. Lloyd George is writing, and which will be published by the Post-Dispatch as well as by other newspapers in all countries of the world. The articles, which will deal with present day conditions and situations, will appear from time to time, usually in the Sunday paper.

By DAVID LLOYD GEORGE,
War-Time Premier of Great Britain

(Copyright, 1922. Reproduction in whole or in part prohibited.)

LONDON, Dec. 9.—M. Clemenceau, in the remarkable series of speeches he has been delivering in the United States of America, implies a breach of faith on the part of Great Britain in reference to the pact for the guarantee of France against the possibility of German aggression.

England has no better friend in the whole of France than M. Clemenceau. Throughout a strenuous, but consistent, career he has never varied in his friendship for England. Many a time has he been bitterly assailed for that friendship. French journalists are not sparing of invendo against those they hate. They hate fiercely and they hit recklessly and M. Clemenceau, a man of scrupulous integrity, at one period in his stormy political life, was charged by certain organs of the Paris press with being in the pay of England. If, therefore, he now does an injustice to Britain, I am convinced it is not from blind hatred of our country, but from temporary forgetfulness of fact. He states the fact with reference to the original pact quite fairly. (The proposal that Great Britain guarantee France against future aggression by Germany.—Ed.) It was proffered as an answer to those who claimed that the left bank of the Rhine should be annexed to France.

There was a strong party in France which urged M. Clemenceau to demand that the Rhine should be treated as the natural frontier of their country and that advantage should be taken of the overwhelming defeat of Germany to extend the boundaries of France to that fateful river. For unknown centuries, it has been fought over and across—a veritable river of blood. If French chauvinism had its way this time, the Rhine would, within a generation, once more overflow its banks and devastate Europe. The most moderate and insidious form this demand took was a proposal that the German provinces on the left bank of the Rhine should remain in French occupation until the treaty had been fulfilled.

The Hum of the Kindergartens.

The reparations alone—skillfully handled by the Quai d'Orsay—would preclude the possibility of ever witnessing fulfillment of the treaty. The argument by which they supported their claim was the defenselessness of the French frontier without some natural barrier. France had been twice invaded and overrun within living memory by her formidable neighbors. The German military power was now crushed and provinces of the German Empire had been restored to France and Poland, but the population of Germany was still 50 per cent greater than that of France and it was growing at an alarming rate, while the French population was at a standstill. German towns and villages were choked with sturdy children.

You cannot talk long to a Frenchman without realizing how this spectre of German childhood haunts France and intimidates her judgment. These children, it is said, are nourished on vengeance and one day the struggle will be resumed. And France has no natural defense against the avenging hordes that are now playing on the German streets, and with the hum of whose voices German kindergartens resound. The Rhine is the only possible line of resistance. Providence meant it to play that part and it is only the sinister interference of statesmen who love not France that deprives Frenchmen of this security for peace which a far-seeing nature has provided.

The fact that this involved subjection to a foreign yoke of millions of men of German blood, history and sympathies, and that the incorporation of so large an alien element, hostile in every fiber to French rule, would be a constant source of trouble and anxiety to the French Government whilst it would not merely provide an incentive to Germany to renew war, but would justify and dignify the attack by converting it into a war of liberation—all that had no effect on the Rhenish school of French politics.

This school is as powerful as ever. In one respect, it is more powerful, for in 1919 there was a statesman at the head of affairs who had the strength as well as the sagacity to resist their ill-judged claim.

But what about 1922? Where is the foresight and where is the strength? There is a real danger that the 15 years' occupation may, on one pretext or another, be indefinitely prolonged. When it comes to an end, will there be a Ministry in France strong enough to withdraw the troops?

Before the 15 years' occupation is terminated, will there be a Ministry or a series of Ministries strong enough to resist the demand put forward without cessation in the French press that the occupation be made effective?

Peace of Europe at Stake.

Upon the answer to these questions, the peace of Europe, the peace of the world, perhaps the life of our civilization, depend.

The pressure to do the evil thing that will once more spill rivers of human blood is insistent. The temptation is growing. The resistance is getting feebler.

America and Britain standing together can alone avert the catastrophe. But they can only do so by making it clear that the aggressor—whoever it may be—will have the invincible might of these two commonwealths arrayed against any nation that threatens to embroil the world in another conflict.

There are men in Germany who preach revenge. They must be told that a war of revenge will find the same allies side by side inflicting punishment on the peace breakers.

There are men in France who counsel annexation of territories populated by another race. They must be warned that such a step will alienate the sympathies of Britain and America and that when the inevitable war of liberation comes, the sympathies of America and Britain will be openly ranged on the side of those who are fighting for national freedom.

The time has come for saying these things, and if they are not said in high places, humanity will one day call those who occupy those places to the reckoning.

The pact, giving guarantees to France against possibility of German aggression, was designed to strengthen the hand of M. Clemenceau against the aggressive party which was then and still is anxious to commit France to the colossal error of annexing territory which has always been purely German. M. Clemenceau knows full well that Britain has been ready at any time during the last three years, up to a few months ago, to take upon herself the burden of that pact, with or without the United States of America. At Cannes, early this year, I made a definite proposal to that effect. It was a written offer made by me on behalf of the British Government to M. Briand, who was then Prime Minister of France. I was anxious to secure the co-operation of France in a general endeavor to clear up the European situation and establish real peace from the Urals to the Atlantic seaboard. French suspicions and French apprehensions constituted a serious difficulty in the way of settlement and I thought that if it were made clear to France that the whole strength of the British Empire could be depended upon to come to her aid, in event of threatened invasion, French opinion would be in a better mood to discuss the outstanding questions which agitate Europe.

DAVID LLOYD GEORGE.
This drawing of the British statesman was made from life by Jo Davidson, an American sculptor, at the Genoa conference in April of this year.

British Offer of Guarantees

International good will is essential to re-establishment of the shattered machinery of international commerce. With a great country like France, to which the issue of the war had given a towering position on the Continent of Europe, in a condition of fretfulness, it was impossible to settle Europe. Hence, the offer which was made by the British Government. M. Briand was prepared to welcome this offer and to proceed to a calm consideration of the perplexities of the European situation. It was agreed to summon a conference at Genoa to discuss the condition of European exchange, credit and trade. It was also resolved that an effort should be made to establish peace with Russia and to bring that great country once more inside the community of nations.

A great start was made on the path of genuine appeasement. The German Government was invited to send its Chief Minister to the Cannes conference in order to arrive at a workable settlement of the vexing question of reparations. The invitation received prompt response and Dr. Rathenau, accompanied by two or three leading Ministers and a retinue of financial experts, reached Cannes in time to take part in the discussion. The negotiations were proceeding helpfully and another week might have produced results which would have pacified the tumult of suspicious nations and inaugurated the promise of fraternity.

But, alas! satan is not done with Europe.

A ministerial crisis in France brought our hopes tumbling to the ground. The conference was broken up on the threshold of fulfillment. Suspicion once more seized the tiller and Europe, just as it seemed to be entering the harbor of good will, was swung back violently into the broken seas of international distrust. The offer made by Britain to stand alone on the pact guarantee to France was rejected with disdain. We were told quite rudely that it was of no use without military convention. This we declined to enter into. Europe has suffered too much from military conventions to warrant repetition of such a disastrous experiment. The pact with Britain lies for the moment in the wastepaper basket. But we never flung it there.

M. Clemenceau ought to have made his complaint in Paris against men of his own race and not in New York against Englishmen. With the pact went the effort to make peace in Europe. The history of Genoa is too recent to require any recapitulation of its features. The new French Ministry did not play the part of an inviting Government responsible for pressing to a successful end the objects of the Cannes conference, but rather that of a captious critic, who had to be persuaded along every inch of the road and who threatened at every obstacle to turn back and leave the rest of Europe to struggle along with its burden amid the mocking laughter of France.

The Voice From Paris.

I am not complaining of M. Barthou. He did his best under most humiliating conditions to remain loyal to the conference which his Government had scoffed in the summoning. But his task was an impossible one. He was hampered, embarrassed and tangled up at every turn. Whenever he took any step forward, he was lassoed by a dispatch from Paris. I am credibly informed that he received 800 of these communications in the course of the conference!

What could the poor man do under such bewildering conditions? The other European countries were perplexed and distracted. They were anxious that Genoa should end in a state of peace. There was no doubt about sincerity—the passionate sincerity of a desire for peace throughout Europe, but the European nations could not help seeing that one of the great Powers was working for a failure. They had a natural anxiety not to appear to take sides. It is a marvel that in spite of this unfortunate attitude adopted by the French Government a pact was signed which has, at any rate, preserved the peace in Eastern Europe for several months. Before the conference we had heard of armies being strengthened along frontiers and movements of troops with a menacing intent from the Baltic to the Black Sea. Genoa, at least, dispelled that cloud.

But a permanent peace has not yet been established and the pact with Russia will soon expire. I am, however, hopeful that the spirit of Genoa will stand between the contending armies and prevent the clash of swords.

All this, however, is leading me away from an examination of M. Clemenceau's suggestion that Britain did not keep faith in the matter of guaranteeing France against German aggression. The offer was definitely renewed at Cannes and M. Poincare has not accepted it. I have my own opinion as to why he has not done so. It is not merely that he does not wish to set the seal of his approval upon a predecessor's achievement. I am afraid the reason is of a more sinister kind.

The French Watch on the Rhine.

If France accepts Britain's guarantee of defense of her frontier, every excuse for annexing the left bank of the Rhine disappears. If this is the explanation, if the French Ministers have made up their minds that under no condition will they even at the end of the period of occupation withdraw from the Rhine, then a new chapter opens in the history of Europe and the world with a climax of horror such as mankind has never yet witnessed.

The German provinces of the left bank of the Rhine are intensely German in race, language, tradition and sympathies. There are 70,000,000 of Germans in Europe. A generation hence there may be a hundred millions. They will never rest content as long as millions of their fellow countrymen are under a foreign yoke on the other side of the Rhine and it will only be a question of time and opportunity for the inevitable war of liberation to begin.

We know what the last war was like. No one can foretell the terrors of the next. The march of science is inexorable and wherever it goes, it is at the bidding of men whether to build or to destroy. Is it too much to ask that America should in time take an effective interest in the development along the Rhine? To that extent, I am in complete accord with M. Clemenceau. Neither Britain nor America can afford to ignore the maneuvers going on along its banks.

It is a far cry from the Rhine to the Mississippi, but not as far as it used to be. There are now graves not far from the Rhine wherein lies the dust of men who less than six years ago came from the banks of the Mississippi.

A Former Klansman Speaks.

To the Editor of the Post-Dispatch:

ANSWERING S. C., Oklahoma City, in your issue of Nov. 27, I was a deluded member of the K. K. K. long before I think this member ever heard of it. He is, I am sure, one of the 96 per cent who belong to it for prejudice's sake only and is ignorant of its real object.

After being a member for a short time I discovered that the organization really had its birth in Europe, where prejudice is a fine political weapon. It has worked wonders in Belfast, Ireland, as well as India, Africa and Australia, and even in Canada. This person claims the klan upholds the laws of the United States and its Constitution and also protects the weak, innocent and defenseless from the indignities, wrongs and outrages of our laws—it stands, he says, for "America First." My convictions when I quit the darn thing were that it was solely and entirely to aid a foreign country whose Government wants its religion and its wishes and its Government the ideals we Americans must worship.

We are to become enemies of one another, for what? Why? We won the wars, Revolutionary, Civil, Mexican, Spanish and the great World War, fighting side by side—Jews, Catholics, Protestants, atheists, Mormons and numerous others, but all good Americans fighting as brothers. Now bigotry steps in through a powerful organization, backed by the money of powerful influences who begrudge us our prosperity, who hope to see us fight among ourselves and destroy our own Government just because it is not a kingdom.

I will ask all those who read this: Are you prejudiced in religion? If so, you are not worthy of the grand title, "American Citizen." TOM HARVEY.

Taxing Bond Issues.

To the Editor of the Post-Dispatch:

YOUR editorial of Nov. 21 on the inconsistency of imposing Federal taxation on the bond issues of states, cities and political subdivisions thereof is a concise exposition of facts.

It seems that an amendment to the Federal Constitution will be required in order to make legal such a means of additional taxation. If such a measure finally becomes operative, the effect, as you outline, will increase the burden of local taxation in all subdivisions of the United States—in all communities that must borrow money—and each taxpayer therein must pay proportionately more than is paid now. The plan would resolve itself into taking more taxes from the community that issues bonds and merely handing it over to the Federal Government. In no event would the lender of the money pay the increased tax, for he is now lending it cheaper, simply because such securities are now nontaxable. It logically follows, then, that any legislative act that will change the system from tax-exempt (as it is now) to nonexemption will cause the interest rate to advance to exactly meet whatever tax rate is arbitrarily imposed.

If the proposed issue ever comes up for solution, it will be well indeed for the common local taxpayer everywhere to awaken to the possible imposition. Suppose the St. Louis proposed bond issue is carried, contemplating, as would be nearly possible now, to borrow money at 4 per cent, then along comes a new Federal tax on new issues of such bonds requiring the lender to pay part of the income to the United States, then the St. Louis interest rate for such issues would advance to include the newly imposed Federal tax. Know Central America.

To the Editor of the Post-Dispatch:

IN less than a week will begin the conference in Washington of the Central American republics to discuss the matter of disarmament and the limitation of the armies of Central America. Now is, therefore, an opportune time to protest against the appalling and shameful ignorance of the average citizen of this country concerning Spanish-America.

"The Spanish race is treacherous. Central America is populated by savage Indians and negroes." This statement was made by a sixth-grade teacher in one of the local schools. Incidentally, let me say that the few Indian settlements are modern villages, and the negro has practically disappeared from the Isthmus. The first statement is so obviously untrue that it is unworthy a reply. Just as righteousness cannot be claimed by any nation as its sole property, so is evil found in every part of the great human race.

'San Salvador? That is a province in Mexico, is it not?" This question was asked by the directress of one of the most exclusive schools for women in this part of the country. I wonder how many of those who may read this know that San Salvador is the capital of the republic of El Salvador, one of the Central American republics represented in the coming conference?

Let us study to understand these people, to appreciate their culture and character. Let us study them, not as though they were strange beings from another planet, but with the sympathetic interest that is due each member of our great and powerful American family.

AMERICAN MEDDLING IN EUROPE.

Opponents of the administration's policy of isolation have been chiefly concerned over the neglect of a great opportunity—the opportunity to bring our vast power and prestige to bear on the pacification of Europe and all the nations. Cause of other concern has now arisen. We have missed a great opportunity, it is true. But the trouble right now is that our policy in Europe, while futile, is making us cordially hated.

Since the victory of 1918 the spokesmen and the press of Europe have held their temper, bended their knees in obeisance and made pretty speeches professing love and gratitude for America. Today the worm is beginning to turn. The United States, economically independent, in possession of nearly all the gold in the world, could refuse to co-operate in European rehabilitation without arousing active resentment. But when, while standing safely aloof, it undertakes to tell Europe what to do and what not to do, smoldering resentment begins to break into open fire.

Ambassador Harvey, champion dodger of American responsibility in Europe, presumed in a speech a few days ago to advise the allied Premiers "not to come to decisions in a spirit of hate but in the spirit of tolerance." Then he warned that "though America may not be able to influence these decisions, she may not tolerate them." America would have been able to influence allied decisions had not Lodge and Hughes and Harding and Harvey spurned the opportunity out of partisan hatred and greed for political power. Imagine the agent of a European Power publicly declaring that his country would not tolerate American decisions as to Mexico or Brazil!

Ambassador Child, at the Lausanne conference as an observer, presumed to set forth the view of the United States with reference to the settlement of the Dardanelles question without offering American guarantees, for the protection of the settlement as outlined.

Now, as the allied Premiers are meeting in London, the fear is expressed that America will further "butt into" European settlements without taking commensurate responsibility. Never mind what the settlements are. There may be sordid deals between the allies for some other people's territory and resources. But since America takes no responsibility in Europe, what right has it to dictate to those who do? Not only has it no right, but it is losing its friends and its prestige by meddling where it will not play ball.

MURDER AS A CAMPAIGN ISSUE.

The Herrin massacre, in which 20 men were killed and 34 wounded, has been made the dominant issue in the election to be held next Tuesday by the United Mine Workers of Illinois. Frank Farrington, State president, is asking re-election on the ground that he has stood by the men charged with that crime. Nine of these men, held in the Williamson County Jail because the evidence against them is so positive and the presumption of guilt so great that bond was denied them, have written to the rank and file of the miners, "from behind prison bars," asking them to re-elect Farrington.

In this situation Farrington is trying to continue himself in office by representing the prosecution of the Herrin murderers as an attack on unionism and calling upon the miners to rally around him and sustain him in his justification of the crime.

The trial, of course, is nothing of the sort. It is simply a trial of certain individuals charged with murders which Attorney-General Brundage has called the most brutal in all the records of crime. If the miners of the State choose to submit to an involuntary assessment for prolonged and expensive defense of these men, that is their affair. It is true that they are entitled to the presumption of innocenee until proven guilty. But the issue which Farrington attempts to raise, for his own benefit, constitutes a defense not of the alleged criminals but of the crime. The miners of Illinois are asked to approve his approval of the Herrin massacre by keeping him in office.

Attorney-General Brundage has declared his belief that if Farrington would permit a secret referendum of the rank and file of the miners' union he would find that the vast majority of its members are bitterly opposed to the murder of unarmed men.

The Herrin massacre did more than anything that ever happened in the history of organized labor to destroy favorable public opinion. A remnant of favor has remained on the presumption that the murders were the acts of a few, not sanctioned by the many. If the many, by their votes, approve the crime, they will lose even this remnant.

THE STRAITS SETTLEMENT.

The Turkish counter proposal for the settlement of the Dardanelles problem, involving control of the straits, is surprisingly moderate, and appears to be considerably nearer to the allied than to the Russian plan. This leaves Russia in the rather awkward position of having demanded more for the Turks than the Turks demand for themselves.

Russia's solicitude, of course, is no more dictated by anxiety for Turkey's rights than Turkish moderation is inspired by pure unselfishness. Russia objects to allied control of the straits because they constitute Russia's southern outlet to the sea, and Russia does not regard the allies as friends. Turkey fails to demand full control of the straits because she has not the finances to construct the requisite fleet and land fortifications. The allies want to get as much as they can for themselves because—well, because that is the nature and business of diplomats.

The ultimate settlement, it appears to be fairly certain, will be one that leaves the allies virtually in control, with Great Britain's naval power preponderant in those waters. Tchitcherin, for Russia, suggests war in such an event. The threat may not be taken too seriously now, but it is obvious, even at this time, that the settlement must be made on a partisan basis. The very best to be hoped for is some equitable balance-of-power arrangement, pregnant, as all such arrangements are, with the seed of future trouble.

This is inevitable as long as the old diplomatic system of deciding international problems persists. Mankind has been presented with only one alternative. The only medium through which such defects and dangers can be eliminated and avoided is a League of Nations, with a membership including Turkey, Russia and the United States of America.

THE CHRISTMAS FESTIVAL.

It is estimated that at least $15,000 will be needed this year to assure the success of the twenty-third Post-Dispatch Christmas Festival, that great Christmas institution of St. Louis which annually carries holiday cheer into hundreds of homes which, through poverty or misfortune, would otherwise be cheerless.

For more than a score of years the Christmas Festival has been a unique and beautiful expression of the community's Christmas spirit, in which thousands of St. Louisans have co-operated with voluntary contributions of money and service. It is not a charity, but an act of hospitality. It is an organized endeavor to make sure that everyone in St. Louis has a share of Christmas cheer and that faith in the spirit of Santa Claus is preserved in the hearts of little children. Every man, woman and child can and should participate in this service to those less fortunate than they.

Subscription lists will be sent to business establishments and offices within a day or so and contributions of any amount are welcome, from the penny to the large-sized check, according to ability. All contributions will be acknowledged in the Post-Dispatch.

When you encounter an opportunity to aid in the Christmas Festival work, do not pass it by and deprive some child who has known little laughter and much want of the rightful heritage of childhood—the right to expect the coming of Santa Claus on Christmas Day. There is no greater sorrow in a world of sorrows than that of a child with an empty Christmas stocking. The power to keep every child in St. Louis from this disappointment depends entirely on the generosity of St. Louisans, and the Post-Dispatch again asks their support and material assistance, confident that, as in former years, the appeal will be answered with overflowing liberality.

BALKAN WAR FASHIONS.

Though it may be true that nothing succeeds like success the Balkan states are teaching us that nothing fails like failure. For not bringing home the bacon in the drive against the Turks the Greek Cabinet Ministers who undertook the drive were taken out and shot. It is dangerous to set political styles in the Balkans. Capital punishment is now being passionately pleaded for two of the Ministers of the former Cabinet which led Bulgaria into the great war on the side of Germany. Germany lost. Hence the crime. Had Germany won the same Ministers would have become national idols.

Such punishments may have an arresting effect hereafter on Balkan leaders whose palms itch for the hilt of the sword. At the same time we hesitate to recommend the method as a sure cure for militarism.

PANETELA.

YES, Luella,
Prohibition
Has its troubles
Thick and fast;
One can sometimes
Fairly wonder
How the thing
Will turn at last.
What with sentiment
Against it
And the consequential
Cost,
Almost any philosophic
Mode of reasoning
Is lost.

That Mr. Harding, Rising with
A dreadful sigh,
Says we can't Go on divided
Fifty-fifty
Wet and dry.
Either we Must keep the letter
Of the law
Secure from taint,
Or amend it
In a manner
That will Minimize complaint.

In the country,
Little girlie,
Where the people
Hate saloons,
Prohibition
Is accounted
As the loftiest
Of boons.
Farmers who would Drive their wagons
Off of bridges,
Being stewed,
Would not think
Of a reversion
By which old times
Were renewed.

In the cities,
Sweet Luella,
Where the road
Is safe and wide,
People have
A predilection
Somehow
For the other side.

We are told that the Democrats in the House voted against the ship subsidy for party reasons—which will indicate to you, if you are interested in it, the uselessness of the minority in Congress.

"Merry Christmas! Mr. Letter Carrier."

That's what we say to him, and now here are a few timely suggestions by which you can help to make the gladsome holidays still happier for the carriers, the postoffice clerk and the railway mail clerk:

1. Don't bother to write the address legibly. These fellows are experts, or should be, and perhaps they can guess it correctly.

2. Either omit your own address from the upper lefthand corner, or else use that hen-track bank signature of which you are so proud. They ought to know who you are, anyway. Write all addresses with a soft lead pencil. When it smudges, that draws hard on the guessing instinct.

3. In sending the folks a box containing a glass jar of jam, a bottle of perfume, and a few other glass articles, just wrap each piece in one thickness of pink tissue. When the folks find the stuff all amalgamated, they'll be glad and proud and happy.

4. Don't write the name of the state in full. A package that goes to Wilson, "Vt." or "Col.," instead of Wilson, "Ut." or "Cal.," will take only a week or so more to get on the right track. Those postoffice fellows ought to know which Wilson your folks use for a home address.

5. Never be so meticulous as to put your own address inside the parcel. If the outside label comes off, it's the fault of the postoffice, and they should rectify the error.

6. Don't hurry. Haste is unseemly. Just wait until Dec. 23 to mail your package to New York for Christmas. Then it will go along in company with about 10,000,000 other packages, all planned to get there the same day. Those postoffice fellows have nothing to do but deliver them.

7. Don't worry about correct postage. You haven't time to find whether destination is in the third or fifth zone, or just how much the blamed thing weighs. Just guess at it, and mail the box. The carrier may not lose an hour getting it adjusted.

8. Don't bother to call the superintendent of mail office (Olive 5200 or Central 7920) to find out about packing, etc. You don't want to disturb him, even though he's anxious to tell you all about it.

Selah! GENSEC.

Sir: Is this the flavor of your school of two-story thinking?

"There is nothing true, and if there is we do not know it."

Ye gods! Here is a mess of philosophy at logic or confusion—a mess surely. There is nothing true. A positive declaration that truth doesn't exist. "And if there is," an expressed doubt as to whether truth exists or not. "We do not know it," a positive declaration that we know nothing of truth; in other words, we do not know that anything is true; therefore, there is nothing true. This "philosophy" would fill the thickest-headed, most ignorant ass in town with assurance. The best tests for philosophy are these: If it makes us grow, it is true; if it causes us to shrink, to become narrow-minded, bigoted, and leaves us more ignorant than before, false.

While philosophying we should always bear in mind that philosophers can be stupid as easily as physicians, statesmen or hod carriers; none of us are immune. J. H.

The report that Mr. Ziegfeld has made a flat offer for the former Sultan's harem and intends bringing that bevy of hand-picked Oriental beauties over for the Follies, will probably excite the ladies of the former harem less than those of the present chorus.

The Railroad Labor Board decided that what are known as living wages for railroad employes are impracticable. Nobody knew what could be done about it, so Mr. Harding suggests that the board be abolished.

THE NEED OF DEMOCRACY.

GLENN FRANK in the December Century.

AUTOCRACY is as dead in industry as it is in government. There is autocracy a-plenty in both fields, but it is a hangover from a dead day. The stars in their courses are fighting against it. The future belongs to democracy, but to a democracy examined and redefined democracy. To democracy we have given to democracy an uncritically emotional allegiance, but we are coming to realize that democracy does not mean government by a referendum of blockheads. Democracy cannot afford to destroy the authentic aristocracy of superior intelligence. More than any other form of government and way of life, it requires great leadership. Democracy has had the habit of stopping leadership whenever it began to lead. Now, democracy in industry must be a democracy that works. It must be ruthlessly analyzed and compelled to "deliver the goods." Industry must take over political democracy as we have known it, but must make democracy a realistic and workable thing that protects the dignity of the individual and promotes the efficiency of the institution at one and the same time.

PASSPORTS.

From the San Francisco Bulletin.

TO many Americans the most objectionable feature of the war was the necessity of securing passports. As a people we do not take kindly to being officially inspected, registered and tagged. We prefer to think that the simple statement, "I am an American citizen," is passport enough for any country in the world. But however may be endurable in war time, there is no need for enduring inconvenience in time of peace. Here we are, four years after the signing of the armistice, with a passport position no better than it was during the conflict. Thousands of business men and commercial agents are compelled to secure their papers whenever they have to go out of the country, and while they formerly paid only $2 for a passport in war time, they must now pay $10. As far as the tourist end of the proposition is concerned it is simply a matter of revenue, but to business agents it is a real penalty and not one imposed by some of our most active competitors. France, Great Britain and Belgium have an arrangement whereby citizens move back and forth without passports. It is not a question that personally affects the great mass of our people, but as the most progressive of the nations we should not lag behind others in a matter that more than any other affects our reputation for freedom.

ART'S REJUVENATING INFLUENCE.

From the New York World.

PADEREWSKI at the piano again in Carnegie Hall does more than erase his five years' absence from the concert stage. In effect, a musical matinee favorite of a former era appears for a new generation of music-lovers to applaud and appraise. Apparently there has been no loss of the magic touch; the consummate artistry is still at his command. It can recreate the old emotional atmosphere. Is there a more convincing demonstration to be desired of the rejuvenating influence of art? The years sit lightly on the master who can weave for a younger audience of admirers the same spell he wove for their parents. In the 30 years since the young Polish performer first roused New York concert-goers to enthusiasm he has added to fame as a pianist a hardly less brilliant fame as patriot and statesman. His services to his country are one of the stirring pages of contemporary history. But it is Paderewski the artist who has first claim on the affections of America, and his return to the piano inspires in them a new interest.

maintaining politeness in their tones, took at it, with many a verbal cut and thrust, till finally Senator Lodge formally proposed that the session be adjourned.

However, as said, the filibuster was unique in the small amount of talk it produced. Filibusters in the past have relied for their success mainly on long speeches. A haggard Senator clutching at his desk for support after 10 hours' talk, taking bites of a ham sandwich between sentences; other Senators stretched out on lounges, in carpet slippers—such is the picture that used to be conjured up by the word "filibuster." That picture is no longer true. The 1922 mode is vastly different. No participant need strain his voice or go hungry. A good time may be had by all present and frequent trips to the cloak rooms and the Senate restaurant. No ponderous tomes need be dragged into the Senate chamber to furnish ammunition after the speaker's stock of original ideas has run out. One need talk only briefly and chattily, on such topics as may be suggested by the moment.

New Method Most Effective.

That was the manner of the great anti-Dyer bill filibuster, and doubtless, unless the Senate rules be changed, it will be the manner of the future. The old method was more spectacular but the new is certainly more effective.

Of the talk that was let loose, comparatively little was about the bill itself. Senators disported themselves in all sorts of pleasant conversational excursions. They talked, for example, about the Hall-Mills murder case of New Brunswick, N. J.; about rural credits and the price of wheat, about the good old days when Thomas B. Reed was the Speaker of the House, about profiteers and profiteering, about the killing of the movie director, William Desmond Taylor, at Los Angeles, about the anti-Japanese land laws of California, and about themselves—a good deal about themselves.

The list just scratches the surface of things they talked about.

But the "dilatory motion," not the opening of the floodgates of oratory, was the trick that did the work. The method was very simple. It is surprising that filibusters of the old days did not use it more. The new tactics were built around the standing rule of the Senate that "the presiding officer having taken the chair and a quorum being present, the journal (that is, the minutes) of the preceding day shall be read and any mistake made in the entries corrected."

"The reading of the journal," this rule goes on, "shall not be suspended unless by unanimous consent, and when any motion shall be made to amend or correct the same, it shall be deemed a privileged question, and proceeded with until disposed of."

Compelled Reading of Journal.

It is not possible for any business to be transacted till the journal has been approved. Ninety-nine days out of a hundred the reading of the journal—a lengthy process—is dispensed with and the journal is approved by unanimous consent. All that the Democrats did to make their filibuster airtight was to refuse unanimous consent, thus compelling the reading of the journal in full, and to propose changes in the journal by way of correcting "mistakes." So perfect was their strategy and its execution that when the Republicans caved in and agreed to send the Dyer bill to cold storage, the journal of no one of the four days of the filibuster—Tuesday, Wednesday, Friday and Saturday—had been approved.

This roughly, is the way the new type of filibuster works: The Senate meets at noon, only a handful of members being present, and the chaplain prays; a filibusterer suggests the absence of a quorum; the clerk calls the roll call and more members drift in; the Republican whip asks for unanimous consent to dispense with the reading of the journal of the previous day; objection is made and the reading proceeds; members drift out of the chamber; again the suggestion of no quorum is thrown at the long-suffering presiding officer; the Republican whip makes the point of order that the reading of the journal cannot be interrupted by a call for a quorum; the long-suffering presiding officer, Calvin Coolidge of the unhappy countenance, sustains the point of order, the maker of the point of order appeals to the Senate from the ruling of the chair and demands a "yea" and "nay" vote; the vote is ordered; bells clang all over the Capitol summoning Senators to the vote; they vote and wander away to other pursuits; the tally shows the ruling of the chair sustained; the reading of the journal proceeds; a filibusterer detects a "mistake" in the journal and moves an amendment, another call for a quorum and a vote on the amendment; other votes on other amendments, varied with votes on motions until the majority, having had enough for the day, consents to an adjournment, with the journal yet to be approved. The Democrats, as the event showed, could have kept up the filibuster indefinitely.

Harrison an Able Sleuth.

The sleuth appointed by the Democrats to find "mistakes" in the journal was Senator Harrison of Mississippi. He never failed to produce a "mistake" when one was needed. The first that he unearthed was the failure of the journal to give the names of the Senators voting for and against a certain measure. The mere record of the result, said Harrison, was not enough. It made no difference that the names were in the Congressional Record; they must also be in the journal, or the journal would be fatally defective.

The journal, chimed in Underwood, was "the monument for future ages." Surely the Senators did not wish to "camouflage" the journal for posterity. He quite agreed with Harrison that the names should be written in.

Senator Swanson of Virginia was grieved to note that only a few Senators were present to hear the discussion of a question so momentous. He suggested the absence of a quorum.

"Clang" The little electric bells brought in the Senators; the roll was called and a quorum found to be present. Democrats proved by digging into precedents that the Harrison motion was debatable; having proved that fact they didn't care to debate it; the vote was taken on the motion and the journal was amended.

The uniqueness of this perfect filibuster did not consist alone in the method employed. It was unique also in the frank admission of Senator Underwood, the Democratic leader, that it was a filibuster. Generally, when Senators are delaying the passage of a bill, they profess that that is the last thing in the world they would think of doing. They are merely giving the bill the benefit of a thoroughly discussion. The word "filibuster" is not in their vocabulary. But in this case Underwood was perfectly candid. He said that the Dyer bill was a "force" bill and that the minority was not going to permit it to be brought up. There would be no business transacted in the Senate, he said, until the majority promised to lay the bill aside.

"All men here know," said Underwood, "that under the rules of the Senate when 15 or 20 or 25 men say that you cannot pass a certain bill, it cannot be passed."

One of the "mistakes" of the journal which Harrison demanded should be repaired was the omission of the prayer delivered by the Senate Chaplain. Said Harrison:

"What is a hundred years from now your great-great-great-grandchildren should look over the Journal of yesterday and discover that no mention is made of the fact that there was prayer yesterday in opening this body, and when they should take the proceedings of the following day as they will appear in the Journal tomorroy and should read that their great-great-gread-grandfathers voted against my motion to amend the Journal so that the prayer might be incorporated in the Journal? Why those children of tomorroy would hang their heads in shame over the action of their ancestors. So we must change this policy, if it has been a policy, and start a new one today, so that the record of this body that is to be handed down to future generations will reveal the fact that we had prayer in opening this august body."

St. Charles Editor New Postmaster.

E. L. Renno, editor of the St. Charles Cosmos-Monitor and chairman of the Republican County Committee, has been appointed Posmaster of St. Charles. A message from Senator Spencer, received Friday, informed him of the Senate's comfirmation. Renno will succeed Casper Ehrhardt, who has served since 1913. There were two other candidates, William H. Kansteiner, present Assistant Postmaster, and C. H. Thoelke. The men took a Civil Service examination.

BILL REVISING CITY TRAFFIC LAWS DRAFTED

Legislature to Be Asked to Create Traffic Division in Circuit Court.

A bill revising and codifying all of the existing city traffic regulations into one ordinance has been drafted by Roy F. Britton, general counsel of the Automobile Club of Missouri, and a member of the legal subcommittee of a general Traffic Committee appointed recently by the Mayor to consider traffic problems.

Another tentative measure, for submission to the Legislature, has been drafted by Britton, creating three additional circuit judgeships, one to preside over a proposed division of the Circuit Court, which would handle only traffic cases.

The bill proposes that one of the Judges be assigned to the Juvenile Court and the third be assigned to a division handling equity cases, these courts now having crowded dockets. This would increase the number of Circuit Judges to 19.

Bills Ready for Committee.

Both measures have been turned over to City Counselor Hald, a member of the Traffic Legal Committee, and will be acted upon by the committee at a meeting to be called by Oliver T. Remmers, chairman.

With the exception of the speed limit, few changes in the traffic regulations are proposed in the revision ordinance, Britton said yesterday. One of the chief objects of the measure, he said, is to incorporate all of the regulations in one ordinance.

The speed limit is placed at 25 miles an hour, Britton said, but great emphasis is made on careful driving. "Under this clause, the speed at which a motorist is driving will not count as much as the amount of care he exercises in driving," Britton stated. "He might be driving only six to eight miles an hour, under this clause, and still be arrested for carelessness."

Chief Trouble Heretofore.

Placing the speed limit at 25 miles an hour would make the city regulation coincide with the State law.

"The chief trouble heretofore," Britton declared, "has been too much effort to emphasize limits on speed and not enough enforcement of careful driving."

Indorsement of a traffic court plan was given recently by the Traffic Committee, but the plan at that time was to convert one of the City Courts for this purpose, or establish a new City Court to handle traffic cases only.

Establishment of a Circuit Court for this class of cases would enable the prosecution of offenders against both the city and State laws in the same court, Britton said.

"While it would appear that a State Court would not have jurisdiction over offenders against city ordinances," he added, "I believe this court would have that power. We have investigated and believe the city charter authorizes such trials in Circuit Court."

Status of Police Precedent.

He pointed out that the city police were in reality State officers and said it has been held in legal tests that they may act either as State or city officers.

Provision for the two other Judges was made to relieve congestion in the courts, it was said. Judge Garesche has been preseding over the Juvenile Court, in addition to Division 15, one of the Courts of Domestic Relations.

The bill providesthat three Judges would be appointed by the Governor to serve until Jan. 1, 1925, when they would be replaced by three Judges to be chosen at the November election in 1924.

You Owe Your Child the Educational Advantages of

The Book of Knowledge

The Children's Encyclopedia

10,000 Educational Pictures. 350 Colored Plates.

The Book of Knowledge, with an introduction by Dr. John H. Finley, has a greater sale than any other educational work in the world. It is published in five languages.

Children are naturally curious about what goes on in the great strange world about them. They look at the stars and ask us what makes them twinkle. They listen to the songs of the birds and ask us their names. When children have the wonderful Book of Knowledge, instead of bothering their parents with these and similar difficult questions, they find the information that they want for themselves. In this way childish curiosity is turned into practical knowledge that will be of inestimable value in later life.

The Book of Knowledge has sixteen great departments, and contains 10,000 fascinating pictures that tell a story or explain a fact in such a way that a child can not fail to understand.

Specimen Page Book containing 82 pages, 130 pictures with colored plates and the contents of this great work, free on request.

UPWARD MOVEMENT IN LIBERTY BONDS MARKS CLOSING DAYS OF WEEK

RAILROAD TRAFFIC HOLDS; EARNINGS OF OCTOBER GAIN

Securities Markets Still Dominated by Influences and Prices Move Within a Trading Area.

By Leased Wire From the New York Bureau of the Post-Dispatch.

NEW YORK, Dec. 9.—The Evening Post in its copyrighted weekly financial review says:

"With the securities markets still dominated by professional influences and with prices moving within a trading area, industrial and trade conditions continue encouraging. The volume of railroad traffic is holding up in an entirely unprecedented manner, and the steel industry is working at approximately 80 per cent of capacity, and the prospects for holiday trade are good. Our central banking system gives evidence of added credit demands of the season, but it is absolutely clear that the supply of money is more than adequate for any prospective needs. With commodity prices remaining firm, the outlook for the year-end must be judged satisfactory when measured by any reasonable standard.

Railroad Earnings.

"Final reports as to railroad earnings during October confirm the first impressions as to a distinct improvement over September. Net for Class 1 roads in the former month of $85,000,000, compares $58,000,000 in the latter. To be sure, these roads earned only 4.05 per cent on their valuation in October, as compared with the 'fair' figure of 5.75, but allowance must be made for the extraordinary expenses arising from the shopmen's strike. As the Commission has pointed out in its annual report, this autumn's earnings in no sense offer a fair test of the railroad's potential profits under normal conditions. Furthermore, it is likely that the November showing will be relatively good, since the freight movement has fallen off but little and the month is called on, in the calculation of earnings of valuation, to provide a much smaller absolute return than October.

"Looking at our domestic situation from the political standpoint, it would seem that some undue apprehensions have been aroused. The Secretary of the Treasury's report shows that the steady improvement in the Government's finances is being maintained and indicates that the remainder of this fiscal year's refunding program will pass off without any important disturbance. The report also shows that the Secretary remains committed to his sound financial principles and that no momentous changes in taxation are contemplated. Similarly, the President's message suggests that the administration is not likely to weaken before the onslaughts of the radicals. Upon the one hand, it appears that the administration will have trouble in persuading the new Congress to meet its wishes, it is even more evident that the radicals will be unable to carry through their own program.

Climb in Sterling.

"Sterling's persistent climb perhaps has been the most striking feature of the week. Increasing to $4.51 this exchange added more than 5 cents to the price at which it ended the previous week and rose over 11 cents above the quotation on Nov. 11, when Great Britain made the second $50,000,000 payment on her debt to this country. Not only does this rise measure the strength of the British trade position; it reflects the upward revision of Britain's international credit rating. A country which can pay $100,000,000 on its external debt within nine months without interfering with the upward trend of its exchange and which can do this in a time of extraordinary trade depression must be admitted to have a very great reserve financial power. It may also be pointed out that while commodity prices have been rising here those in Great Britain have been falling. This is simply another way of saying that the purchasing power of the dollar has been falling while that of the pound has been rising, a condition which but an elementary knowledge of economics will tell us must be higher rates for sterling.

"Meanwhile all Europe is waiting to see what will develop at the impending conference of the Allied Premiers."

"The stock market gave some further evidence this morning that the acute pressure for the sale of large lists of stock has been lifted, temporarily at least. While price changes were not impressive in the main and trading was on a rather limited scale, the market appeared to have a power of absorbing offerings which it has not possessed in recent weeks. It was noticed, too, that the Street was beginning to take notice of favorable bits of news and that the morning's announcements of heavy car loadings, an abnormally large amount of building construction and the generally optimistic nature of the weekly trade reviews had some effect on sentiment. The bond market was quiet but firm. There were no special features except that the tendency to weakness on the part of some of the more speculative issues appeared to be absent today.

Exchange Market Quiet.

"Foreign exchange trading was unusually quiet. With the exception of a fairly brisk demand for Norwegian currency, which advanced 6 points to 12.90, a new high for the year, transactions were few and far between. Sterling held steady at $4.50, unchanged from yesterday. French francs moved up about 4 points and then dropped back to virtually closing quotation of 7.07½ cents.

"The weekly statement of the Clearing House showed an increase in surplus of $20,615,600, the total standing at $22,146,410. Loans and discounts decreased by over $29,000,000 and there was also a loss in demand deposits amounting to $66,562,000. Except for a small decrease in time deposits other items, including reserves and circulation, made increases during the week.

Metals at St. Louis.

Lead was unchanged in St. Louis today at $7.20@7.25 the Spot zinc also unchanged at $6.20@6.25 per 100 lbs.

CONTINUED RISE IN BRITISH EXCHANGE OUTSTANDING EVENT OF WEEK

APPRECIATION IN BRITISH EXCHANGE FEATURE OF WEEK

Further Gain of 4½ Cents in Sterling—French Exchange Improves After Early Week Decline—Swiss Rate Advances.

By Leased Wire From the New York Bureau of the Post-Dispatch.

NEW YORK, Dec. 9.—The Evening Post in its copyrighted weekly foreign exchange review today says:

"Foreign exchange movements were dominated all through the week by the continued appreciation in the market position of sterling exchange, which continued its vigorous upward movement, making a further gain of 4½ cents and selling above $4.57 for the first time since the end of June, 1918. A downward movement was then in progress, following the withdrawal in March, 1919, of the peg at $4.76, which was not checked until sterling reached its low level of $3.18 on Feb. 4, 1920. The strength this week was due directly to heavy sales of dollars in London on Wednesday and Thursday, but bankers here had no information to give as to the source of this selling of dollars in London.

"The possibility exists that the steady flow of gold to this country had increased English credits to such an extent that a reverse movement of these credits is in order. The offerings of export bills, which had assumed large proportions late in November, have almost entirely disappeared, and reference was made to the closing down of spindles in England as foreshadowing a cessation of export cotton purchase here for a long period.

"There were intervals of weakness in French exchange, checks on Paris declining at times when sterling advanced, but in the last half of the week French exchange also became strong. The group of former neutrals, Dutch, Swiss and Scandinavian, moved in unison with London, and some of those rates advanced to new levels for the year. Guilders ranged from 39.64 to 39.98, a new high for the year, and Norwegian crowns rose from 18.58 to 19.04.

"Swiss exchange made a sharp advance on Monday, when there was urgent buying on the defeat of the proposition to tax capital in Switzerland. Greek exchange was in a condition of collapse, drachmas selling on Wednesday at the new low record of 1.02.

"Indian exchange continued strong, rupees selling at 30.35, a new high for the year. South American exchanges also were strong. Argentine paper pesos moving up from 37.30 to 37.87. Exchange on Uruguay rose from 82.87 to 84.87, a new high for the year. Canadian exchange, after holding at par to a slight premium, yielded to below parity."

OUTLOOK SAID TO FAVOR INDUSTRIAL SECURITIES

Special Cable to the Post-Dispatch and New York Evening Post.

LONDON, Dec. 9.—Arthur W. Kiddy, editor of Bankers' Magazine and financial editor of the London Morning Post, in financial review today says:

"Unless unemployment relief loans involve serious fresh inflation, it is believed that monetary conditions will show little change for some time to come, partly because only a small revival in trade is expected. The recent rise in commodity prices and expansion in banking advances indicate that any important trade revival might soon tax banking resources in spite of the present ease in money and many consider that British banking capital should be further expanded.

"The general outlook regarding securities still favors industrials in preference to fixed interest issues, the arguments being that unfavorable European developments have an unfavorable effect on the latter, while good developments, if leading to increased trade might have a similar effect. Industrials, however, while sensitive to unfavorable European developments, would benefit by a settlement of the reparations and other problems as promising increased trade."

BEEF STEERS SELL OFF, LATER REACTING

COMPARATIVE RECEIPTS.	Last Week.	Prev. Week.	Year Ago.
Cattle & Calves	35,163	30,236	24,489
Hogs	81,083	75,949	78,068

Under fair receipts and moderate demand, the cattle market ruled steady to lower at the St. Louis National Stock Yards during the week just ended. Beef steers, the offering of which was materially larger than the previous week, ruled 25c lower in the early trade. Most of this loss, however, was regained on the close. The offering, as previous weeks, consisted almost entirely of common and medium consignments. The top, $10.25 per cwt. was paid for a load of yearling steers averaging 1005 lbs. The bulk of all killing steers varied in price from $7 to $8.75, some of the better kinds hanging up to $10.00. Except for a string of Kansas steers at $5.65 and seven loads of Texas "G" at $5.60, virtually the entire beef offering was from native territory. Butcher yearlings showed the most severe loss of any other class of cattle, values for these ruling off 25c to 50c. A few of the best lightweights sold in the $9 and $10 columns, though the bulk graded common to medium and sold from $5 to $7.50. Butcher cows, the bulk of which sold from $4 to $5, showed no essential change, although canners and cutters at the low time were 25c to 40c lower than a week ago. A small part of this loss was regained on the close, leaving prices 25@50c down. Bulls, on the close were quotable at $2.90 to $3.25 and canners at $2.35 to $2.50. Bulls closed about steady, the bulk of bolognas selling from $3.75 to $4.25. Stockers and feeder steers under moderate receipts and demand, showed a stronger tone over 25c the week. Sales ranged from $3.50 to $6.85. Veal calves suffered at $1 decline, whereas best lights sold at $10 and $10.25 largely on the close the previous week, $9 took the best in the final session of the week just closed.

Hog Run Liberal.

Hog receipts for the week just closed show the liberal total of 94,000 head, as compared with 76,000 the previous week (one day short by reason of the Thanksgiving holiday) and 79,000 head the corresponding time a year ago. Quality has been fairly good, taken as a whole, running mainly to butcher weights, light and fat. There have been very few prime heavy hogs 250 lbs. and up among the week's arrivals. Eastern shippers and local St. Louis butchers were in the competition each day and they took the big end of the offering. Packers' major buying days fairly well, but generally they were late entering the market and tried to bear down whenever possible. The opening days of the week, Monday and Tuesday constituted the low period, most of the good hogs clearing from the $8.10 to $8.25. From the middle session till the close improvement was noted and the week finished with anything but butcher hogs 150 lbs. and up, about a dime higher than the close of the preceding week. Strong-weight pigs were up 5c to 10c for the week, but the little peevers, stuff under 100 lbs. in weight, is practically unchanged and has not been in good demand all week. Packer sows generally steady with last week's close and the same is true with regard to stags. Daily clearance have been light and this reflecting the healthy conditions of the market and indicating that the killers want supplies in large numbers at current prices prevailing. At the week's close quotations are as follows: Choice heavy swine, 150 lbs. and up, $8.25 to $8.40; shipping and butcher hogs, 160 to 240 lbs., $8.40 to $8.50; light lights, 150 to 160 lbs., $8.35 to $8.50; pigs, 110 to 125 lbs., $8.20 to $8.30; light lights, under 100 lbs., $7.75 to $8.10; packer sows, $7 to $7.50; stags, $5.50 to $6; immune sick pigs, 80 to 100 lbs., $6.50 to $6.75; feeding sows, vaccinated, $8 to $8.25.

Sheep Prices Higher.

A fairly good number of sheep and lambs arrived on the market last week, but there was a good demand and prices were on the advance most of the week and at the close of the week they were 25@50c higher than the close of the previous week and they also showed to be quite a bit higher than at this time last year. A good many fed Western lambs and sheep arrived. They were all fed in local territory. Good to choice fat lambs sold at $14.50@15 and the buyers were quite anxious for them, while the fair to medium grades moved at $13.50@14.25, plain ones $12.50@13.25 and the culls met a large extent at $10@11. Buyers are not complaining about the culls to the extent they frequently do, sheep like lambs, found ready sale at higher prices, most of the good native sheep bringing $6@6.50, and good fat culls $5@5.50, feeding lambs and bucks $2@3.50 and canners $1@2. Some plain and heavy ewes sold during the week at $4@4.50.

Horses and Mules.

Receipts of horses on commission at approximately 300 head were fully ample to satisfy trade requirements and the market ruled steady on most all kinds. Weakness, where shown, was confined largely to the plainer consignments, of which a good part of the run consisted. The better grades of Southern and Eastern horses held to a steady level.

Mules, of which there was a liberal run of approximately 1200 head on commission, likewise were steady on best, slow and weak on the plain, common kinds. Offerings sold over the alleys and at auctions and a fair clearance was made.

SHARP ADVANCE IN WHEAT MARKS WEEK'S FINAL TRADE

CHICAGO, Dec. 9.—Wheat gained in price this week owing more or less to proposed farm credit legislation and to buying based on President Harding's message. Bulls in the wheat market were at first under a disadvantage in having to overcome price setbacks due to world shipments, the largest since 1920, and to stock market weakness that on successive days brought about a decided increase of wheat selling. Falling off in the United States visible supply total and in receipts at primary points was of some help in rallying prices, and so, too, were private estimate that the domestic winter crop acreage showed 10 per cent decrease with the crop condition seven points below the average.

It was only, however, after bills had been introduced both in the Senate and House at Washington to add $48,000,000 to the Government's $12,000,000 subscription to the farm loan system that any upward tendency in the wheat market became at all pronounced. Rains reported as interfering with the Argentine harvest ment was accelerated in connection with the President's message, much more than offsetting reports of weakness in values at Liverpool.

Corn and oats prices were rather irregular as a result of evening up of accounts in the December delivery.

Free selling of lard by houses with trade in provisions.

Wheat closed strong at the week-end session on the Merchants' Exchange.

Chicago dispatch telling of unconfirmed report of introduction of a foreign credit bill in the House, the advocating of such a proposition by the farm bloc of Congress, coupled and a private report of plate offerings at Liverpool being withdrawn were bullish influences at work.

After opening unchanged, wheat prices sold up fractionally in the early period of trade. Chief futures also were better. Liverpool wheat closed unchanged to ¼d lower. The President's plea for greater credit facilities for farmers probably was basis of some buying.

Cash wheat was strong and higher. Suitable milling grades of soft wheat were in demand at 2c over Friday's basis. Mixed parcels were well cleaned up, except for a few cars common No. 3. Hard wheat was 2c to 3c higher. There was good export and accumulative demand, absorbing all offerings of the ordinary and yellow grades. Dark wheats were 1@2c higher, but inquiry was rather quiet. Several cars were carried over. Mixed wheat is encountered good demand at 2c to 3c above prices. Mixed and yellow corn were 1¼c to 1½c higher but no sales of white corn were made. Export and shipping orders provided principal demand. About half of the offerings were so placed, while local trade, mills and elevators took the balance. Cash oats were ¾c to 1c higher and supplies were light. Shippers and local trade bought.

ORIENTAL SPLENDOR MARKS EAST INDIAN BALL AT FAUST HOME

Princesses, Rajahs, Hindoo Dancers and Snake Charmers Among Guests at Brilliant Affair

THE East Indian dinner and ball given by Mr. and Mrs. Edward A. Faust at their palatial home, 1 Portland place, in honor of their daughter, Miss Audrey Faust, and two debutantes, Miss Alice Scott, daughter of Mrs. Henry Clarkson Scott, and Miss Elizabeth Carter, daughter of Mr. and Mrs. L. Ray Carter, Friday night, brought into being a scene rivaling one of the world-famed Durbars in color, splendor and varied interest.

All the guests came in Oriental costume or, if in the role of an Occidental visitor, appropriately attired to grace the Eastern ceremonial.

Maids and matrons generally adopted the pantaloons of the Orient, some voluminous, held by jeweled anklets, some scanty and bound about the ankles with silken thongs. Some were slightly draped by scarves and veils, others wearing the wide skirts of nautch dancers; all wearing plumed and jeweled head-dresses of gorgeous turbans hung with strings of pearls and bangles and brilliant beads. Some wore the discreet veils of the harems, bound about with jeweled bands, some were bolder houris and coryphees with sinuous legs bound in gay sashes, clothed above the waist for the most part in jeweled breastplates, boleros, diaphonous blouses, bracelets, earrings and strings of jewels.

Splendid Rajahs and Sheiks

Young rajahs and sheiks were splendid in rich brocades or in tropic white with gay sashes and huge turbans held with jeweled and feathered insignia of rank. There were British army and state officials in correct uniform, some in olive drab, and one in so much gold lace and so many orders he could have been no less than the Prince of Wales. There were Chinese Ambassadors in richly embroidered robes, Turks and Persians of high caste and there were low caste entertainers invited for the entertainment of the Brahmans. There was a Hindoo faker and snake charmer wearing a frightful beard and a cotton bournus, with bare legs and feet in sandals, who produced weird music on a primitive drum. And there was a sinuous male dancer of the Nijinski type wearing huge pantaloons rolled into a puff at the waist, above which bare brown skin showed through a slight armament of brass bands.

There were tourists, one who might have been the heroine of a well-known novel and play, in her white riding breeches and patent leather boots, with blouse with scarlet tie, with pith helmet and chiffon veil—a crop hung on her gauntleted wrist and a pistol holster at her belt.

High Priestess Holds Court

A high priestess sat in a niche before a statue of Buddha, guarded on either side by lions and surrounded by an ardent court of those who would "achieve merit" at her hands. Elephant heads with purple incandescent eyes, and other big-game trophies, adorned the walls and a huge white elephant bore a gorgeously canopied howdah in which sat the reigning and the recently supplanted Veiled Prophet Queens, Miss Alice Busch and Miss Eleanor Simmons, in costumes that told of their complete conversion to the garb of the royal harem in Khorassan. The scene they looked down upon, when it got into the motion of the dance, was a swirl of color and glancing lights from glittering jewels. But before the dance and banquet a stately ceremony took place.

In a tent of richly embroidered tapestries originally brought from Persia by a Prince to be his headquarters at the durbar celebrating the coronation of the Empress Victoria, the Maharaja (Edward A. Faust) and his Marahanee (Mrs. Faust) received the guests as they descended the grand semi-circular stairway to the drawing room. Following, in a procession led by Mr. Faust and his mother-in-law, Mrs. Adolphus Busch Sr., who looked exceedingly well and wore a gown of gold almost covered with pearls and glittering white gems, the older dignitaries passed through the banquet hall and into the hall of state to make deep salaams, first before the high priestess, impersonated by Miss Dorothy McBride, who wore purple and pink plumes, draperies and jewels, then before the three Princesses, who were seated on a dais behind a richly carved and gilded table, in the center of which was an irridescent bowl of gold fish and perched on either end a sacred peacock.

Costumes of the Princesses

Princess Alice Scott was clad in crimson almost hidden beneath the many ropes of pearls she wore about her neck and suspended from a head-dress of three upstanding, uncurled ostrich plumes.

Princess Audrey Faust, seated in the center, wore a sunburst head-dress of diamonds, with rays of blue, green and purple ostrich plumes, and a slender robe of jewel-embroidered gold over pantaloons of gold tissue veiled with gauze. The costume of Princess Elizabeth Carter was almost shrouded with voluminous white chiffon veils caught with red beads to a head-dress of white and pink and scarlet plumes. Each Princess had a young rajah at her elbow. They were Whitelaw Terry, Mahlon B. Wallace Jr. and Boyle Rhodes. At the feet of the Princesses, on divans covered with gorgeous rugs, sat their ladies-in-waiting, debutantes of this year, each with a young sheik at her feet. The walls and ceiling of this hall, ordinarily the famous art gallery of the Fausts, by means of alternating strips of gold and rose satin, were made to simulate a huge striped tent. Balconies and divans were draped with rugs loaned by Mr. James F. Ballard from his collection of antiques, as was the royal tent in the drawing room.

All round the room were placed divans, upon which reposed debutantes of this year and some of those who came out with Miss Faust last year, and at their feet, on cushions, sat young sheiks and rajahs. In front of groups of two or three were tabourettes covered with squares of silk batik prints, upon which the dinner was served. In the more conventional banquet hall, at two long tables spread with gold damask, the older guests were served. And the foods were scarcely less decorative and exotic than the remainder of the scene. In two balconies, tables for special guests were presided over by Mrs. Faust and Mrs. Busch.

Between the courses the guests were entertained by a widely known tenor and a much-heralded foreign violinist, the one attired in a striking Chinese costume, though he sang Italian, the other as a graceful adventurer in black satin.

The servitors and musicians, too, were in native costume, and there was a soft-footed, punctilious Eastern mysteriousness about the service, each new turn of the program or of the menu appearing as if by magic before enchanted guests.

Prof. and Mrs. Edward A. Steiner of Grinnell University, in Iowa, arrived in St. Louis yesterday and are the guests of Miss Avis Blewett, 3405 Hawthorne boulevard. Dr. Steiner was an old friend of the late Dr. Ben Blewett. Miss Blewett entertained her guests at a dinner last night, with the Rev. Dr. and Mrs. William C. Bitting and Mr. and Mrs. Frederick W. Lehmann completing the party. Yesterday noon a luncheon was given for Dr. Steiner at the University Club by Frederick Fischer. Dr. and Mrs. Steiner's daughter, Miss Gretchen Steiner, came to St. Louis last year with Otis Skinner and his company, and was entertained by many of her friends, and this year is teaching dramatic art at Vassar College. Dr. Steiner will lecture tonight before the Community Forum.

Mr. and Mrs. John T. Davis Jr. of 47 Portland place, will have as their guests this week Mrs. Davis' niece, Mrs. Charles R. Burns of London, England, and Miss Lewis, also of London, who is accompanying Mrs. Burns on her visit to the United States. Although nothing formal in the way of entertainment for the guests has been planned, Mrs. Davis and her friends will give informal parties for them.

There will be a number of out-of-town guests for the debut ball of Miss Alice Busch, Dec. 16, at Grant's Farm. Edsel Ford, son of Mr. and Mrs. Henry Ford of Detroit; Mr. and Mrs. Wills and Mr. and Mrs. Frank Book, also of Detroit, will be the guests of Mr. and Mrs. Percy Orthwein. In addition, Mr. and Mrs. Adolph Magnus and Mr. and Mrs. Sidney Baer of Chicago and Mr. and Mrs. Horace Flanagan of New York, relatives of the Busch family, will be with Mrs. Adolphus Busch, 1 Busch place.

Mrs. Henry R. Putnam of Brookline, Mass., will visit her parents, Mr. and Mrs. Charles Nagel, 44 Westmoreland place, during the Christmas holidays. This will be Mrs. Putnam's first visit in St. Louis in two years.

Mr. and Mrs. Dwight Davis of Washington, D. C., will come to St. Louis with their family to spend Christmas with Mr. Davis' mother, Mrs. John T. Davis Sr., of 17 Westmoreland place.

A group of prominent St. Louisans are completing homes on Ellenwood avenue, within a radius of a block, and some are taking possession this month. WHAT MISSOURIANS ARE DOING SOCIALLY AT WASHINGTON

Special to the Post-Dispatch.

WASHINGTON, Dec. 9.—Former Assistant Secretary of State Breckinridge Long and Mrs. Long entertained at dinner Thursday night in honor of their house guests, Col. and Mrs. Edward A. House of New York. Thirty covers were laid and the guests included leaders from diplomatic as well as official circles of Washington.

Senator Spencer departed for Bath, Me., Thursday to attend the wedding there today of Senator Edge of New Jersey to Miss Camilla Loyall Ashe Sewall, the romance of the winter in senatorial circles. The party, which went by special train direct to Bath, included, besides the bridegroom and his attendants, Vice President and Miss Coolidge, Senator and Mrs. Freylinghuysen of New Jersey, Senator Albert B. Cummins, president pro-tem of the Senate; Senator Richard Ernst of Kentucky and Representative and Mrs. Nicholas Longworth. At New York the party was joined by other friends of the Senator and the bride. Senator Hale of Maine acted as best man and among the bridesmaids was Miss Elizabeth Hanna of Washington, granddaughter of the late Senator Mark Hanna.

Apropos of weddings, invitations have been received in Washington for a Christmas holiday marriage of special interest to Missourians, that of Miss Dorothy Thomson of Summit Point, W. Va., sister-in-law of Genevieve Champ Clark Thomson, to Col. James Carson Breckinridge of the Marine Corps. Col. Breckinridge is a Kentuckian by birth, but has resided for some time in St. Louis. He is one of the leading young officers of the Marine Corps, has a splendid war record and is said to be slated for promotion to a brigadier-generalship as soon as a vacancy occurs.

Miss Thomson was bridesmaid to Genevieve Champ Clark at her marriage, June 30, 1915, at Honeyshuck, Bowling Green, Mo., to James M. Thomson, publisher of the New Orleans Item, and frequently has visited Mrs. Champ Clark at Bowling Green. Mrs. Champ Clark and Mr. and Mrs. Bennett Champ Clark will be among the Missourians who will go to the wedding Dec. 27. Mrs. James M. Thomson will be matron of honor for her sister-in-law.

Mr. and Mrs. Breckinridge Long, Mrs. John B. Henderson, former Gov. Joseph Folk and Mrs. Folk are among the Washington devotees of "Mah Jongg," the Chinese mandarin game which is sweeping over the national capital. It has quite superseded bridge and it is the very smartest thing of the moment. Among the other players here are Mrs. George Barnett, wife of Major-General George Barnett, U. S. M. C.; Mrs. William A. Slater, Mrs. John Rodgers, Mrs. William Mason Wright and Miss Mary Patten.

Miss May Pershing, sister of Gen. Pershing, who arrived last week to visit the General for a month, has gone to Atlantic City to spend a week. Master Warren Pershing, only son of the General, who is in school in Pennsylvania, will arrive on Christmas eve to spend the holidays with his father.

Bandanas Are New Wrist Ornaments

The debutantes of Washington, D. C., have almost all adopted the latest fad, for evening, of wearing bandana handkerchiefs tied around their wrists; they do look so silly, but are the very latest thing. Another new wrinkle is to have the evening wrap match the evening gown.

PROTESTS AGAINST POLICE TESTIMONY IN MURDER CASE

Circuit Attorney Says 'Kink' Connell, Acquitted of Killing Charles Vance, Was Ably Assisted by Detectives.

In a letter of protest to President Brockman of the Police Board, Circuit-Attorney Sidener yesterday complained that policemen sometimes prejudice the cases of the State against criminals by voluntarily appearing as witnesses for the defense.

The letter was the result of the appearance Friday of Chief of Detectives Hoagland, Assistant Chief Walton and Detective Sergeant Sheller as witnesses for John (Kink) Connell, charged with the murder of "Alibi Charley" Vance, ex-convict. Connell was acquitted by a jury when he established an alibi. The case of the State was damaged, Sidener said, by the absence of two eyewitnesses to the shooting and by the appearance of the detectives for the defendant.

Sidener's Letter to Brockman.

The text of the Circuit-Attorney's letter to the Police Board follows:

"This week the case of State vs. "Kink" Connell, charged with murder in the first degree for the killing of Charlie Vance, was tried in Division No. 12, and resulted in an acquittal. The defense was ably assisted by some police officers, who testified for the defendant, as I understand it, without any subpena having been issued for them, and volunteered statements which were entirely incompetent and not in response to any question by the lawyer for the defense, and damaging to the state.

"The State was taken entirely by surprise in this matter, and, while we were not hopeful of a conviction because of the absence of two material witnesses, yet I do protest against something which has happened several times since I have been Circuit Attorney, where a policeman appears as a witness for the defense without ever notifying my office that it was their intention to testify against the state.

"Irrespective of the fact that the deceased, Charles Vance, had a bad record, yet the homicide squad was very active in trying to apprehend his slayers, and even went so far as to bring the witnesses over to my office and had them make a statement to me. When the case came to trial that active co-operation was lacking. The circuit attorney's office has found it difficult enough to make cases, especially where the gang element predominates, without having police officers take a position antagonistic to the State.

Other Complaints Made.

"It is not the desire of my office to unjustly convict anybody, and the defendant is entitled to everything that he can lawfully do to beat the case; but I will say to you that I have seen it happen, now, several times where there seems to be some antagonism between the uniformed policemen and the detectives, and, while your department is doing a wonderful lot of good these days and helping my office greatly in the ferreting out and prosecution of crime, yet I say to you there are two things I protest against, and that is the custom of some police officers giving out the names of people from whom they get information about certain crimes, thus making those people targets for the crooks, and the other thing is that of the matter I am complaining of in this letter, and that is the custom of using by the defense certain police officers to destroy the testimony of witnesses used by the State, and this being used without any notification to the circuit attorney that such is to be done."

Vance was shot about 6:50 p. m., March 20, last, in front of his home, 2338 Division street, as he was about to enter an automobile with his wife, Mrs. Frances Vance, and a friend, Mrs. May Miles. These two women, together with Vance's sister, Mrs. Mabel Sargent, accused Connell of the crime. They said that Connell and another man called Vance away from the automobile and that a few moments later five shots were fired and Vance fell dead.

Mrs. Vance and Mrs. Miles are the witnesses who did not appear, and the police were unable to locate them. Nine persons established the alibi for Connell, testifying that he was in a picture show, six blocks away, at about the time the murder was committed.

Testimony of Detectives.

Hoagland, Walton and Sheller were summoned by the defense to refute Mrs. Sargent's testimony that Connell had remarked in their presence that no witnesses would appear against him. On cross-examination these officers could not recall that either Mrs. Vance, Mrs. Miles or Mrs. Sargent had stated at police headquarters that Connell had killed Vance, but Hoagland volunteered the information that he had had Vance indicted for a bank robbery, which Sidener has said tended to show that the dead man had been a desperate character.

Hoagland, Walton and Sheller explained that they had been notified to attend the trial and had naturally assumed that it was in the line of duty for them to do so.

Connell is being held for trial, tomorrow, on a charge of larceny from the person.

ST. LOUIS DOCTOR GIVES EYE SPECIMENS TO ARMY

Collection Presented by Dr. James Moores Ball Includes Anatomical Specimens and Casts.

A collection of anatomical specimens of eyes, charts, drawings, photographs, casts and the like, which is expected to form the nucleus of the greatest collection of the sort in the world, has been presented to the Army Medical Museum at Washington by Dr. James Moores Ball of St. Louis.

About two-thirds of the collection has been sent to Washington, and the first, or pictorial, section of it already is set out in the museum and fills one room. Another room is reserved for the other section, of actual specimens.

The plan of the museum authorities is to gather all material of scientific value to ophthalmologists into the Government collection, where it will always be available for study. Records, historical and clinical data, photographic reproduction and microscopic slides will be sent to eye specialists on request.

Library Best in Country.

The Army Medical Library, Dr. Ball said yesterday, is the best in the country, and it is desired that the museum be placed on a par with it in every department. The eye section had no anatomical specimens until Dr. Ball presented his collection.

It includes, besides a large number of diseased eyes, a series of dissections of normal eyes which is said by Acting Curator Coupal to be virtually anatomically complete. Each exhibit is accompanied by a close description of the case it was connected with and a record of all its phases, as, for example, casts, diagrams and drawings of a baby born without eyes 20 years ago are explained with a history of the family and of the case at various ages.

The pictorial section includes not only the originals of many paintings of rare eye conditions, but portraits and photographs of scientists which, with the accompanying biographical data, form a running history of the development of ophthalomolgy, and even the originals of caricatures of famous specialists.

Dr. Ball an Author of Text Books.

Dr. Ball, as an author of text books, student in several universities abroad, and professor in several American Universities, has had unusual opportunities for accumulating this collection in 20 years, and was stimulated to it as well by a touch of the collecting hobby. His collection is said to be second only to that of Dr. George E. de Schweinitz, president of the American Medical Association, at whose suggestion last April at the International Congress of Ophthalmology, Dr. Ball chose the Army Museum to receive his collection.

Dr. de Schweinitz's colection has been promised to the College of Physicians and Surgeons in Philadelphia, a society, but he is assisting the Government inadding to its nucleous, as, among others, are Dr. L. Webster Fox, of the University of Pennsylvania, Dr. S. Lewis Ziegler, retired surgeon to Wills Hospital, Philadelphia, and Mr. E. Treacher Collins, of London, (surgeons in England referred to as "Mister" Surgeon to Moorfields Hospital.

The gift to the Army Medical Museum was announced last week at a national meeting of eye specialists in Cincinnati, when it was requested that surgeons all over the country send their unusual eye specimens to the museum.

LIFE SENTENCE OF G. V. PARR FOR CONREY KILLING, UPHELD

Man Convicted of Killing of Deputy Sheriff Broke Jail at Clayton, Oct. 15, However.

The life sentence of George V. Parr for murder was affirmed yesterday by the State Supreme Court, but Parr will have to be apprehended before the sentence is put into effect, because he was one of six men who broke jail at Clayton, Oct. 15, and is still at large.

Parr and Willis Millard were convicted of the murder of Deputy Sheriff Eugene S. Conrey at Clayton, the night of Aug. 20, 1920, and Millard is serving a life sentence. Night Marshal Benjamin Corner was murdered at the same time. The officers were shot when they accosted Parr, Millard and a third man in an automobile and placed them under arrest. David Burke, the third man, who took no part in the shooting, turned State's evidence.

CITY TO OPPOSE CONTINUATION OF 7-CENT CARFARE

Authority of U. R. to Charge Present Rate, Based on $50,000,000 Valuation, Expires Dec. 31.

The city has determined to oppose the application of the United Railways for permission to continue to charge 7 cents as street care fare in St. Louis.

Authority for the 7-cent fare will expire on Dec. 31. The company has made application to be permitted to continue that rate until the Public Service Commission completes its aluation of its property. The city wants the rate reduced. City officials believe the valuation will not be completed before 90 days and the 7-cent fare is based upon a valuation of $50,000,000. The company now is asking for a $70,000,000 valuation.

The chief attack of the city will be upon an allowance of $1,500,000 which the company now is permitted to set aside as a depreciation reserve. That is a greater sum than commonly allowed public utilities and the commission, admitting that fact, had declared that it is permitting the company to re-establish its physical condition, which deteriorated during years in which the earnings were insufficient to provide depreciation reserves. The city declares that the sum for depreciation should not exceed $1,000,000 a year and that the company is charging expenditures to depreciation, which should be charged to capital.

A chart based upon earnings has been prepared by the city, purporting to show that profits per passenger carried have begun to ascend while operating costs per passenger have declined. This table shows that the profit for the last eight months of 1920, during which a 7-cent fare was charged, was 1.11 cents per passenger, and its operating cost 5.80 cents per passenger. Similar figures for 1921 were .964 cent profit and 5.94 cost, and through October, 1922, 1.056 cents profit and 5.84 cents cost.

DEATH SENTENCE OF 'HIRED SLAYER' UPHELD

James Seward to Hang for Killing of Andrew Deck—New Trial for Eugene Hayes.

James Seward of St. Louis, the "hired assassin" who killed Andrew Deck at Herculaneum, Mo., Feb. 26, 1921, must hang, but the man accused of having hired him Eugene Hayes of Herculaneum, who also was sentenced to death, is to have a new trial, the State Supreme Court decided yesterday.

The murder of Deck was the result of a "bootlegging" enterprise. Deck had been instrumental in causing prosecutions against Hayes and several other men.

The testimony at the trial in the Circuit Court at Hillsboro disclosed that Seward was procured by Hayes to "beat up" Deck, Hayes agreeing to pay Seward $35 for the work, $20 being paid on account.

Seward, under the pretext that he was a prohibition enforcement agent, lured Deck from home and shot him on the street.

Ruling Court Erred.

The Supreme Court held the trial Judge erred in declining the request of Haye's lawyers to include the following instruction in his instructions to the jury:

"The court instructs the jury that if you shall find from the evidence that the defendant, prior to the commission of the alleged offense, entered into a conspiracy with James Seward and that the defendant did not aid, hire or abet James Seward in the killing of Andrew Deck . . . then you will find the defendant not guilty."

Hayes was clearly entitled to have this instruction given, says the opinion, adding thaa it was the converse of the State's instruction.

Concerning the Seward case, the opinion said: "The record of the case is without error. Appellant was accorded a fair and impartial trial. The evidence was overwhelmingly that for a money consideration he undertook the grewsome task of slaying the deceased. He became the hired assassin of Eugene Hayes and his associates."

One other man is under sentence of death, pending appeal, a fourth received a life sentence and two others were twice tried for slaying Deck, with a hung jury in each instance. Seward is to be hanged Jan. 26.

POSTOFFICE ROBBERS ROUTED

Watchman at Madison, Ill., Fires Five Shots at Two Men.

Two robbers, attempting to force open a safe in the postoffice at Madison, Ill., at 4 a. m. yesterday, were detected by Frank Smith, a watchman, in the Madison business district, who put them to flight by firing five shots at them. One of the robbers was heard to cry out in pain.

The safe contained about $2000 in stamps. The combination had been hammered off when Smith passed and he noticed that the light in the building was out. He went to a rear door and the robbers ran out. The postoffice Friday received $25,000 for a payroll in Madison, which was delivered Friday evening to a bank.

New Congregation to Be Formed.

DRAMA and the MOVIES

ST. LOUIS POST-DISPATCH

"The Green Goddess," With Arliss; "Dulcy," Queen of the Bromide

Archer's Oriental Melodrama Opens Tomorrow Night, and Comedy of Modern Mrs. Malaprop, With Lynn Fontanne, Begins This Evening.

GEORGE ARLISS, one of the foremost English-speaking actors, appears at the Shubert-Jefferson tomorrow night in "The Green Goddess," a melodrama of the Orient, by William Archer, distinguished British critic and translator of Ibsen and Maeterlinck. With the role of the Rajah of Rukh, Mr. Arliss turns from historical characters such as Hamilton, Paganini and Disraeli, and resumes his earlier penchant for picturesque portraits, like Zukurri in "The Darling of the Gods," and the title part in Molnar's "The Devil." The opening night house has been purchased and re-sold by the College Club, for its annual benefit.

The first theatrical work to be inspired by that modern journalistic phenomenon, the "colyum," will arrive tonight at the American. It is a comedy entitled "Dulcy," by Marc Connelly and George S. Kaufman, whose later farce, "To the Ladies," has already been presented here. "Dulcy," had her birth in the Conning Tower of Franklin P. Adams—who, by the way, seems to have confused Dulcinea Del Toboso with proverb-mongering Sancho Panza—and soon grew into a synonym for a chatterer of bromidic commonplaces. Miss Lynn Fontanne, a protege and pupil of Ellen Terry, created the name-roll and will appear in it here, with a company mostly different from the original one, which included Gregory Kelly, Elliot Nugent and John Westley.

Mrs. Sidney Drew, who has not been seen in this city since appearing in a comedy several years ago with her husband, just prior to his death, is this week's featured entertainer at the Orpheum. Nora Bayes, popular comedienne, heads the bill at the Empress, and the Woodward Players are presenting "Common Clay."

Nora Bayes, in "A Vaudeville Festival"—Empress.

"The Green Goddess."

TOWARDS the end of the war, Archer made a tour of India, but his play did not take definite form until one night, as he relates, he dreamed the chief character and the story. "The Green Goddess" opened in Philadelphia during December, 1920. Three weeks later it began a run of 488 performances at the Booth Theater in New York. It played 11 weeks in Boston and eight weeks in Chicago. It will remain here only a week, with matinees on Wednesday and Saturday.

The chief character, an Indian monarch, is a potentate with all the veneer of civilization and all the cruelty of an Oriental savage. Into the hands of this dangerous tyrant fall three English travelers, one of them a charming woman, at the very moment when the British Government is executing three of his subjects for political intrigues. He determined to avenge their deaths upon his captives, and appears secure from outside interference in his retreat in the Himalayan mountains, removed from English power by three weeks of travel over uncharted paths.

Mr. Arliss has surrounded himself with an unusual cast. His leading woman, Elizabeth Risdon, was sent to America by George Bernard Shaw to play Fanny in "Fanny's First Play." Frederick Lloyd created the part of Johnny Tarleton in the London production of Shaw's "Misalliance." Ivan F. Simpson has played in support of E. S. Willard, John Drew and Lou Tellegen. Others in the company include Leonard Willey, Morris W. Ankrum, Vera Tompkins, Roy Van Allen and R. Carrington Short.

The company brings its own equipment complete, including even footlights. There are eight mutes in the cast and 25 supernumeraries. A temple scene is described as one of the most eerie effects of the modern theater.

The Story of "Dulcy."

IN her stage incarnation, Dulcinea's other name is Smith, and she is the bride of a harassed young business man. In her eagerness to be helpful to her husband and her friends, Dulcinea plans a week-end party at her home near New York, and assembles an ill-assorted group such as only a Dulcinea could summon. Their brief association becomes a series of hilarious tragedies.

There is a rich capitalist with whom Dulcey's husband hopes to put through a big business merger. There is a rapturous scenarist whom Dulcy aids in eloping with the daughter of the capitalist, who loathes motion pictures. There is a plausible young rich man from Newport, who plays the piano and turns out to be an escaped lunatic. Dulcy's butler is an ex-convict, and he disappears with a pearl necklace. Dulcy inflicts the most exquisite torture on her guests by inviting the scenario writer to rehearse one of his hectic plots, to music. But fate looks after the Dulcineas, and her final blunder unexpectedly crowns her mistaken efforts with success.

"Dulcy" was first produced at the Cort Theater in Chicago during February, 1921, and six months later moved to the Frazee in New York for an extensive run. The present company includes James Gleason, Hallie Clark, Gilbert Douglas, George Abbott, Rikel Kent, Elmer Cornell, George Alison, Harry Lillford, Lea Bliss and Jean May. There will be but one matinee, on Saturday.

"The Czarina," with Doris Keane, is promised next week at the American, beginning Monday night, and is to be followed by Fred Stone in his latest musical extravaganza, "Tip Top." For the week of Dec. 24 the Shubert-Jefferson announces W. Somerset Maugham's worldly-wise comedy, "The Circle," with John Drew and Mrs. Leslie Carter.

Mrs. Sidney Drew at Orpheum.

THE act in which Mrs. Sidney Drew appears at the Orpheum is a comedy entitled "Predestination," and concerns a wife who believes everything happens according to fatalism, until her husband first plans to elope with another woman and then gives the siren up. Others on the bill are Alex Morrison, golf professional from California, who does trick shots with the clubs; Donald Kerr and Effie Weston, dancers, in "The Flip and the Flapper;" Don Barclay and Del Chain, "nut" comedians; Edith Clifford, comedienne; Heras and Wills, the "Eight Blue Demons," the "Whirling Arabians," and Marion Weeks, coloratura soprano, who will sing the doll's song from "Tales of Hoffman."

Two new recruits appear this week with the Woodward Players, Miss Florence Leslie and Joseph Stanhope, who make their local bows this afternoon at the Garrick in "Common Clay." This is a play in three acts, reciting the struggle of Ellen Neal, a mill worker, to win recognition for her son, and her final triumph as an actress of renown. Hazel Whitmore and John Warner have the chief parts.

The show at the Empress, starring Miss Bayes, is termed "A Festival of Vaudeville," and presents, in addition to herself, Bert Baker, Billy McDermott, the Pasquilli Brothers, Harry and Grace Ellsworth, Richard Wally and others. For next week the Empress promises Joe Weber and

Jose Rubin's Next Role in Play of Mexico

NEW YORK, Dec. 9.

PRODUCERS with new plays are holding off until Christmas week, with the result that there will be only one premiere on Broadway in the next seven days. This is "Gringo," a play of Mexican life by Sophie Treadwell, which will be presented at the Comedy Theater Tuesday evening. Jose Rubin is starred, and in the cast are Edna Hibbard, Frederick Perry, Edna Walton, Richard Barbe, Arthur Albertson, Leonard Doyle and Harold McGee.

Reports that the Hippodrome, the world's largest playhouse, known to entertainment seekers of many lands, is nearing the end of its unique career, were revived this week by insistent rumors that the big building will be converted into either a department store or a hotel. However, it is announced that no change will be made until "Better Times" completes its run, which will not be before early summer. The building and site were assessed $4,270,000 in the 1922 tax rolls.

The next production of the Theater Guild, and its third this season, will be a medieval mystery play, "The Tidings Brought to Mary," by the French poet Paul Claudel. It will open on Christmas night. Theodore Komisarjevsky is conducting the rehearsals, and Lee Simonson is designing settings and costumes. "Peer Gynt" will follow, late in January, or early in February.

"The Rear Car," a mystery play by E. B. Rose, with Taylor Holmes as star, began rehearsals this week. • • • Two shows with famous stars have been withdrawn temporarily while the authors iron out the rough

"East Is West" and "Man Who Played God" Week's Film Features

Special Showing of Official War Picture at Liberty; "The Kentucky Derby" and "30 Days" on View.

CONSTANCE TALMADGE in "East Is West" is the featured offering at the Grand Central, West End Lyric and Capitol Theaters. This is the comedy drama in which Fay Bainter made a notable stage success.

As a Chinese girl transplanted in America and eager to grasp the ideas and customs of a new country, Miss Talmadge is said to have an opportunity to do some of the best character acting of her career.

The story in its earlier scenes has a decidedly Oriental flavor and the plot suggests the "Madame Butterfly" motive without the heavy tragedy of that production.

Effie Weston, dancer, in "The Flip and the Flapper"—Orpheum.

On the bill also is a new Bobby Vernon comedy entitled "Pardon My Glove."

At the Missouri this week is another of Wallace Reid's comedy dramas, "Thirty Days." Reid plays the part of a wealthy young man who befriends a young Italian woman and incurs the jealousy of her husband, an Italian reservist due to sail for Italy in 28 days. He seeks safety and gets his friend, the Judge, to send him to jail for 30 days.

He gets a fright when the Italian husband turns up in the jail also and is mortified when his fiancee discovers him there. Complications follow, which culminate in the Italian husband being kidnaped and delivered to his ship in a bundle, permitting an ending which leaves everybody happy.

While George Arliss is playing in "The Green Goddess" at the Shubert-Jefferson Theater, his counterfeit presentment will be on view at the Delmonte Theater in his greatest screen success, "The Man Who Played God."

The story deals with a world-famous musician who suddenly turns deaf. Embittered by this affliction he assumes the air of a madman. When on the verge of insanity he learns, through the art of lip-reading which he has unconsciously acquired, of the bereavement of a dear friend whose misfortune is greater than his own. His mind thus taken off his own unhappy state he begins the game of playing God. He yearns to do something for others and this change wrought within him is as much of an enigma to his family and friends as was the effect of his first heavy infliction.

So engrossing does his work of improving the lot of others become that almost as a providential reward his hearing is restored as suddenly as it was taken away. Then all his terribly shattered family relations are knitted up once more in the bonds of mutual love and affection.

"Powder River," a collection of official United States War Department motion pictures taken in France by the army signal corps, is being exhibited at the Fox Liberty Theater under the auspices of the Veterans of Foreign Wars. The theater management has turned the house over to the service men's organization.

As a prologue to "Powder River" a 1500-foot film, confiscated from Germany, is shown. This film clearly demonstrates the methods used by the enemy during the campaign of unrestricted submarine warfare. Twelve allied merchant ships are shown being sunk by torpedoes, shell fire and bombs.

"Powder River" itself is said to be a complete record of what the American soldiers met in France, both behind the lines and in the thick of battle. The picture opens with the departure of the giant liner, the Leviathan, with 12,000 troops, and closes with the great review before Gen. Pershing prior to their victorious return home. The four great battles that proved the quality of the American soldiers are shown from many angles. They are the battles of Cantigny, Chateau Thierry, St. Mihiel and the Argonne.

The "Kentucky Derby," dramatized for the screen from Charles T. Dazey's thrilling stage play, "The Suburban," is the feature attraction this week at the New Rivoli Theater. Reginald Denny has the leading role.

Famous horses, famous estates and the internationally famous annual derby of Kentucky are shown. Lilian Rich, Lionel Belmore, Gertrude Astor, Wilfred Lucas and Harry Carter have the principal supporting parts.

What They Are Doing in the Movie Studios

Productions on the schedule of preferred pictures for 1923 release include "The Hero," "Are You a Failure?" "Poor Men's Wives," "The Girl Who Came Back," "Mothers-in-law," "The Broken Wing," "A Mansion of Aching Hearts" and "My Lady's Lips."

Kenneth Harlan is scheduled to appear in a number of productions to be released shortly, including "Thorns and Orange Blossoms," "The Toll of the Sea," "The Beautiful and Damned," "The World's a Stage" and "The Little Church Around the Corner."

Harrison Ford has been steadily engaged on the Coast during the past few months in a number of consecutive pictures, including "Shadows," "When Love Comes" and "The Old Homestead."

Margaret Leahy, the English beauty, who is coming to America under Norma Talmadge's tutelage, will play the part of "Aggie" in "Within the Law," Miss Talmadge's next starring vehicle for First National release.

Ivan Linow, who plays the Bolshevik leader in "The Enemies of Women," Cosmopolitan's picturization of Vicente Blasco Ibanes's story, is a champion wrestler and is known in that sport as "The Giant Cossack."

In the picture it is necessary that Linow wear a beard and he now claims he is the only bearded wrestler in the world.

Katherine MacDonald and her supporting company, including Orville Caldwell, Stuart Holmes, Lincoln Stedman, Adele Farrington, Edith Lyle, Russell Gordon and Grace Morse, have returned from Arrowhead Lake, where important scenes were filmed for "The Scarlet Lily."

Thomas H. Ince is giving all his

YOUNG WOMAN STRICKEN WHEN TOLD THERE WASN'T A VACANCY

Unidentified Girl Is Taken to Hospital in Dazed Condition After Asking for Job.

Special to the Post-Dispatch.

NEW YORK.—When told by Otto Kurth, art director of the Mid-Week Pictorial, published by the New York Times, that there was no opening for work in his office, a young woman, not yet identified, lapsed into a state of amnesia and was unable to leave the office.

When the young woman called on Kurth she appeared to be dejected and stunned, he said, when told there was no vacancy she could fill. She was taken to Bellevue Hospital.

The young woman is 19 years old, five feet three inches tall, weighing 90 pounds. She wore a brown dress and coat and a red hat. She wore no jewelry, had no purse and there was nothing on her clothing to identify her.

Medtner Piece on Rachmaninoff Program

THE eminent Russian pianist and composer, Sergei Rachmaninoff, will give his sole St. Louis recital of the present season Wednesday night at the Odeon. His opening number will be "Improvization," No. 31, by Nicolai Medtner, whom Rachmaninoff has declared to be the greatest living composer.

Weber's "Rondo Brilliant" will be followed by a Chopin section, consisting of a Polonaise, a Nocturne and a Waltz, and then the famous "Funeral March" sonata. The pianist will play his own "Melodie" and "Serenade," "Moszkowski's "La Jongleuse," Liszt's A-flat Major Etude, and the Schultz-Evler arrangement of the Strauss waltz, "Beautiful Blue Danube."

Next Saturday will be the last day for registration in the Municipal Opera Chorus Training School, which is to open on the evening of Jan. 4 and hold classes twice weekly thereafter, on Monday and Thursday nights, until May 1. Last week 97 applications were filed. The registration last year was 233. The classes will be held at Hibernian Hall, Grand and Finney avenues, instead of at the Jefferson Memorial, which was found inconvenient for pupils living in distant parts of the city.

Knights of Columbus Program.

THE Knights of Columbus Choral Club, directed by William Theodore Diebels, will open its season with a concert Friday night at the Odeon, with Miss Minnie Moerschell, soprano, and George E. Muskens, tenor, as soloists. The ensemble numbers will be "In a Gondola," E. Meyer-Helmund; "Killarney," "The Scissors-Grinder," a Flemish folksong; "The Destruction of Gaza," Je Rille, and "Long, Long Ago" and "The Last Rose of Summer," arranged by J. A. Parks. Miss Moerschell will sing a group of American songs and "Vissi d'Arte," from "La Tosca." Muskens will give "O Paradis," from L'Africaine," and two songs. As duets, the singers will offer "O terra addio," from "Aida," and Loehrs "Rose of My Heart."

A group of five men and five women, known as the Stuttgart Opera Singers and said to be principals from the Wurtemberg National Theater at Stuttgart, gave a program last night at the St. Louis Turner Hall, 1508 Chouteau avenue, and will give another concert at 2:15 o'clock this afternoon at Eagles' Hall, Jefferson and Lafayette avenues. The director is Karl Kromer, a well-known composer in the folksong style.

H. Hugh Altvater, head of the violin department at Southwestern College, Winfield, Kan., gave a recital last night at Holy Cross Hall, 3630 Ohio avenue. He was assisted by Earl D. Stout, head of the piano department at the same institution. The principal number was Nardini's Concerto in E Minor.

The Cecilia Choral Club, directed by O. Wade Fallert, will give a sacred concert Thursday night at the West Presbyterian Church, Maple and Maryville avenues, East St. Louis. The Melharmonic Club will give a program at 2:15 o'clock Saturday afternoon at Baldwin's Hall. Those taking part will be Mrs. A. T. Smith Jr., Miss Louise Bernero, Miss Ione Zuhlke, Miss Anna Sorkin, Carrol Kohner, Miss Helene C. Hellweg, Charles Maehl and Mrs. Frederick Nussbaum.

Miss Dorothy Davison, pianist, gave a program yesterday afternoon before the City Club, playing numbers by Chopin, Field, Mendelssohn, Scott and Liszt.

BOCCHERINI WORK HAS AMERICAN PREMIERE

Symphony by Old Italian Master, Just Published, Will Be Heard This Week.

Luigi Boccherini's Symphony in C Major, Op. 16, No. 3, will be presented for the first time in America by Director Ganz at the Friday and Saturday concerts of the Symphony Orchestra. Ernst von Dohnanyi's Suite for Orchestra will be played for the first time in St. Louis, replacing Scriabin's "Le Poeme de l'Extase," which has been postponed until later in the year. Paul Althouse, tenor of the Metropolitan Opera Company, will be soloist, singing the romance, "Una furtiva lagrima," from "L'Elisir d'Amore" and the "Preislied" from "Die Meistersinger."

Boccherini was a contemporary of Mozart, and was ranked by "connoisseurs" of the time much ahead of the German master. He was one of the pioneers in chamber music and the string quartet, and left a great quantity of compositions, now forgotten save for his popular Minuet in A Major. The present symphony was unearthed and published only last July by a firm of publishers in Basel, Switzerland. Director Ganz acquired the score while abroad. The program follows:

Boccherini
Symphony in C Major, Op. 16, No. 3.—
I. Allegro, ma non molto.
II. Andante amoroso.
III. Tempo di Menuetto.
IV. Presto, ma non tanto.
(First time in America.)
Romance, Una furtiva lagrima, from L'Elisir d'Amore .....Donizetti
Suite for Orchestra, in Four Parts, Op. 19 .....Dohnanyi
I. Andante con variazione.
II. Scherzo: Allegretto vivace.
III. Romanza: Andante poco mota.
IV. Rondo: Allegro vivace.
(First Time in St. Louis.)
Intermission.
Eine Faust Overture.....Wagner
Prize Song from The Mastersingers of Nuremberg .....Wagner
Wotan's Farewell and Magic Fire Scene, from Die Walkuere— Wagner

Donahue Is "Pop" Soloist.

An interesting young pianist from Los Angeles, Lester Donahue, will be the soloist at this afternoon's popular concert at the Odeon, playing Rimsky-Korakoff's pianoforte concerto in one movement, Op. 30. The program, which Mr. Ganz will direct, is announced:

Festival Overture, Academic, Op. 80— Brahms
Third Movement, Andante, from the Second Symphony .....Borodine
Concerto for Piano and Orchestra, Op. 30 Rimsky-Korsakoff
Adagio .....Clifton
Norwegian Dance in A Major, Op. 35, No. 2 .....Grieg
Overture to William Tell.....Rossini

Alfred Cortot, French pianist, who has never played in St. Louis, will be soloist at the concerts of Dec. 22 and 23, appearing in an all-French program. Another artist to make her first local appearance with the orchestra is Maria Ivoguen, coloratura soprano, who will be soloist at the Feb. 16 and 17 concerts.

Paul Friess, pianist, and Ruth Hazlett Wunder, both St. Louisans, will be soloists at next Sunday's popular concert, which Assistant Director Fischer will conduct.

CURLING IRON PIERCES BRAIN OF TEACHER, KILLING HER AT ONCE

Believed to Have Suffered Dizzy Spell While She Was Arranging Her Hair.

Special to the Post-Dispatch.

ELIZABETH, N. J.—While curling her hair, Mary A. Jessich, 26, a school teacher, fell to the floor and was instantly killed when the curling iron pierced her brain.

The young woman is believed to have been seized with a dizzy spell, to which she was subject. Her mother found her body.

Tale of Wessex by Hardy Becomes Melodrama

LONDON, Dec. 9.

THE first Wessex novel of Mr. Thomas Hardy, "Desperate Remedies," has been put on the stage at Dorchester by the Hardy Players, and at King's Hall, Covent Garden, in an adaptation by T. H. Tilley. The compression of incident which the theater demands makes of the story rather a desperate melodrama, but it is altogether charming and vastly amusing.

There are two modern innovations not found in the novel. The Frampton Family Band rejoices in a xylophone, which has more of laughter's tune in it than the name would lead you to suppose; and the elections returns are thrown upon a screen, apparently for the first time in Casterbridge history.

The xylophone proved so fascinating that it is not easy to believe Cytherea Graye would have turned away from it and looked out of the window to behold the death of her father, who happened at the moment to be falling off a neighboring church spire.

As for the performance itself, there is event enough in it to furnish a dozen plays. No sooner have Farmer Springrove's cider-makers told their preliminary tale of Miss Aldclyffe's new lady companion and mysterious steward than Cytherea herself plunges straightway into her adventures.

Many Incidents Reported.

YOU do not see her father tumble from the church spire, or the burning of the Three Trantors' Inn, or the discovery of the dark hair in Mr. Manston's bed, or the murder of Mrs. Manston. Such things have to be reported, for Mr. Hardy, when he wrote the novel, shifted his scene too often for any adaptor.

The fugitive Manston, chasing Cytherea round a table, in circumstances to which the book permits no farce, is irresistibly droll in the play, and when the murderer is marched off between two gentlemen in Victorian top-hats, plty is overwhelmed in irreverence. But though you may laugh where you should not, you forget it to rejoice in the grave simplicity of the love-making. Clerk Crickett's talkative wife, Farmer Springrove's pure dialect, and Clerk Crickett himself, "a sort of bowdlerized rake."

The Lyceum Club Stage Society recently put on two new plays, "Where the Whirlwind Blows," by Miss Essex Dane; and "Honor Is Satisfied," by Miss Olive Lethbridge. The former is an affair of revolutionary Russia, with stolen pearls and a list of incriminating names wrapped round the candle of a lamp. The latter concerns a noble wastrel who, having forged a check, is saved from prison by Lady Cheltenham. He marries, goes to war and is killed, leaving a daughter so charming that there is no danger of her being the last of the Cheltenhams.

Polly to Be Revived.

THE production of "Polly," John Gay's sequel to "The Beggar's Opera," promised for the present month at the Kingsway, is sure to prove one of the most interesting events of the season. Frederic Austin has performed a feat in creating a new score from the original, in which only the bare tunes are given, with a figured bass often clumsy and useless. He has also written an overture. The scene of the work is laid in the West Indies, where some of the characters in "The Beggar's Opera" have been transported, and whither the ever-faithful Polly follows Macheath.

The original libretto is unpleasantly pessimistic and vituperative, recalling Swift's fierce invective against human nature in the last part of "Gulliver's Travels." Gay's comparison of the civilized humanity of a corrupt age with the untainted nobility he attributes to the West Indian savage is no less exaggerated and abusive than the irascible Dean's detestable picture of the Yahoos.

The approaching Christmas Eve will mark the tercentenary of the birth of Matthew Arnold, who was a great critic and, in his own words, "an incessant playgoer." He lived long enough to witness all the glory of Rachel, the greater part of the career of Sir Henry Irving, and the meridian of Sarah Bernhardt. Of all the famous players he saw, the one who left the deepest impression upon him was that "radiant Greek-souled artist, "Mlle. Rachel," to whom he addressed three fine sonnets. In his "Irish Essays," he left a searching comparison between the two tragediennes:

"One remark I will make, a remark suggested by the inevitable comparison of Mlle. Sarah Bernhardt with Rachel. * * * I had never till now comprehended how much of Rachel's superiority was purely in intellectual power. * * * Temperament, quick intelligence, passion, nervous mobility, grace, smile, voice, charm, poetry—Mlle. Bernhardt has them all. One watches her with pleasure, with admiration—and yet not without a certain disquietude.

Intellectual Power Lacking.

SOMETHING is wanting, or at least not present in sufficient force; something which alone can secure and fix her administration of all the charming gifts which she has, can alone keep them fresh, keep them sincere, save them from perils by caprice, perils by mannerism. That something is high intellectual power. It was here that Rachel was so great; she began, one says to oneself as one recalls her image and dwells upon it—she began almost where Mlle. Sarah Bernhardt ends."

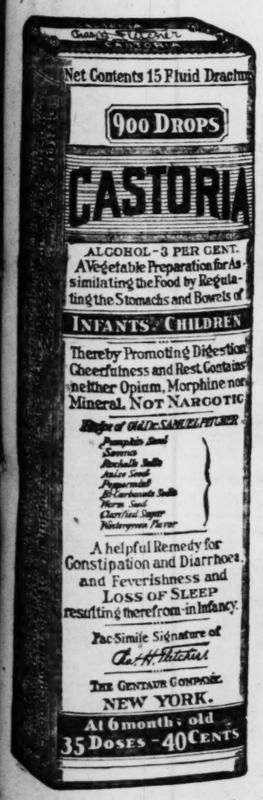
Commenting on Wilson Barrett's revival of "Hamlet" in 1884, Arnold confessed that his Prince was "fresh, natural, young, prepossessing, animated, coherent"; but went on to say that all the Hamlets he had seen wanted something. "Macready," he pronounced, "wanted person, Charles Kean mind, Fechter English and Mr. Wilson Barrett elocution."

The Young Mother.

THE ILLS OF INFANTS AND CHILDREN should be so well known to the youngest of mothers that a reminder or a repetition of the symptoms of illness seems unnecessary, yet there are some mothers who overlook a feverish condition, a little colic, or a disposition to be irritable. If not corrected they may lead to serious sickness. And to correct them, to bring Baby back to its happy self, is so easy by the use of Castoria—a medicine prepared just for infants and children. It will regulate the bowels (not force them), aid digestion and so bring quiet and rest.

Fletcher's Castoria has been doing this for over 30 years; regulating the stomach and bowels of infants and children. It has replaced the nauseating Castor Oil, so-called Soothing Syrups, poisonous Paregoric and other vicious concoctions in the homes of true and honest mothers—mothers who love their children.

Those mothers will give their babies foods and medicines especially prepared for infants and children.



Exact Copy of Wrapper.

Children Cry For Fletcher's CASTORIA

A Word About Truth.

"Great is Truth, and mighty above all things." So says the Old Testament, yet it is equally true to-day. Truth shows no favors, fears no enemies.

From the inception of Fletcher's Castoria, Truth has been the watchword, and to the conscientious adherence to this motto in the preparation of Fletcher's Castoria as well as in its advertising is due the secret of its popular demand.

All imitations, all substitutes, all just-as-good preparations lack the element of Truth, lack the righteousness of being, lack all semblance even in the words of those who would deceive.

And you! Mothers, mothers with the fate of the World in your hands, can you be deceived? Certainly not.

Fletcher's Castoria is prepared for Infants and Children. It is distinctly a remedy for the little-ones. The BABY'S need for a medicine to take the place of Castor Oil, Paregoric and Soothing Syrups was the sole thought that led to its discovery. Never try to correct BABY'S troubles with a medicine that you would use for yourself.

TOO MUCH MEAT HURTS KIDNEYS

Take a Glass of Salts to Flush Kidneys if Bladder Bothers You.

Eating too much meat may produce kidney trouble in some form or other, says a well-known authority, because the uric acid excites the kidneys, they become overworked; get sluggish; clog up and cause all sorts of distress, particularly backache and misery in the kidney region; rheumatic twinges, severe headaches, acid stomach, constipation, torpid liver, sleeplessness, bladder irritation.

The moment your back hurts or kidneys aren't acting right, or if bladder bothers you, get about four ounces of Jad Salts from any good pharmacy; take a tablespoonful in a glass of water before breakfast for a few days and your kidneys may then act fine. This famous salts is made from the acid of grapes and lemon juice, combined with lithia, and has been used for generations to flush clogged kidneys and stimulate them to normal activity; also to neutralize the acids so that they no longer irritate, thus often ending bladder disorders.

Jad Salts cannot injure anyone; makes a delightful effervescent lithia-water drink which millions of men and women take now and then to help keep the kidneys and other organs clean, thus often avoiding serious kidney disorders.

WHAT THEY ARE DOING IN THE MOVIE STUDIOS

energies to the cutting and editing of "A Man of Action," the comedy from the pen of Bradley King and featuring Douglas MacLean, Marguerite de la Motte and Raymond Hatton. This production will follow "The Hottentot," another Ince comedy, on the First National releasing schedule.

Oliver Morosco Productions announce they have secured Avery Hopwood, well-known playwright, and author of a dozen Broadway successes, to write the titles for "Slippy McGee," their second production for First National release, featuring Colleen Moore and Wheeler Oakman.

Virginia Brown Faire, who is playing opposite Guy Bates Post in "Omar the Tent Maker," was given a week's vacation recently. The first glorious day of her freedom she drove with a party to Balboa for a picnic lunch and dip on the ocean. Freckles resulted, and Miss Faire spent the balance of her vacation trying to get rid of them.

Production of "The Glimpses of the Moon," Edith Wharton's popular novel, which is being translated to the screen by Allan Dwan, has been started at the Paramount Long Island studio. The opening setting for this picture was a fashionable modiste shop in New York in which Bebe Daniels and Nita Naldi, the featured actresses, had an opportunity to wear the smartest hats and gowns and lingerie that were obtainable on Fifth avenue.

Alice Brady and her company have returned to the Long Island studio from Miami, Fla., where they have been making exterior scenes for "The Leopardess," which was adapted from Katherine Newlin Burt's novel of that name. Most of the South Sea Island scenes were made at Cape Florida, and the company is now at work at the studio under the direction of Henry Kolker. Those who appeared with Miss Brady in the South Sea sequence of the picture are Montagu Love, Edward Lanford, George Beranger, Marguerite Forrest and Charles Kent.

"The Sheik," a Paramount picture with Rodolph Valentino and Agnes Ayres, has broken all records in Sydney, Australia. After 24 weeks at the Globe Theater, the largest in Australia, the picture was transferred to the Lyceum Theater, where it ran for five weeks more.

Ned Burton, a veteran of the stage of 50 years' standing and of the screen for 10 years, makes his debut in Paramount pictures with Thomas Meighan in George Ade's original story, "Back Home and Broke." Burton plays the role of the country town groceryman. He has appeared on the screen with Lionel Barrymore in "Jim the Penman," and with Madge Kennedy and other stars.

Matters of Current Interest to St. Louis Lovers of Art

FOR many years there has been a slight undercurrent of misunderstanding in St. Louis between the public, the artists and the dealers. Some claim that St. Louis is more inhospitable to its artists than any other city in the country; that this is the hardest place in the world for an artist to live, work and gain recognition; that those who have left here and been successful elsewhere consider St. Louis a fine place to come from if one intends making a reputation in art for oneself and that the only chance a St. Louis artist has of becoming a celebrity is for him to leave town, thus implying that those who remain here are hopeless novices, incapable of progress and destined to small-town obscurity. These ideas and sundry other contentions made on all sides are, without being intended as such, various forms of disloyalty, but which can be and are being corrected. The misunderstanding is the result of a confusion of cause and effect and will continue in circles until a basis of co-operation is definitely reached and permanently established. Toward this co-operation, the Artists' Guild is ardently striving, and its efforts and the results already accomplished are to be highly commended.

One of the best possible arguments in favor of the art ability, interest and support in St. Louis, and one which is helping accomplish the much-needed triangular bond between the artists, the public and the dealers, is the Competitive Exhibition now in progress at the Artists' Guild. The show this year exceeds all those previous that we have seen. It is more inclusive and covers a greater range of style, subject and technique than ever and is more truthfully representative of the fine work being done by our local painters. The advancement and development of some of the younger artists, as evidenced in their works exhibited this year, is gratifying.

Conspicuously hung on the wall facing the entrance to the exhibition gallery is a soft, early-evening landscape by E. H. Wuerpel, entitled "The River Bed." It is simple in composition, with wide, pleasant sweeps of fertile land over which the fading glow of the western sky lingers. It is painted in low key and is restful, peaceful and satisfying.

On the right of the landscape is hung William Bauer's picture of "An Ozark Village in Winter." It is probably the morning after a light snowstorm, for the snow has not yet started to melt on the roofs of a group of cottages in the village. The play of pale sunlight on the trees and the sides of the buildings bespeaks the light of an early day in February. The picture is very beautifully painted and is distinctive in quality. Mr. Bauer is ineligible for the Frederick Oakes Sylvester prize offered by Mr. Bixby, having received that prize last year.

On the left hangs Tom Barnett's "The Call of the Sea," a strong, energetic harbor marine. It is painted in high key, and tingles with life and animation. Two fishing boats and smaller craft are seen at dock. Spots of brilliant color are so well placed that the vibration between them causes it to seem that figures in bright costumes are hurrying to and fro on the decks. The very boats seem to roll gently in the moving water which is, itself, a bright blue and very clear. The motion of it is achieved by the broad bits of broken reflections. In the distance, the horizon line is indicated by soft purples, then lavenders, and finally a pinkish sky. This vigorous painting stands out in sharp contrast even to the other of this artist's works which is hung next to it though on the side wall. It is far more forceful than his well-known "winding stream in winter" subjects in which the inevitable blue ribbon of water flows always toward the spectator, between icy banks that descend from snowy hill sides.

Some of the best of Mr. Oscar Berninghaus' work is in this show. The gentle humor and great sincerity of the artist are here evidenced in the picture entitled "The Bleachers—Taos Ball Game." The scene, as is told in the title, is one at Taos, New Mexico. Against a vast background of mountains that shut away the big leagues, a few descendants of the original "scalpers" watch, presumably, a "homemade" game of the national sport. Along the foul line, at the edge of a dusty road, wagons and ponies are lined up. Interspersed among the men, Indian squaws in bright shawls stand in the wagons or beside fence posts, shading their eyes with one hand and maybe holding a dangling papoose with the other. All are in attitudes of extreme interest, their zodies bent forward, their faces alight with eagerness and excitement over the activities that are apparently in the field across the road and barely past the left margin of the picture. The portrayal of the sympathetic understanding of the red man, is evident and highly creditable to the artist's perception and comprehension of that fast-disappearing race, and to his artistic ability.

Almost as a companion to this picture is the one hung beside it, "Sun Showers—Taos," by the same artist. It is dramatic in handling as well as in subject. In the foreground two horses wait before the low, white shacks of some range-rider, far in the wilderness. Around the dwelling are seen the fences of the coral. In the middle distance of the picture, a deep shadow falls upon the mountain side, intensifying the dark purple and emphasizing the line between the shadow and sunshine. In the far distance, majestic mountains sweep upward in regal grandeur beneath the shower of descending sunlight that beats upon the breast of the moutnain like a rain. This phenomena is seen at various times and under certain atmospheric conditions in the West. The painting is unique not only because of the unusuality of subject, but because of the background being the center of interest instead of the foreground.

Harlan Fraser's "Tea Ladies" is delightful because of its delicacy. It is a lacy suggestion rather than a concrete portrayal, and contains much in its subtlety that would be lost in detailed transcription.

On the north wall are hung two paintings by Fred Carpenter, which are so totally different from one another it can hardly be believed that they come from the same artist's brush. The first, "Painter to the King," is charmingly "old Italian" in theme. Gathered around a fountain in the gardens of the palace, the beautiful maidens of the court array themselves in bright draperies preparatory to posing for their portraits for the King. At the extreme right and in the foreground, the artist, dressed in red and wearing a jaunty cap, sits before his easel with palette and brushes and directs the attendant who, to the left in the picture, unveils the lovely figure of the beautiful lady who will be his first model. While resembling in subject and spirit the art contemporary with the setting, the manner is altogether modern, and portrays the spirit of the theme rather than the actuality.

His other painting in the exhibition is that entitled "Nellie," a portrait of an attractive young woman in a voluminous silk gown, sitting leisurely in a corner of the artist's studio. The sheen on the taffeta silk is a bit of fine work noticed and commented upon by nearly all visitors. This picture is quite broadly painted, with a quality of color entirely different from that in "The Painter to the King," except that to be found in the handling of the still life in this picture.

Kathryn Cherry is once more represented by several of her vigorous paintings. In the main exhibition gallery, her pictures of "St. Louis Union Market" and "Forest Park in Winter" are hung on opposite walls. Both of these paintings have special interest for St. Louisans aside from their artistic excellence, since they depict well-known spots in picturesque old St. Louis.

The first requisite in viewing any of Mrs. Cherry's paintings is plenty of distance. Without it, one is overpowered by fierce and mighty brush strokes that are meaningless unless assembled. With proper distance, the separate units of color blend and form the energetic ensembles that are so full of vitality.

One of the most appealing of Gisella Loeffler's poster pictures is the black and white entitled "The Piper's Son," in which Tom Tom is seen tackling his father's old trade. He is surrounded by his small playmates, some of whom are enjoying his mighty blasts upon the horn, while those behind him chuckle at the joke explained in the inscription at the bottom of the picture:

"'Over the hills and far away'
Was the only tune that Tom could play."

Her largest picture, "Wonder," has been sold out of the exhibition. In a deep forest and in the shadow of two toadstools, a small girl-child from the real world looks in wonderment upon a green elfin creature with antennae and gossamer wings.

THE
PIANOFORTE

There is a subtle satisfaction in knowing that one's possessions, whatever their nature, are of superlative excellence. A Gobelin tapestry or a da Vinci painting is a constant source of pleasure and bears testimony to the taste of its owner To the music lover the same is true of the possession of a Mason & Hamlin Piano.

Those who are musically sensitive, whose appreciation of tonal quality renders them competent to judge, pronounce the Mason & Hamlin Piano the leading instrument of its kind.

Dame Melba, richly endowed with musical discrimination, says in this connection: "It seems to me that the preference on the part of an individual for the Mason & Hamlin Piano is indicative of a superior musical nature"

Only an actual hearing can give a realization of its beauty of tone

sketches by Fitzpatrick. The scene, back in the good old days, is at the far end of the brass rail, where the proverbial and never-to-be-forgotton barroom trio conscientiously renders "O! E-l-a-c-k Jo-o-o."

The other of Fitzpatrick's sketches is "The Retriever." A bulky gentleman is discovered determinedly pursuing his chosen vocation. With a swift, deft stroke with his innocent-enough-looking umbrella, he spears an errant apple fallen from a departing delivery wagon, with the prospect of adding it to a collection already well started.

The bazar held Wednesday, Thursday and Friday at the St. Louis School of Fine Arts was quite successful. Many beautiful articles made by students in the different departments were offered for sale. These were confined to objects small in size that would be suitable for gifts. Hand-wrought jewelry and ornaments, hand-bordered stationery, gilded and lacquered cigarette holders, fine linen work, interesting pieces of batik, hand-tooled leather articles, small paintings and bowls, vases and other pieces of pottery filled the tables and shelves. Several students dressed as maids, in frilly caps and aprons, served tea in the tea shop adjoining the northwest room in which the bazar was held. The attractive posters advertising the bazar, that were placed in windows about town, should not be overlooked. In some of these very excellent work was done. The large one placed in the hallway of the Artists' Guild, which was done by Helen Beccard, was especially nice. Its spontaneity gave it added charm.

GIRL SCOUT IGNORES "UNLUCKY 13;" SAVES TWO; TO GET MEDAL

13-Year-Old Girl Belonging to Troop 13 Believes She's Very Lucky.

Special to the Post-Dispatch.

NEW YORK.—Although she is 13 and a member of Scout Troop No. 13, Maizie Hundemann of 92 Bergen street, Brooklyn, considers herself lucky that her friends think well enough of her to make Maizie the center of a celebration, all because she saved two lives last summer.

"It wasn't anything," she said. "Any other Girl Scout would have done the same." But her opinion isn't shared by the rest of the troop. Miss Nellie S. Truman, directress of Brooklyn Girl Scouts, will pin a medal on the little heroine.

Maizie saved a Girl Scout of the same troop and a woman at Bayville, L. I., from drowning.

PLANS FOR CAROL SINGERS

The Carol Committee of the Children's Aid Society, in charge of the groups which will sing on Christmas eve for contributions for the Children's Aid, hopes to have a group from each public school. It is planned for the mother of a child attending one of these schools to conduct the singers on their neighborhood tour and take care of the collections.

The Board of Education, co-operating with the society, has sent instructions to the school, asking that the children be taught appropriate songs.

BOSTON—Restitution of $10,000 he had used in stock speculations won freedom on probation for Willis E. Hutchinson, a former bank teller, when he was arraigned in the Municipal Court. Hutchinson said he had "cleaned up" $7000 as a result of his use of the money.

MOTHER! BREAK CHILD'S COLD —GIVE "CALIFORNIA FIG SYRUP"

First move Little Bowels with this Harmless Laxative

Whatever else you give your child to relieve a bad cold, sore throat or congestion, be sure to first open the little one's bowels with "California Fig Syrup" to get rid of the poisons and waste which are causing the cold and congestion. In a few hours you can see for yourself how thoroughly it works the constipation poison, sour bile and waste right out.

Even if you call your family physician he will praise you for having given "California Fig Syrup" as the laxative because it never fails, never cramps or overacts, and even sick children love its pleasant taste.

Ask your druggist for genuine "California Fig Syrup" which has directions for babies and children of all ages printed on bottle. Mother! You must say "California" or you may get an imitation fig syrup.

Bond's Surprise SALE OF All-Wool 2-Pants Suits

Beautifully Tailored, All Wool
Winter Tweeds, Scotches and Cassimeres
Our Own $35 and $40 Suits

Two Pair of Pants with these Suits

Not since 1913 have such values been offered—if ever, and only through the never changing Bond's policy of "Sell this season's merchandise this season" are we able to do so now.

Under ordinary conditions our big factories keep continually busy tailoring garments for our own stores. Daily shipments keep our stores supplied with absolutely the newest that can be produced. This season, for some unforeseen reason, one of the big mills was delayed in the making of some of the suiting woolens, purchased by our woolen experts—added to that condition the extremely mild fall weather, which, too, was unexpected; both broke up the usual routine of the steady stream from our factories to our stores to our customers.

The suits we now place on sale are the ones made up from these "late arriving" woolens—woolens that during the delay have increased in value by more than 20%. It is our "iron clad" rule not to carry over a single garment from season to season and in spite of the fact that these suits were made up to sell at $35 and $40, rather than take chances we have priced them down to $25 with 2 pair of pants. Because we knew our customers would move these suits for us in "double quick time," we refused to sell the entire lot at wholesale—for if it's good for the wholesaler it's good for our customers.

We advise every sensible saving man to come here and witness the biggest clothes bargain feast ever attempted. You won't be asked to buy—your own better judgment will tell you that. Come down today—you'll be glad you came.

Charles A. Bond
Pres.
The Bond Clothing Co.

ROSE RUBIN'S NEXT ROLE IN PLAY OF MEXICO

week. They are "The Lady Christine," with Fay Bainter, and "Rose Bernd," with Billie Burke. The first will be seen here in January and the second on Christmas night.

Christmas Night Openings.

ANOTHER opening for Christmas evening is "Glory," a musical comedy by James Montgomery, author of "Irene," and still another will be "Secrets," with Margaret Lawrence, at the Ambassador. * * * With the arrival of Joseph Schildkraut at the Shubert Riviera for a week in "Liliom," the Theater Guild last Monday began rehearsals of Ibsen's "Peer Gynt."

Heinrich Reinhardt, composer of "The Spring Maid," has sent his son, Harry Reinhardt, to this country to produce two new operettas, "The Dancer of Apollosaal" and "The Sweet Models." The former had its premiere in Vienna last Saturday night and the latter is to be produced in that city during January. * * * David Warfield and "The Merchant of Venice" are in Detroit this week and will open in Washington Monday night. After a week in the capital, the production will move to the Lyceum Theater here. It is said that Belasco spent $250,000 on the production, and that there are 125 extra persons in the company.

"Merton of the Movies" is to be produced in London at the Shaftesbury Theater. * * * After completing her engagement with "The Follies," Gilda Gray is going to Paris to star at Elsor Maxwell's new midnight resort, "Les Acasias." * * * Arguments are to be heard Monday in the Supreme Court on William A. Page's application for an injunction forbidding the majority stockholders from selling his play, "The Bootleggers." Page alleges that the proposed purchasers are prohibitionists who desire to suppress the comedy because of its injurious effect upon the dry movement. * * * This is Ethel Barrymore's last week in "Rose Bernd." The Longacre will remain dark until she appears there in "Romeo and Juliet," in about a month.

Shaw as an Adaptor.

THE first appearance of George Bernard Shaw as an adaptor of a foreign play into English will be signalized by Bertha Kalich's production of "Atonement," a drama by Siegfried Trebitsch, which is now in rehearsal. Mme. Kalich herself, who saw the play in Vienna, persuaded Shaw to make it over. Her task was the easier in that Shaw was repaying a debt. Most of the German translations of his plays were made by Trebitsch.

Mrs. Joseph Jefferson, after witnessing a performance of "The Fool," wrote to Channing Pollock, the author: "Once more I have felt proud of my husband's profession." * * *"Icebound," a new play by Owen Davis, was submitted simultaneously to four producers, three of whom accepted it. The highest bidder got it.

The two principal events before Christmas will be Belasco's production of "The Merchant of Venice," with David Warfield, at the Lyceum, and "Johannes Kreisler" at the Apollo. Plays due to arrive about the first of the year are "The Clinging Vine," with Peggy Wood, and a new musical play, "The Little Kangaroo," starring James T. Powers.

There are about 50 productions destined for New York at the present time, some in rehearsal, others in outlying towns, a few big ones which are trying Chicago and other large cities till spring. . . . Robert Warwick is to forsake the cast in three in "To Love," for the reason, he says, or is reported to have said, that he cannot live on the road on $750 a week. . . . Miss Patti Harrold is to have the principal role in "Glory." . . . Percival Knight will have the title role in the American production of "Old Bill, M. P.," Bruce Bairnsfather's sequel to "The Better 'Ole."

Berlin's Foot Slips.

IRVING BERLIN admits he was stung when he wrote a lyric for his new Music Box Revue, to the effect that "every little he—he takes a little she-bee." Apiarists have showered him with letters setting forth that, as every schoolboy knows, only the queen bee in the whole colony takes to herself a husband. . . . During Thanksgiving week, Galsworthy's "Loyalties," played to bigger receipts than were ever recorded at the Gaiety.

Adele Astaire, starring in "The Bunch and Judy," celebrated her twenty-first birthday Tuesday night. . . . During the present season the Theater Guild promises to produce Elmer Rice's "The Adding Machine." . . . Otto Kruger has finally been selected to play the title part in Clemence Dane's "Will Shakspeare," which is due in January.

Johnny Dooley, leading comedian in "The Bunch and Judy," has filed a petition of voluntary bankruptcy, listing his liabilities at $4308 and his assets at $250. . . . Florence Shirley, leading woman in "Why Men Leave Home," has received a check for $25,000 under the will of an uncle who, five years ago, promised her a "real present" whenever she succeeded in satisfying "the New York critics as to her ability as an actress in a leading role."

The inmates of Sing Sing are going in for musical comedy. At the "Little Theater" within the walls of the institution they gave "Honey Girl" this week, with every part taken by a prisoner. . . . Eugene Walter's "At the End of the World" having collapsed in Chicago, "He Who Gets Slapped" was rushed thither this week to fill the void.

Edith Day and Pat Somerset retired tonight from the cast of "Orange Blossoms," which begins its road engagement Monday. . . . There is a dressing room at the Cort Theater which has become a family possession. Mary Nash occupied it during the long run of "Captain Applejack," and then turned it over just as it was to her sister, Florence, who plays the Montague girl in "Merton of the Movies."

Road Contracts Awarded.

POPLAR BLUFF, Mo.—Two large road contracts have been awarded, one to Roy L. Williams, for the building of the Airline road south of Charleston. His bid was $570,000. The other contract, for the Butler County portion of the Poplar Bluff-Cairo highway was awarded to a Poplar Bluff firm whose bid was $367,000. Both highways will be of 18-foot concrete.

WOULD LIFT IMMIGRATION BARS

Meeting of Manufacturers Called for Dec. 15.

By the Associated Press.

CHICAGO, Dec. 9.—The National Conference of State Manufacturers' Associations has taken steps to obtain the repeal of the 3 per cent restrictive section in the United States immigration act. It has called a meeting of manufacturers and business men from a dozen states, to be held here Dec. 15.

In connection with the announcement, the Industrial Relations Committee of the Illinois Manufacturers' Association asserted "there is a labor shortage in Chicago, Bloomington, Danville, East St. Louis, Joliet, Rock Island and Springfield."

PEASANTS TAKE UP SHOOTING

Popular With Masses in Austria—Game Plentiful.

By the Associated Press.

VIENNA, Dec. 9.—Once the sport only of the aristocracy, shooting is becoming the pastime of the masses in Austria. Few countries are so plentifully stocked with game of every kind, furred and feathered, and the large estates have been splendidly preserved for centuries. The great European stag, smaller deer and chamois are still abundant, while fowls of various kinds furnish excellent sport.

Many of the once rich landowners are no longer able to keep up their shootings, with the necessary armies of gamekeepers and other heavy expenses, and the properties are being rented.

TALK ON JAPANESE RELATIONS

American Educator Speaking in Tokio Approves Joint Commission Plan.

Correspondence of the Associated Press.

TOKIO, Nov. 17.—Discussing relations between Japan and America before the College of Commerce of the Imperial University, Dr. David Starr Jordan, president emeritus of Leland Stanford University, approved the plan suggested by Viscount Shibusawa for the appointment of a joint commission to discuss the matter. "Such a commission could not settle the points at issue, which must go to the courts, but it would serve to dispel misunderstandings on both sides, a matter of the highest importance," he said.

"The Washington conference was a great triumph of common sense and common decency. Its main achievement was to prick the monstrous and dangerous bubble of war-scare, assiduously inflated by evil-minded men on bith sides of the Pacific. Japan and America will be neighbors for the next thousand years, and it is good business as well as good morals to be neighborly."

Brunswick's Annual Shoppers' Christmas Guide

21 Handsome Models to Choose From This Year—All Styles—All Woods—All Finishes

Here are 21 supreme musical instruments. You will find among them a design to meet exactly your individual requirements. A price to suit your purse. At terms you will find very convenient.

All embody the exclusive, patent-protected features which make The Brunswick dominant in musical circles today — the phonograph accepted by musical critics the world over as the highest peak of musical reproduction.

Note particularly these two Brunswick advantages

They put Brunswick far in the lead in fidelity and naturalness of tone reproduction. They are obtainable on no other phonograph.

(1) All-wood Tone Chamber

Just as a fine old violin owes its value to rare woods, properly shaped and balanced, so the Brunswick Tone Amplifier — made entirely of seasoned hollywood, skillfully smoothed and rounded — gives The Brunswick the clear, mellow tones for which it is famous. You notice at once the grateful absence, in Brunswick tone, of the metallic accompaniment peculiar to old-fashioned talking machines.

(2) All-record Reproducer

This universal reproducer — the Brunswick Ultona—plays any make of record with just a turn of the hand. There are no "attachments." Nothing to "put on" or "take off." The Ultona has a separate mounting for the usual steel or fibre needle, a separate mounting for the semi-permanent sapphire ball point, and a separate diaphragm and mounting for the permanent genuine diamond point. At a turn of the hand any one of these playing points is presented to the record.

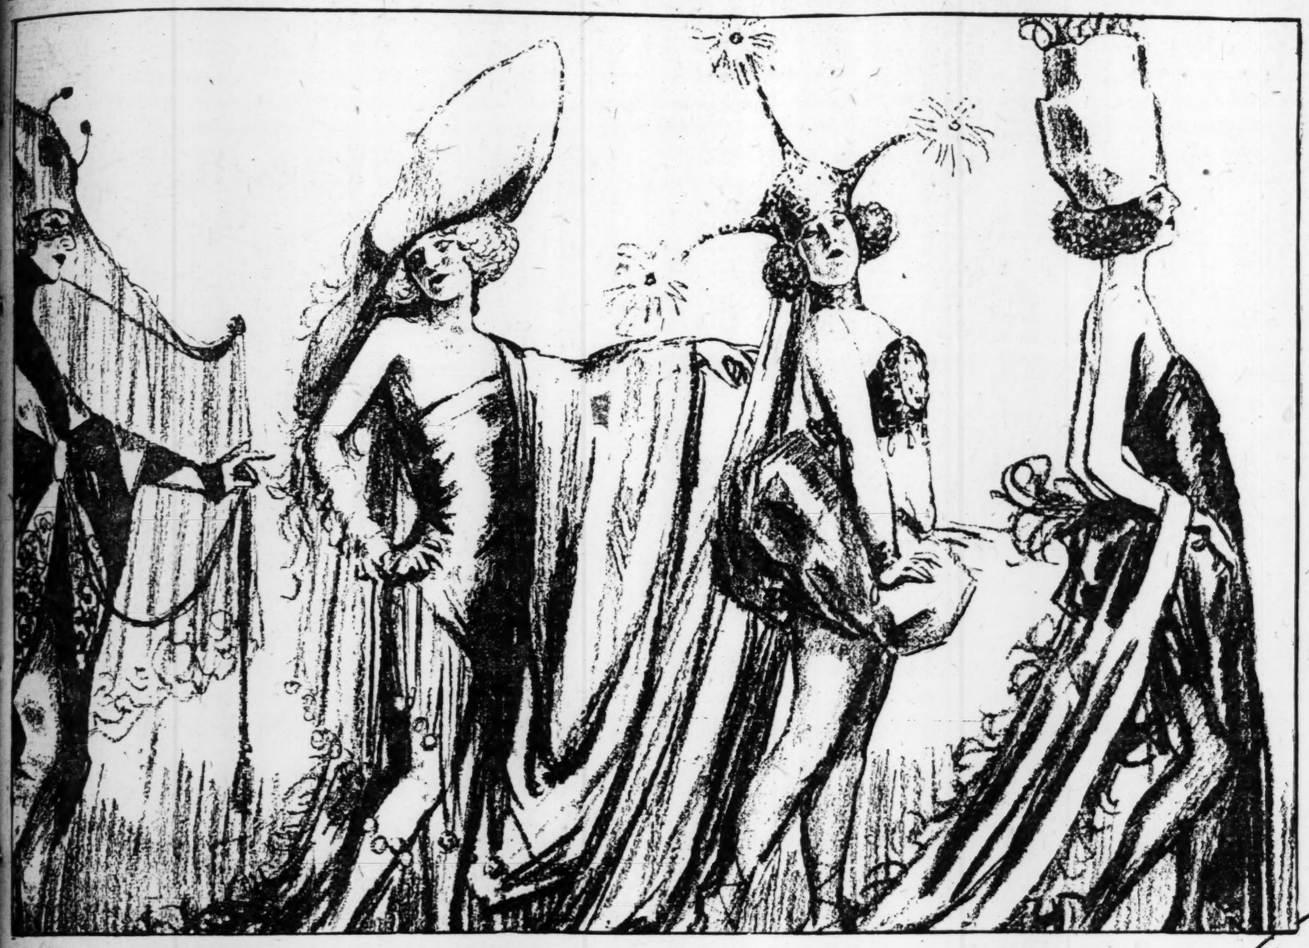
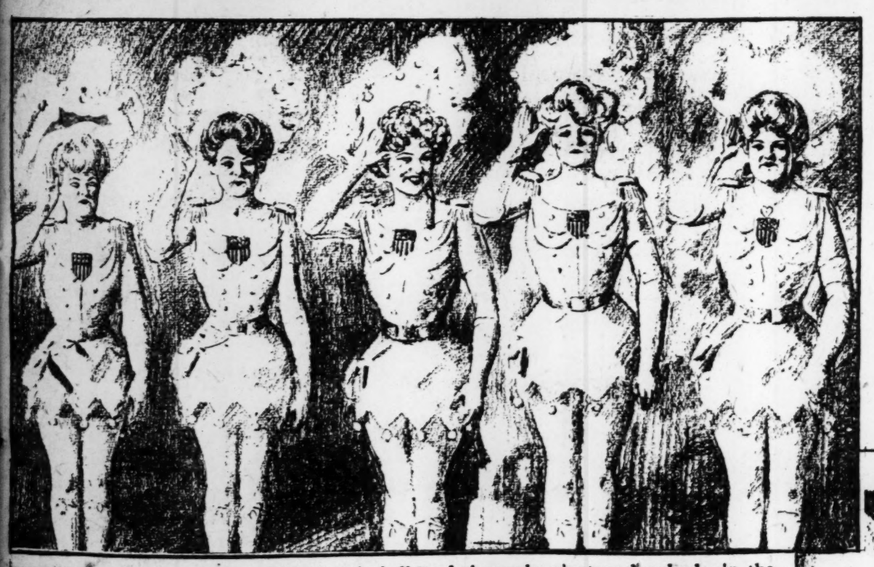
General News

THE BALLET

By W. E. Hill



The Midvictorian revival, "The Poet and the Katydid," is programmed as a "fantasy," meaning very slender as to theme. The plot deals with a young poet who went a-wooing among the daisies and jonquils one spring. Pretty soon a Katydid came along and stole the heart of the Poet away from the Daisy and the Crocus. There certainly was h—ll to pay! The Poet and the Katydid got bounding around and around, making faces at each other till it seemed as if the little hearts of Daisy and Crocus would well-nigh break. Finally Katydid tired of the Poet and flew away. The Poet died of a broken heart and was mourned by Daisy and Crocus. Very unhappy as to ending, but very artistic.



The ballet of jewels, or fans, or trash baskets, or vampires, in which the ladies of the ensemble depict by easy stages the evolution of something or other. These four picked beauties—and good girls they are, all of them—are doing their bit to put across the "Ballet of Scents" in the current "Foibles of 1923"—showing the evolution of musk and Florida water from early Chaldean times straight up to 1922

The piece de resistance of the vaudeville act by the "Eight English Water Cresses."

The program ballet is "based on a legend." According to the program "The Bridegroom of the East Wind" ballet is based on an old Paw Paw legend which has it that Prince Rosenblatt, bridegroom-elect of the East Wind, is expected as a test of his delicacy to spend a day and a night in the garden of the daughters of Proserpine. Should he succumb to their wiles he will be judged impure and will be banished forever from the kingdom of the moon. Prince Rosenblatt is tempted in turn by the five graces, Chicanery, Lust, Roguish Deeds, Chance and Indecision. There ensues a wild dance of fear, hatred and simulated remorse. Thereupon Hulda, factotum of Klug, Ruler of the Air, touched by his plight, presents Rosenblatt with a vial which shall render him impervious to all seductions. There follows a mad revel, during which Prince Rosenblatt steps on the vial and breaks it. Amid general rejoicing, Prince Rosenblatt is judged unworthy and is banished forever from the Kingdom of the Brownies.

The classic stuff from the vaudeville circuit—a bacchanal, if you please, right out before everybody, danced by Wladla and Rousemuff and their troupe of Russian dancers.

Way back in 1905, this was the very latest thing in Pony Ballet costumes. It was supposed to be awfully cute.

The electric ballet of the early nineteen hundreds, in the good old days before "shapes" had even begun to go out. Near the end of act second, someone would look happily into the wings and say, "Why, here comes the Central Park Zouaves!" and sure enough, on they would come. Then at the end of the drill, the stage would be darkened and, without any warning at all, the costumes of the Central Park Zouaves would light up! And if the show had been put on without regard to expenditure, a big American flag made of electric lights would appear in the sky.

The flying ballet of the nineties. In the grand transformation scene of the fairy extravaganza several intrepid ladies of the ballet used to be lifted on pulleys and carried right up to the proscenium. Sometimes they threw paper flowers out to a breathless audience, sometimes they didn't. But it was grand.

The Ballet pupil, who loves nothing better than to chase a toy balloon around the floor.

HEALTH WEEK BEGINS IN ST. LOUIS TODAY

Pastors and Physicians to Speak in Churches—Campaign in Schools.

Health week in St. Louis and St. Louis County begins today with addresses in the churches of virtually every denomination. Literature on the promotion of health and the prevention of disease will be distributed in more than 200 churches. Pastors will speak on the subject. In many churches physicians will give illustrated talks tonight.

In co-operation with the Board of Education, educational literature will be distributed Tuesday to the public school children, parochial school children and in the two universities. All but one private school in the city is following a similar plan.

The advisory medical staff of the Tuberculosis Society is advocating physical examinations at least once a year and provision is being made for persons who cannot afford to pay a physician. The pamphlet for distribution in the churches is issued by the research department of the local society and deals with the cutting down of the death rate in the last 17 years. Figures show that tuberculosis has decreased one-half in that period.

The two chief reasons for the decrease, according to a report, are education and periodical examination, as well as inculcation of health habits among school children.

Moving picture houses will show slides and educational films Saturday. "The Priceless Gift of Health" and "Health Twins at Work" are two of the feature films.

At factories during the week health talks, illustrated with lantern slides, will be given, and films will be shown at the noon hour. The Rev. John W. Day, chairman of the Educational Committee of the Tuberculosis Society; Dr. L. P. H. Bahrenburg, medical director of the society; Dr. Joseph F. Bredeck, tuberculosis controller, and several of the other members will deliver these talks.

The Postoffice Department is placing on the outgoing mail during December, the inscription—"Christmas Seals Stamp Out Tuberculosis."

The seal sale campaign formally was opened Dec. 5, and will terminate Christmas eve. The society derives its chief revenue through sale of the seals. Last year more than $50,000 was raised by this means.

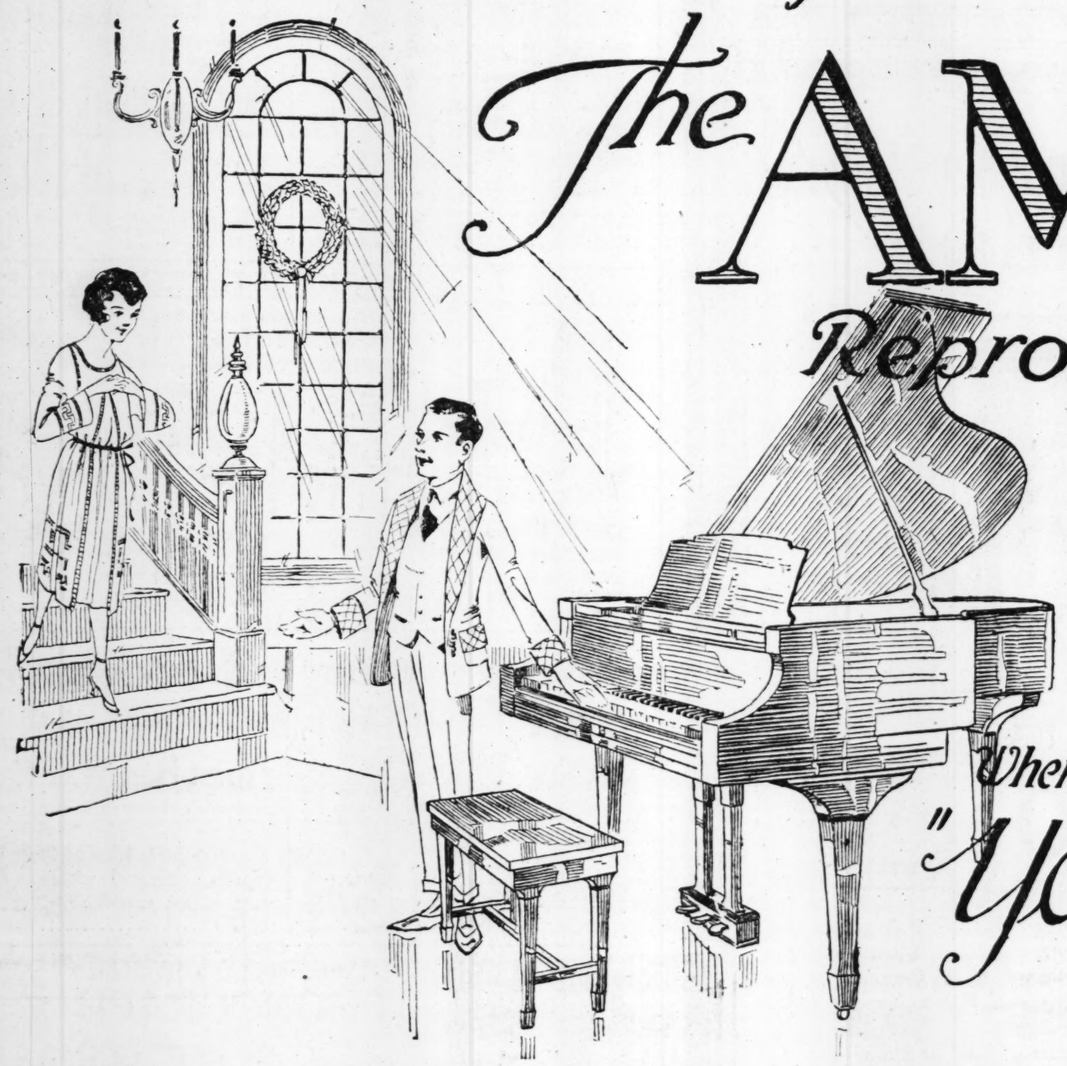
The Finest Gift in all the World!



The AMPICO

Reproducing Piano

That superlative thrill, that moment of pure conquest which is vouchsafed but seldom in a lifetime—and for which a whole lifetime of effort is not too dear a price to pay—is yours, sir,

When You Say to her Christmas Morning

"Yours, My Dear!"

GLORIOUS is the day when the AMPICO comes into your life! To human ears, to human enjoyment of the musically beautiful, nothing in the history of mankind has added so much.

And What Is The Ampico?

The ONE instrument that reproduces with absolute accuracy the recordings of world-famous artists.

Listen: The melody has started — a Chopin nocturne. Pure, serene, like a shining river it glides; shaded by exquisite measures of color; flowing on and on, until the ears seem filled with its somnolent dreaming. Your soul takes wings.

The AMPICO for yourself — the AMPICO for all the family, it means a new lease on life, a new interest in living. Joy, joy, that you never dreamed existed is yours when the AMPICO comes—music, divinest of the arts—of that art. Rachmaninoff, Godowsky, Levitski, Samaroff, Ornstein, Dr. Richard Strauss, Kreisler, Moissewitch, Arthur Rubenstein and a host of others record now for the AMPICO. And for the AMPICO Exclusively. They are all yours — your own, WHEN and as OFTEN as you want them. Did the artist refuse an encore? — Not the AMPICO. Did the artist, worn from a long tour, play indifferently? NEVER the AMPICO. All AMPICO Recordings are made when the artist is at his best.

And as for the dance music, well, only the AMPICO can produce those indescribable thrills and unique rhythms so necessary to a "Perfect Party." Old-time ballads, simple songs of everyday life, all are yours thru the medium of the AMPICO REPRODUCING PIANO.

Conroy's Are Exclusive Distributors

for the AMPICO in the world-famous KNABE, THE HAINES BROS., and the MARSHALL & WENDELL Pianos. These instruments are recognized as the leaders in their field. The extraordinary success of the AMPICO has brought on the market a host of spurious imitations that are hardly anything more or less than ordinary player pianos. The AMPICO is the ONE reproducing piano, and had the courts permitted the name reproducing to be copyrighted, no other instrument today could be sold as a genuine reproducing piano. In the AMPICO the mechanism is concealed inside the instrument, yet the strings are not shortened, the sounding board reduced, nor the case lengthened or thrown out of proportion. The piano may, of course, be played by hand when desired.

Read what these international authorities say concerning THEIR AMPICOS:

From Dr. Richard Strauss—
"It is with great interest that I record my compositions for the AMPICO, the reputation of which has already reached my ears in Europe."

From Dr. Cyrus Townsend Brady
"As you listen your pipe goes out—truest test of absorption—and you forget your surroundings and are transported to the Elysian Fields of romance and harmonies divine." From Dr. Albert Einstein—"The AMPICO elicits my great admiration; reproductions are so finely nuanced and the operations seem so simple. Permit me to extend my best compliments."

Some Prominent Ampico Owners:

H. R. H. The Prince of Wales; His Excellency President Menocal; J. Ogden Armour; August A. Busch; Otto Kahn; Claus Spreckles, Clement Studebaker, George J. Whelan; Mrs. O. P. Belmont; George C. Durant; Mrs. Alfred G. Vanderbilt; Vincent Astor; Jay Gould.

TURKISH OILFIELDS MAY BECOME PRODUCTIVE

Negotiations of 2 Years Brought to End by Anglo-French-American Pact.

Correspondence of the Associated Press.

LONDON, Nov. 22. — The approaching Anglo-French-American agreement regarding the Mosul oilfields in Asiatic Turkey brings to an end the negotiations which have been in abeyance for two years and which have been of international interest.

The Germans were the first to interest themselves in the possibilities of these fields, taking up the matter early in this century. The German prospectors, however, took care to make two reports of their discoveries, sending one to their own Government, in which they referred to the splendid opportunities presented by the old fields, and the other to the Sultan's Government, in which the same opportunities were said to be very meager. The then Sultan, Abdul Hamid, managed to obtain copies of both reports. Concealing his resentment from the Germans, he had the revenues from Mosul transferred from the State Department of Mines to his own Civil List, in order better to bargain with former Emperor William.

The negotiations dragged on for many years. Meanwhile the D'Arcy exploration of the same field was carried out, and two years before the war the much desired concession was obtained by an international syndicate, the Turkish Petroleum Co. The Germans obtained 25 per cent of the stock of the company and English interests the other 75 per cent.

Under the San Remo Oil convention of 1920, the German interests were transferred to France. Last year, however, the American Government disputed the claim of the English interests, but in the end merely asked the right to share in the enterprise. The amount of interest alloted to the Americans under the new agreement is not known, but it will probably only be a nominal percentage of the British and French interests.

Regarding the other Irak oil fields, America and all Powers of the League of Nations are given equal opportunities. No prospecting so far has taken place.

SALVADOR CONSUL WOULD FORM INTERNATIONAL COFFEE BODY

Society Could Reduce Charges Caused by Indirectness of Sale, He Believes.

Rafael Garcia Escobar, Consul in St. Louis for the Republic of Salvador, has suggested that his country "could initiate through diplomatic channels an international society, representing all the countries cultivating the coffee grain."

This organization could assist in various reforms of the coffee trade which Escobar thinks are necessary, he explains. Among the alleged ills is indirectness of sale which acts upon coffee prices in this way, according to Escobar's theory:

"At present coffee prices are higher because, when the coffee reaches the United States, it has passed through many hands, as the result of which the prices are so exorbitant that it is almost impossible for the consumers to purchase it. For this reason the owners of cafeterias and restaurants are forced to mix foreign substances with the coffee."

Moscow Gamblers Demand Dollars.

Correspondence of the Associated Press.

MOSCOW, Nov. 7.—American dollars are now being used nightly in Moscow's gambling casinos, where the play amounts into trillions of roubles at a single turn. Players at baccarat, roulette and chemin-de-fer, when they win, ask for their profits in United States notes.

WARNS THAT HUNTING SOON MAY EXTERMINATE WHALES

Sir Sidney Harmer, F. R. S., Says That Legislation for Protection Is Needed.

(Correspondence of the Associated Press.)

LONDON, Nov. 22.—If the killing of whales continues at the present rate they will be exterminated before another decade, is the warning given by Sir Sidney F. Harmer, F. R. S., director of the Natural History Department of the British Museum. Recent investigations carried out in the whaling areas has revealed this entirely to the southern seas.

The whaling industry has survived since the time of Alfred the Great, despite the fact that there has never been a year known when scores of boats did not leave the ports of England, France, Spain and Scandinavia to hunt, Sir Sidney declared in a recent address in which he urged legislation against further hunting of whales.

The Greenland variety of the whale is already thought to be extinct, and the hunting of the last few years has been confined almost entirely to the southern seas.

The profits derived from the killings are enormous, and they increase yearly as the retail price of the oil and bone increase. A fair-sized whale has a ton of whalebone in its mouth, which alone is worth $10,000. It also produces about 30 tons of oil, worth about $100 a ton. In the season of 1915-16 the oil production from Antarctic whaling stations was 654,000 barrels, or about 94,000 tons.

DETROIT PLANS WORLD'S FAIR

By the Associated Press.

DETROIT, Mich., Dec. 9.—Detroit will have a world's fair, either in 1925 or 1926, if a plan prepared by the Board of Commerce materializes. A world's peace jubilee and waterway exposition in 1926 is planned in the event Philadelphia is unable to carry out the contemplated plan for an exposition commemorating the 150th anniversary of the signing of the Declaration of Independence. If Philadelphia decides to hold its exposition the Detroit fair would be held a year earlier.

Harold H. Emmons, president of the board, announced the proposal would be studied carefully by leading business men here within the next few months. The last world's fair was held in St. Louis in 1904.

JOSEPH CONRAD FAILS TO SEE HIS OWN PLAY

Stays Away From First Night of "The Secret Agent," Saying Theaters Frighten Him.

By a Staff Correspondent of the Post-Dispatch and New York World and Manchester Guardian.

(Copyright, 1922.)

LONDON, Nov. 28.—Joseph Conrad was caught by me, comfortably smoking in the lounge of a West End hotel when the first night of his first play, "The Secret Agent," was about to open.

"Oh, no, I'm not worrying," he said, "and I don't want to be in the house. Theaters frighten me and always have. I never see plays; I have not even seen my friend, Mr. Galsworthy's fine 'Loyalties,' although, of course, I read him eagerly. My wife, however, likes theaters and is just going to see the first performance of 'The Secret Agent,' as the only representative of the firm. At the last moment I tried to get seats for my boys, but not a place was to be had in the theater. I offered even to pay for seats, but they merely laughed at the box office. "But," he added, half turning, with a twinkle, 'you can give evidence of my calmness on a first night, can you not?"

With reference to the play, Conrad declared that he found the writing of it very trying, as it meant "cutting all the flesh off the book." "But in doing so I realized, as I never had done, what a gruesome story I had written in 'The Secret Agent.' In writing the novel, of course, I veiled the plot to some extent by all those elements which go to make a book. I had to get to the bare bones of the story in making my play. To me playwriting seems an exercise in ingenuity."

Just Picked Up Speech.

Asked how he acquired his wonderful command of English prose, Conrad (a British citizen of Polish parentage) replied:

"Oh, I simply picked it up, you know. I heard it spoken, and when I could talk enough I read. Reading was my salvation. Perhaps I could say that I learned English by reading the newspapers. I learned a great deal from the old Standard when it was under Mudford. He was more than an ordinary journalist. He was a cultured man, and in those days they paid great attention to style. 'Telegraphese' and 'Punch' were unknown in English journalism. The origin of the very word 'Punch' is instructive, I think. It came from America from cowpuncher. Probably 'punching' the cow referred to the blow with the branding iron."

"Now look at that word 'punch,'" Conrad resumed—"all the meaning it has. It is a technical noun and it is several other common things. Also there is the 'punch' immortalized by Dickens in 'Pickwick.' Can you wonder that I experienced enormous difficulty in learning the English language? Look at the words pronounced alike and meaning different things—words ending in 'ough,' for instance. The phonetics of English is indeed a dismal thing for foreigners."

One Language Impossible.

The interviewer asked Conrad what he thought of a universal language as a means of removing a barrier between the nations of the world.

"I do not think that will ever be possible. I am certainly inclined to be afraid of any such experiment. There are so many shades of meaning in every language. Besides, I do not think that language is the biggest barrier between nations. And language must possess an individual genius. Those old cave-men ancestors were quite right. They simply used language to express themselves, whether the people in the next cave could understand or not. I am often quite shocked at the disrespect we show to our primitive ancestors. They may have possessed genius equal to ours, though perhaps (Conrad smiled) they did generally use it in a different manner from force of circumstances. No, a universal language does not sound possible.

NEW BOOKS FOR THE WEEK AT THE PUBLIC LIBRARY

"THE EVENING POST," a century in journalism, by Allan Nevins. Founded by Alexander Hamilton more than 120 years ago, the Post is the oldest American daily newspaper. This is not only a history of the paper, but it throws light on the history of American journalism and the development of New York City. Some of the editors were William Cullen Bryant, Carl Schurz, E. L. Godkin, Horace White, John Bigelow and Rollo Ogden.

"GLIMPSES OF AUTHORS," by Caroline Ticknor. Delightful and intimate pictures of Dickens, Hawthorne, Longfellow, Whittier, Lew Wallace, Lafcadio Hearn, Mark Twain, Joel Chandler Harris, Howells, William Winter, Henry James and others.

"INTRODUCTION TO POETRY," by Jay B. Hubbell and John O. Beaty. For readers and writers of poetry. Its purpose is to offer to students the technical side, criticisms and examples of English poetry and a comparison of the new and older American and English poets.

"PUPPET SHOW OF MEMORY," by Maurice Baring. A book of recollections by an English journalist and critic. It commences with London life in the eighties, followed in turn with life at Eton, Cambridge and Oxford, diplomatic service in London and Paris, Copenhagen and Rome. Mr. Baring served as a war correspondent in Manchuria, Constantinople and the Balkans. Music, literature, interesting people and events are discussed in turn. The book abounds in anecdotes and the style is charming.

"SHAKSPEARE'S GARDEN," by Esther Singleton. The author, who is an ardent student of Shakspeare, has spent years compiling material on the gardens of Shakspeare's time. Shakspeare was a lover of flowers and frequently referred to them in his plays. This is the first complete book on the subject and should be interesting both to the lover of old gardens and to students interested in Shakspeariana.

"SHAKSPEARE TO SHERIDAN," a book about the theater of yesterday and today. By Alwin Thaler. The general reader, as well as the student, will find this volume useful and interesting. It treats of the history of the theater for two centuries during and following Shakspeare's time. The author says, "The underlying purpose is to show how continuous has been the great tradition; how minutely and circumstantially the theater of the seventeenth and eighteenth centuries modeled its activities upon those of Shakspeare and his fellows; and to suggest, in turn, how much the theater of our day and hour owes to that of yesterday.

"WILLIAM DEAN HOWELLS," a critical study. By Delmar Gross Cooke. Has chapters on: The man; his conception of criticism; his ideals of literature; his literary method; his poetry and travels; his fiction; transcripts of life; studies in ethics. In this readable study the author points out how permanent a place Howells holds in American literature.

SAGE TEA TURNS GRAY HAIR DARK

It's Grandmother's Recipe to Bring Back Color and Lustre to Hair

That beautiful, even shade of dark, glossy hair can only be had by brewing a mixture of Sage Tea and Sulphur. Your hair is your charm. It makes or mars the face. When it fades, turns gray or streaked, just an application or two of Sage and Sulphur enhances its appearance a hundredfold.

Don't bother to prepare the mixture; you can get this famous old recipe improved by the addition of other ingredients at a small cost, all ready for use. It is called Wyeth's Sage and Sulphur Compound. This can always be depended upon to bring back the natural color and lustre of your hair.

Everybody uses "Wyeth's Sage and Sulphur Compound" now because it darkens so naturally and evenly that nobody can tell it has been applied. You simply dampen a sponge or soft brush with it and draw this through the hair, taking one small strand at a time; by morning the gray hair has disappeared, and after another application it becomes beautifully dark and appears glossy and lustrous.

Famous Old Recipe for Cough Syrup

Easily and Cheaply Made at Home, But It Beats Them All for Quick Results.

Thousands of housewives have found that they can save two-thirds of the money usually spent for cough preparations, by using this well-known old recipe for making cough syrup. It is simple and cheap but it has no equal for prompt results. It takes right hold of a cough and gives immediate relief, usually stopping an ordinary cough in 24 hours or less.

Get 2½ ounces of Pinex from any druggist, pour it into a pint bottle, and add plain granulated sugar syrup to make a full pint. If you prefer, use clarified molasses, honey, or corn syrup, instead of sugar syrup. Either way, it tastes good, keeps perfectly, and lasts a family a long time.

It's truly astonishing how quickly it acts, penetrating through every air passage of the throat and lungs—loosens and raises the phlegm, soothes and heals the membranes, and gradually but surely the annoying throat tickle and dreaded cough disappear entirely. Nothing better for bronchitis, spasmodic croup, hoarseness or bronchial asthma.

Pinex is a special and highly concentrated compound of genuine Norway pine extract known the world over for its healing effect on membranes.

Avoid disappointment by asking your druggist for "2½ ounces of Pinex" with full directions and don't accept anything else. Guaranteed to give absolute satisfaction or money promptly refunded. The Pinex Co., Ft. Wayne, Ind.

Your druggist carries a thousand and one items for your convenience and welfare. Always "Try the drug store first."

Why Your Druggist Recommends Pluto

Your druggist knows that constipation is the forerunner of most sickness and demands prompt relief. That is why he recommends Pluto Water.

He knows Pluto acts in 30 minutes to two hours. He knows Pluto is a harmless water laxative—it gently flushes the system. He knows Pluto is sure, safe and does not gripe.

Today, or this evening, stop at the drug store—take home a bottle of Pluto Water. In case of sickness the best plan is always to call a doctor, but Pluto is a splendid safeguard in the home; its timely use often prevents sickness. For children as well as adults; vary the dose according to age.

MISSOURI COTTON CROP IS VALUED AT $18,720,000

Era of Unheard-of Prosperity Created by the Industry in the Southeastern Part of State Revealed by Article.

GINNINGS INDICATE 130,000-BALE YIELD

Acreage of 195,000 Planted in 13 Counties of Which 154,300 Was in Dunklin, Pemiscot and Ne Madrid.

Special to the Post-Dispatch.

JEFFERSON CITY, Mo.—Dec. 9. A bonanza cotton crop in Southeast Missouri, which has created unheard of prosperity in that part of the State is revealed in an article prepared for the 1922 Year Book of the Missouri Department of Agriculture, advance proofs of which have been given out. An expansion of the cotton growing industry in Missouri is predicted as a result of the ravages of the boll weevil further south.

Figures prepared under teh direction of Jewell Mayes, secretary of the State Board of Agriculture, and E. A. Logan, agricultural statistician of the United States Government, show that 13 Missouri counties this year planted 195,000 acres of cotton, of which 154,300 acres are in Dunklin, Pemiscot and New Madrid Counties. Final figures on yield are not yet available, but the ginnings to Nov. 14 were 112,072 bales, indicating a yield of about 130,000 bales. In addition, several thousand bales of Missouri-grown cotton were ginned across the line in Arkansas and hence will be credited to that State.

Estimated Value of Crop.

On the basis of 130,000 bales, Missouri's 1922 cotton crop was worth $18,720,000 to the land owners and tenants, practically all of this huge sum being distributed in cash between Sept. 1 and Dec. 31.

Cotton has been grown in the extreme southern part of the State for many years, but with exception of Dunklin and Pemiscot counties, has never been considered a major crop.

As a typical incident of the cotton marketing season, the Cape Girardeau Southeast Missourian cites the fact that the bank at Gideon, Mo., remained open until midnight recently to take care of the cotton business, and several clerks were kept busy every minute of the time. The same article continues:

"The bank remains open practically 24 hours a day to take care of the business created by the gin, which has been running several weeks without shutting down for a minute. At 10 o'clock Friday morning there were 57 wagons waiting to be unloaded and the average load of each wagon was from 1800 to 2000 pounds. That day the gin was paying 8½ cents a pound for cotton, making the total value of the 57 wagons approximately $10,000. On Thursday the gin received 99 loads of cotton and paid to the farmers within a radius of 20 miles of that town over $15,000 in cash.

Same in Other Towns.

And the scenes thus described were being duplicated on an equal or larger scale at a score of other places, notably Kennett, Caruthersville, Malden, Poplar Bluff, Campbel, Hayti, New Madrid, Parma, Clarkton, Portageville, Dexter, Hornersville and in fact wherever a gin existed.

"On a trip through the cotton country during October," the article continues, "the writer was told by the proprietor of a country store that he had taken in over $8000 that day in settlement of old accounts, clearing up chattel mortgages and current purchases. And by way of proving what he said, the merchant threw open the door of his old-fashioned iron safe and revealed the interior fairly bulging with currency. Nor is the merchant the only one who has felt the wave of prosperity. The doctor, for the first time in several years, is able to balance his books; old scores of a financial nature are being settled between neighbors; mortgages are lifted, and bankers find it hard to prevent customers from paying off their loans. A case is cited in which a Dunklin County farmer was offered a reward if he would prevail upon his neighbor to renew a note for a substantial amount which was about to fall due at the bank. Rural schools in many localities declared a six-weeks' holiday, so the chidlren might help in the cotton fields, where youthful fingers are useful in picking the fleecy harvest.

Reasons for Cotton Boom.

"All of this might be considered of merely passing interest—bonanza stories such as are likely to be told whenever and wherever a crop failure in one section creates riches for another section. There are underlying reasons for the cotton boom in Southeast Missouri, however, and permanent, widespread results are likely to follow.

"Eight years ago C. M. Barnes of Marston, a member of the State Board of Agriculture, prepared an article, which was published in the St. Louis Republic, in which the statement was made that cotton could be successfully grown in practically every county of the State south of the Missouri River, thereby adding $50,000,000 a year to the income of Missouri farmers. The ravages of the boll weevil, which cost the South last year over 6,000,000 bales of cotton, worth $125 a bale, have driven the borders of the cotton belt further north than ever before known. If these ravages are not checked high cotton prices will continue, and it is within reason to suppose that cotton will be planted in many localities not hitherto tried.

MISSOURI CROP IS VALUED AT $18,720,000

"At the present time, cotton growing in Missouri is largely confined to a few counties within the alluvial district in the extreme southeast corner of the State. Here are found conditions of soil and climate exactly suited to the plant, and as the boll weevil is absent Missouri has the distinction of producing the most cotton per acre of any state in the Union, except Arizona and California, where its intensive cultivation in hot, irrigated valleys makes comparison with other sections unfair. Take the United States Government reports on cotton condition during the past two seasons, and it will be found that Missouri has steadily and consistently led the entire country.

Available Acreage Increased.

"The completion of several large drainage enterprises in Southeast Missouri, notably the Little River system, already finished, and the Inter-river system, still under way, have added several hundred thousand acres of ideal cotton land to the area available for the crop. The fact that cotton has for many years been successfully grown on a large scale in Dunklin, Pemiscot and New Madrid counties removes it from the experimental stage and insures sufficient labor skilled in its production to instruct the large number of farmers who will try to raise it for the first time in 1923.

"That brings us to an important question: Who is going to raise cotton in 1923? The answer is, about everybody in Southeast Missouri who has or can get possession of a piece of ground. The poor returns from wheat the past two seasons will throw many of the great wheat farms of Scott and Mississippi counties into cotton, as well as thousands of acres in other counties that have been devoted to other crops. As usual there will be some failures.

"There is the question of the boll weevil also. Many think this pest will never invade Missouri cotton fields on account of being so far north.

Renters From the South.

"The news of Southeast Missouri's cotton development had an immediate effect on the buying and renting of farm land. Along in September and October crop-renters from Arkansas and other Southern States starved out by the boll weevil began to make their appearance. They wanted land to farm on shares for 1923, and most of them found work with their families picking cotton. Then came the cash renters. Prices started at $6 an acre and soon worked up to $10 and $15 an acre. A few cases of $20 an acre being offered are reported. Some of the Southern cotton men are bringing their experienced hands with them. Much new ground is being cleared. Should 1923 prove another good year for cotton in this section, which is to say if the boll weevil continues its operations further South and keeps out of Missouri, it is predicted Southeast Missouri will witness a great influx of new settlers.

"An interesting outgrowth of the cotton situation has been the breaking up of many of the big farms of Southeast Missouri into small tracts. Most important of these are the holdings of A. J. Matthews and associates, of Sikeston, including between 30,000 and 35,000 acres of highly-improved land in several counties. The Himmelberger-Harrison holdings are also being offered in small tracts of 20 acres and up on easy payments for the convenience of cotton farmers who wish to own the land. Under conditions prevailing the past two seasons cotton land in this section has averaged about $100 an acre gross production, which on the prevailing share basis (one-fourth) gives the owner $25 an acre in crop-rental and the tenant, who furnishes teams and tools, $75 an acre.

WORTHLESS CHECKS ISSUED BY CONVICT WHO WAS PAROLED

Gov. Neff of Texas, Who Had Interested Himself in Case, Then Sends Man Back to Prison.

Special to the Post-Dispatch.

AUSTIN, Tex.—A case of befriending the obscure and friendless that did not bring the results hoped for occurred here a few days ago. While on a visit to the penitentiary several weeks ago Gov. Neff heard pleas for pardons from convicts who had no friends outside.

One of these convicts was Jesse Jones, a negro, serving a life sentence for the murder of his wife and another negro in San Antonio in 1913. Jones was said to have been a model convict. The Governor questioned the man, who asserted he had killed his wife and the negro when he found them together in his home.

Gov. Neff made a note of the convict's story and when he came back to Austin he further investigated the crime. The result was that he issued a parole to Jones and had him come to Austin, where the former convict was given employment as caretaker of the grounds at the Governor's mansion.

Jones apparently was delighted. He was paroled Oct. 16 and went immediately to work. All went well until five weeks later, when Austin police were notified that Jones had issued two worthless checks, one for $15 and the other for $35.

Gov. Neff was notified and Jones promptly was sent back to the penitentiary.

Missing Woman Sought by Mother.

A letter has been received by the Post-Dispatch from Mrs. Cena Dalby of Peoria, Ill., telling of the disappearance of her daughter, Helen Gregory, 22 years old, on Nov. 22 last. The letter said the girl had been employed for two days in St. Louis and that on Nov. 22 she wrote a letter saying she was taking a position as traveling saleswoman for a toilet goods house. She is described by Mrs. Dalby as being 5 feet 5 inches tall, weighing 110 pounds, having auburn hair and gray eyes, and having worn a full length muskrat coat.

NEW YORK—Five-year-old Edward Karminsky of 14 Wallington avenue, Wallington, N. J., choked to death on a peanut shell.

The boy and another child were playing in front of the house when Edward suddenly fell. His companion assisted him to the house and Edward's father carried him to the office of Dr. G. W. Tidwell, three-quarters of a mile distant.

Dr. Tidwell took him in his automobile to St. Mary's Hospital, Pasadena. Surgeons were preparing to operate when the boy died.

"Behold Your Victims!"

HOW CLEVELAND AND DETROIT JUDGES ARE PUTTING BRAKES ON "SPEED MANIACS"

TRAFFIC LAW VIOLATORS FORCED TO VIEW BODIES OF PERSONS KILLED BY AUTOMOBILES OR ATTEND THEIR FUNERALS

JUDGE CHARLES L. BARTLETT

"Speeders Who Rush Madly Through City Streets Have Murder in Their Hearts," Judge Declares

WHEN Judge Charles L. Bartlett began his campaign against speeders in Detroit recently he took a group of men sentenced for traffic law violations to the city morgue. There he ordered them to view the mangled bodies of a young boy and an aged man who had fallen victims of reckless driving on the day before. Then he lectured them severely.

"Every automobile driver who ignores the law and rushes through the streets at a high rate of speed has murder in his heart," he said.

"Every man who is caught speeding has violated the law before and didn't get caught at it. Is there any reason why such drivers should get any consideration from me?

"This little body before you might have grown to be that of a great man. It had as much right to live as you have and the parents of this child had the same right to expect protection for him as your parents have to expect it for you. It is your good fortune that any one or all of you have not the stain of murder on your hands by running down some person as did the driver of the car that killed this child."

Judge Bartlett took office Oct. 26, 1921, and was at once assigned to the traffic court. For more than two months he plugged along in the monotonous traffic routine, imposing a fine here and there, with never more than a $10 fine for driving an automobile at an excessive rate of speed. That was the customary fine and had been for many years back. Detroit was growing at a fast rate, automobiles were rapidly cluttering up the streets and every day the number of speeders was increasing at an alarming rate.

There was a problem at hand and what the solution was to be was a little more than Judge Bartlett could determine, he has since confessed. But the solution came with surprising rapidity.

Tells What Inspired His Severity

"I was on my way home after a dull day in traffic court," said Judge Bartlett, in answer to a query for the solution of the traffic problem. "In the street I noticed a crowd of men and women and at the curb I saw a hospital ambulance. When I walked to the edge of the crowd to learn the trouble I saw the mangled body of a little girl who had been run down by an automobile driver. I was told that the driver had approached the intersection where the accident happened at terrific speed, mangled the little body lying in the street and sped away without making an effort to relieve his victim.

"Here came to me the solution of the problem which had been confronting me for several weeks. I decided then and there that so long as I sat in traffic court and automobile speeders continued to come before me, I would lend every assistance to punish adequately."

Three days later, Jan. 5, when an automobilist admitted in Judge Bartlett's court that he drove through a safety zone at a high rate of speed and narrowly missed running down two women, the Judge imposed a jail sentence.

It was something unheard of in these courts. The following week Judge Bartlett announced a campaign against speeders, reckless drivers or autoists who drove while drunk. Twice each week the day is devoted to the disposition of these cases and as regularly as the traffic days roll around there are new faces in the house of correction, as the city jail is called.

Politicians frowned on such drastic action. They prophesied defeat for the Judge when he came up for election.

About this time John Duval Dodge, son of the late millionaire automobile manufacturer, and himself immensely wealthy, was arrested for driving 32 miles an hour through one of the city's main streets. Then the enemies of Judge Bartlett smiled. Money was bet in large amounts that young Dodge would never go to jail. But Judge Bartlett took the same stand in disposing of the Dodge case that he took in the disposition of 20 or more other cases on the same day. He heard every bit of evidence in detail and Dodge, admitting he had exceeded the speed limit, was sentenced to five days in the house of correction without the alternative of a fine. He served his full time, and when he came out, after three days of shoveling coal, Dodge declared he had taken his medicine like a man and held no grudge against the Judge.

Bankers and business men in every walk of life have had to take the same medicine since the campaign against speeders started. There is no favor shown.

The primaries came and Judge Bartlett headed the ticket with a majority of 35,750 over his opponents. Last month, when the electors cast their ballots, the majority for Judge Bartlett was raised to 42,596, he again heading the local ticket by thousands.

Traffic Violations Greatly Decrease

Speeding and reckless driving has not yet been entirely wiped out. But police records do show that speeding has been greatly reduced and the number of complaints decreases every week. Two weeks ago Judge Bartlett conducted a visit to the receiving hospital with 20 automobile drivers whom he had sentenced to jail that day. There they saw many children who had been injured, some of them for life, through the reckless driving of autoists.

The following day Judge Bartlett announced he would order every convicted speeder to accompany him to the county morgue on the following Wednesday, the next traffic day. But the number of speeders showed a marked decrease Wednesday. Only eight were sentenced to jail and, true to his word, Judge Bartlett personally accompanied the violators to the morgue, where the mangled bodies of a boy of tender years and an aged man rested, victims of reckless drivers. There he lectured the offenders in the language set forth elsewhere on this page.

Judge Bartlett has no intention of modifying his methods, he says.

"My campaign continues until the streets of Detroit are rid of a public menace or I am voted from the bench," is his challenge to his critics.

The mild offender gets as much consideration in Judge Bartlett's court as the serious offender does not. The Judge has decided on probation as a remedy in scores of cases. The opinion that every speeder who comes in traffic court is sentenced to jail is erroneous. When Judge Bartlett believes discipline under the jurisdiction of the Probation Department is the better way he never hesitates to deal accordingly. Several hundred convicted or confessed speeders are reporting monthly to the Probation Department.

Many others have promised the Court never again to drive an automobile and many more have been deprived of their license to drive a machine. And not one of the many speeders sentenced to jail by Judge Bartlett has ever been back a second time on a similar charge.

Men He Sentenced Support Him

During the recent election campaign Judge Bartlett was indorsed for election by more than a hundred drivers whom he had sentenced to jail, at a meeting called by his opponents.

Letters from every part of the country come to Judge Bartlett's desk daily commending him on his fearless campaign. The clergy has preached of the good work and newspapers all over the country have commended him.

More than a dozen cities in the United States have adopted a like campaign against speeders, giving credit for the idea to Judge Bartlett, and thus has an unknown attorney, Charles L. Bartlett, gained a national reputation as a fearless Judge.

A few days ago Charles Wilson, son of the Under Sheriff of the county, was sentenced to 10 days in jail and to pay a fine of $100. The news reached the Sheriff's office across the street and the Sheriff, Under Sheriff and half a dozen friends of the staff appeared in court to protest. Judge Bartlett stood firm.

"Your son is no better than any other man's son," he declared to the county official. "He was speeding at a high rate and this court shows no favors." Wilson, himself a Deputy Sheriff, left

JUDGE JOSEPH F. SAWICKI.

Number of Accidents in Both Cities Cut Down by Measures Adopted Recently After Heavy Fines and Jail Sentences Had Failed to Bring Results—Jurists Declare Visit to Morgue Is Most Effective Method of Teaching Offenders the Responsibility of a Driver.

TRAFFIC law violators are receiving such uniquely drastic attention in Detroit and Cleveland that the methods employed there and the two Judges employing them are attracting nation-wide attention.

Judge Charles L. Bartlett of Detroit is sending speeders to jail without regard to their social or business position and recently he has adopted the course of escorting those whom he has just sentenced to the morgue to look upon the victims of reckless automobile driving, or to the city hospital to view the crippled bodies of those whom drunk or wild drivers have struck down with their machines.

Judge Joseph F. Sawicki of Cleveland sends the persons he finds guilty of disregard of the speed laws, in a body and under guard, to attend the funerals of automobile victims. Those who have been caught on one of these grewsome missions say it rivals any punishment hitherto devised for impressiveness. So great is the attention aroused by these two Judges, and the penalties they mete out, that the following reports of their methods and how they operate are presented by the Sunday Post-Dispatch:

Judge Joseph F. Sawicki of Cleveland declares compulsory attendance of traffic offenders at funerals of motor accident victims is, next to viewing of mangled bodies, the best remedy for reckless driving.

Judge Bartlett of Detroit Tells of Effectiveness of Jail Sentences

DETROIT, Mich., Dec. 9.

LESS than one year ago Charles L. Bartlett, Judge in Recorder's Court, was considered one of the most lenient Judges handling traffic and ordinance cases in this city.

Today his name is feared by every automobile driver within the limits of his jurisdiction. And the reason for this is because he revised the old system of fining a speeder or reckless driver $5 or $10 and adopted a system of his own.

Three years ago "Charlie" Bartlett was an unknown lawyer, broken in health. He had many friends, but his prospects for ever becoming known in the legal world were remote. But he was connected in a minor capacity with a well-known and reputable law firm doing a healthy business. Among his close friends was Alex J. Groesbeck, an attorney. Two years ago, Groesbeck became Governor of Michigan. A little more than a year ago, Judge Charles T. Wilkins of the Recorder's Court, one of the most learned jurists in the State, died. Gov. Groesbeck soon after appointed Charlie Bartlett, the unknown attorney, to succeed Judge Wilkins.

'Oh, I Sent the Poison to Wrong Woman!'

THUS FORMER NOVITIATE IN CONVENT EXPLAINS HOW SHE KILLED MOTHER OF EIGHT CHILDREN

MISS LENZ IN NOVITIATE'S HABIT WHEN IN A CONVENT.

MISS ANNA LENZ.

But Since the Victim Was the Wife of the Man She Had Been Meeting Clandestinely, State Will Endeavor to Prove That the Right Mrs. Schneider Received the Arsenic-Filled Chocolates—Besides the Law Makes No Allowances for Such Wicked Mistakes.

By a Special Correspondent of the Post-Dispatch.

MILWAUKEE, Wis., Dec. 9.

AT Jericho, a little hamlet in Calumet County some 70 miles north of here, there is a new grave in the village cemetery and eight children, the eldest 12 years, the youngest 2 weeks old, are motherless as the result of what Anna Lenz, held on a charge of murder, contends was a mistake. And the mistake, she says, was in the address on the package of poisoned candy which caused the death of Mrs. Theresa Schneider, wife of a farmer neighbor.

Sobbing hysterically, the woman, who once had been a convent novitiate preparing for the life of a nun, confessed, after eight hours of grilling, that it was she who mailed the package. Then, throwing her body forward on the table and covering up her face as if to shut out a vision of her victim, she exclaimed, "Oh, I sent the poison to the wrong woman—I didn't mean it for her. It was a mistake. I meant it for another woman—her sister-in-law, who called me names and spread gossip about me."

Whether it was a mistake or not, and, if it was, whether the fact that her victim was other than the one intended makes any difference in the degree of her guilt, will be determined when her case comes up for trial at Chilton, Calumet County seat, on Dec. 19. What the "mistake" will cost her is problematical, but it already has cost a woman her life, a farmer his wife and eight children their mother.

Prosecutor Rejects This Explanation

In the little village speculation is rife as to the real motive of Anna Lenz in mailing the poisoned candy. In view of certain evidence that she had as much reason to seek the death of Mrs. Theresa Schneider as she did that of the latter's sister-in-law, and in view of the additional fact that not only was the package addressed to the victim, but so was a letter designating a certain piece of candy as particularly delicious, there is considerable doubt as to the truthfulness in the mistake theory. Others than Mrs. Henry Schneider, the woman for whom the prisoner says she intended the candy, it seems, have found cause to connect the names of Anna Lenz and Frank Schneider, husband of the woman who was murdered. It was this which figured to a considerable degree in causing the arrest of Miss Lenz.

Suspicion was first attached to her when District Attorney F. H. Arps learned that she and Mrs. Schneider had become enemies two years ago because of her association with Schneider. It appears, according to the story told by neighbors, that Mrs. Schneider, with a small child in her arms, was ill in bed. Her husband had been away from the house for some time and she was watching through the window for his return. She saw him drive into the yard from the direction of the Lenz home and the Lenz girl was with him and had her arm around him.

How the Poisoned Candy Came

When the girl came in to inquire about her condition, as she frequently did, she was ordered out of the house.

"Never let me see you again," Mrs. Schneider is said to have screamed at her as she fled from the place, and until the day of Mrs. Schneider's death the two did not meet again.

MRS. HENRY SCHNEIDER, THE INTENDED VICTIM.

ALL PHOTOS BY INTERNATIONAL NEWSREEL

It was only five days after the birth of her eighth child that Mrs. Schneider came to her tragic death. She was only able to sit up in bed when her oldest child, Helen, came running in from the mail box with a package and a letter. The letter was signed with the name of Mrs. Schneider's sister, Mrs. John Goeser of Fond du Lac.

"I am sending you some candy," said the note. "You will find one piece of chocolate. It is particularly good and was meant for you alone."

Mrs. Schneider ate some of the candy, including the "particularly good" piece. Fifteen minutes later she was in agony and an hour later she was dead.

An investigation was begun, but when the authorities tried to find the letter and some of the candy, they were nowhere to be found. They had disappeared mysteriously between the time of Mrs. Schneider's death and the arrival of the officers. Neither the members of the family nor neighbors who had come in could explain what became of them. Mrs. Goeser was questioned, but she denied writing any letters or sending any candy. There was so little to connect her with the case that the officers centered their attention upon other angles.

Then the gossip about Frank Schneider and Anna Lenz was remembered and inquiry took a new course.

At a Jericho drug store the poison sales record was consulted and there District Attorney Arps found the information he was seeking. It was learned that several days before Mrs. Schneider's death Anna Lenz had purchased strychnine there "to poison rats."

Next he went to the rural mail carrier whose route led past the homes of the Lenz woman and that of the Schneiders. From him it was learned that Anna Lenz had mailed a package similar to that containing the poisoned candy the day before the tragedy.

The District Attorney-General summoned her to his office. Eventually there came the confession and with it the explanation of the letter's disappearance. She had gone to the house immediately after Mrs. Schneider's death and burned all the evidence that remained.

Collapsed After Long Examination

At the District Attorney's office, however, the prisoner put up a valiant struggle against her examiners.

There, for eight hours, she successfully fought the combined efforts of several expert questioners to pierce the armor of her denials. In the face of the drug clerk, she denied buying the poison. She denied mailing the package, although the mail man accused her to her face. And then, the farm girl gave in.

"Yes," she sobbed, "I sent it. But I did not mean it for Mrs. Frank Schneider. I thought I sent it to Mrs. Henry Schneider, her sister-in-law, who has spread stories which have ruined my reputation.

"She has hounded me, caused women at the church to point their fingers to me and call me a 'kluck' (German insult meaning sitting hen). I wanted to make her suffer and I intended the poison for her, not to kill her, but just to harm her and make her suffer as she had made me suffer."

The prisoner then collapsed.

"A mistake?" asks District Attorney F. H. Arps. "Hardly. It is improbable, isn't it, that, knowing both women, she would be so careless as to address both the package and the forged letter to a woman against whom she had no enmity?" And so the District Attorney will ask the jury when she comes to trial to find a verdict of murder in the first degree.

An article published in a local paper suggests a motive for the murder, if murder it was, by referring to the former convent girl in the story of the tragedy and subsequent confession as "the woman starved for love." Anna Lenz was 30 years old.

The scandal stories she has declared false and she insists they were circulated by Mrs. Henry Schneider. And it was her indignation because of them that led her to seek the vengeance which resulted in the death of the wrong woman, she contends.

Schneider, however, has admitted that there was truth in the gossip. During the summer he said, he and Miss Lenz, who lived on a nearby farm, frequently had "love meetings."

Do these things indicate that "the woman starved for love" might have wanted Frank Schneider for herself, been willing to care for his children and his little home? That is what District Attorney Arps thinks about it.

As the time set for the trial of the case approaches, discussion becomes more heated in Calumet County. Anna Lenz has her supporters, but there are many who believe the story of the "mistake" will not carry weight with a jury. Besides, the law decrees that a crime committed even unintentionally in the prosecution of an effort to commit still another crime carries the same degree of guilt as if it were actually intended.

Murder by Mental Suggestion, Youth's Plea in an Iowa Crime of Passion

"She Tempted Me but Limited My Caresses by Saying, 'Wait Till John Is Out of the Way' and Then Telling Me How This Could Be Brought About" — She Is Under Life Sentence and His Case Is Yet to Be Tried.

By a Special Correspondent of the Post-Dispatch.

BURLINGTON, Ia., Dec. 9.

FOLLOWING a several days' trial in which murder by mental suggestion was stressed, Mrs. Katherine Shurtz, 38, was convicted on a charge of the first-degree murder of her husband, John V., by a jury of four women and eight men after deliberation of only 50 minutes. She was sentenced to spend the remainder of her life in prison.

Shurtz was found dead in bed the morning of Sept. 12. The top of his head had been blown off by a charge from a sawed-off shotgun. Although she and her son called "Junior," 14 years old, had passed the night in the same bedchamber with the victim, they maintained they had not heard the report of the gun.

But the son took the witness stand against her, giving evidence that indicated his mother's guilt.

George Leroy Spees, youthful farmhand employed by Shurtz, who is charged with the actual slaying, is yet to be tried. Efforts of the defense, it is said, will be concentrated on saving the youth from the gallows.

Spees, following his arrest a few days after the tragedy, confessed, admitting that he shot his benefactor as the result of continual suggestion from Mrs. Shurtz. The woman, he said, used all her wiles and blandishments on him and by subtle insinuations, the relation of dreams, in which she represented Shurtz as having been killed, she created in him a state of mind where the significance of such a crime paled to nothing as compared to his desire for the possession of her.

In December, 1921, Shurtz drove into Burlington for a day in town and there came upon young Spees, homeless, without relatives to turn to and without employment. The predicament touched Shurtz and he hired the young wanderer to work for him as a farmhand.

Little did Shurtz dream that his benefaction would be turned against him, that the hand he had extended in aid in reality was opening the door to the medium of his own tragic death.

Quickly Under Her Influence

Spees entered into his work on the farm with heart and, according to his story to the authorities, it was not long before Mrs. Shurtz began enveloping him with her personality. To such an extent did she project herself at the young man that one kiss "there in the front room" had impressed him so forcibly that when he left the Shurtz farm and went to Indianapolis, the memory of it filled him with longing for her and he wrote to her recalling the passionate moment. The letter was read to the jury in rebuttal of the claim of the defense that Mrs. Shurtz's interest in the youth was no more than that "of a mother."

In his confession Spees told of the long days on the Shurtz farm near Middleton, 10 miles west of here. He saw few persons and Mrs. Shurtz was the only woman with whom he came in contact. Insidious was her method of hypnotizing the young farmer, for as she moved about the house there was a clandestine touch, now and then the gentle pressure of her body against his shoulder as she served the food, a surreptitious exchange of glances that lingered a moment and then were gone.

Her Wiles and Blandishments

And this situation progressed from one stage to another until the farmhouse became a magnet to the impressionable youth. At work in the fields his eyes, responsive to the thought that seemed now ever to be in his mind, would rest on the dwelling. The screen door would open, there would be the flutter of gingham as the woman moved about her domestic duties. If Shurtz were at some far place on the farm, Spees would drop his implements and make his way to the kitchen door, there to chat and be fed on subtle suggestions.

Spees declared that the impassioned heights to which he had been lured by the woman always were moved still farther beyond by the veiled promise in her statement: "Wait until John is out of the way."

They embraced frequently when the husband was absent, the young man declared, but only to a certain point were his caresses permitted. The ensuing discouragements were as a spark to tinder.

From the day he appeared at the farm, Spees said, the woman flattered him in innumerable ways. She would complain, too, that her husband was treating her cruelly and that he was not respecting his marriage vows.

At every opportunity, he said, the subject of her husband's death was broached by the woman. She suggested various forms of death, describing a dream wherein she said she had found her husband's body hanging in the hayloft. Spees vetoed this suggestion, however, through his fear he could not overcome Shurtz in the personal struggle that must precede tying him in a hanging position.

Another dream described by the woman, according to the youth, involved Shurtz's death under the hoofs of horses.

He said he was asked if he could not strike his employer on the head and then throw him into a stall with the horses. This plan, he said, he characterized as "too fidgety," but added that it might be done "if I was right desperate."

Then came the quarrel between Spees and the farmer and the fatal climax on the lonely farm drew near.

"My husband would not order Spees away, but made me order him, because he was always afraid of him," said Mrs. Shurtz. "Roy was never a boy to carry on a conversation with anyone. He was of a rough disposition. His parents died when he was 3 years old and he had wandered about the rest of his life."

The quarrel arose over Spees refusing to carry out an order given by Shurtz. The young man left the farm and went to Indianapolis. Not only was the departure the first step along the last stretch toward the slaying of Shurtz, but it also was to provide the clew that would be the undoing of the alleged conspirators.

After Spees left he wrote letters, and in the letters were many endearing expressions that had been exchanged between the farmer's wife and the hired hand. It was from these references that the wavering official finger of doubt finally settled on Spees and through his confession came to rest on Mrs. Shurtz as the instigator of the crime.

And then Spees returned to the farm. Only Mrs. Shurtz and her son knew of his presence in the neighborhood. In an outbuilding the two planned the murder, Spees said.

In his confession Spees said that Mrs. Shurtz knew of his plan to kill her husband, that she mothered it. He said he entered the house in the middle of the night, with her knowledge, using a ladder to climb to and through the window she had left unlocked.

His Story of the Murder

He entered the bedroom carrying a sawed-off shotgun. In the room were Shurtz, his wife and their son. He did not speak to the woman. He groped to the bed of the sleeping man. He shoved the weapon out before him, within a short distance of Shurtz's head and pulled the trigger.

The sound of the gun must have been startling in the small room, but both the mother and son declared they did not hear it.

"She pulled the covers over her head," Spees continued in his confession, "when I got near her husband, and after the shot was fired I heard her roll over and kind of catch her breath with a sigh of relief." Spees said the boy did not awaken. As he had entered the room so did he leave it. He went to Burlington.

It had been agreed that Mrs. Shurtz should marry him and divide the property with him.

Three days after the tragedy the packet of letters was found and Spees was arrested. He denied knowledge of the shooting until one of the officers casually mentioned that Mrs. Shurtz had referred to him as a "bum."

Like a flash Spees was transformed. Anger and resentment took possession of him and was fanned into a frenzy by his realization that the woman had used him as a catspaw. The confession followed.

"It sort of looks as if mother is guilty," were the words of "Junior" Shurtz, a few moments before he entered the courtroom to take the stand for the State. He testified that coolness had marked the relations of his parents for several weeks before his father was slain. A quarrel over money matters had precipitated trouble, he said, although he was not certain that this was the cause of the strained relations.

Other witnesses testified that Mrs. Shurtz was seated in the yard at the farmhouse shortly after she had reported the murder, with her hair dressed in the latest mode, her face carefully rouged and wearing her "best" dress.

Mrs. Shurtz bitterly denied all the facts that were adduced against her, but Spees' confession and the surrounding circumstances convinced the jury of her guilt.

What Happened When Movie Magazine Magnate Took His Beauty Prize Winner Into His Home as Wife's Companion

PHILANTHROPIC EXPERIMENT WITH GEORGIA NEWS-STAND GIRL ENDS IN DOMESTIC DISASTER

Curious Feature About Suit for Divorce Brought by Eugene V. Brewster's Second Wife Is the Fact That First Wife Sides With Him, Believing That Corliss Palmer, Film Aspirant for Screen Honors Who Figures as Corespondent, Is a Good Influence in His Life and That He Should Marry Her.

By Leased Wire From the New York Bureau of the Post-Dispatch

NEW YORK, Dec. 9.

EUGENE V. BREWSTER, publisher, motion picture producer, artist, former newspaper man, is in the throes of his third romance and his second summons to a court which wholly or partially severs marriage ties. He is being sued by his second wife, Eleanor V. V. Brewster, for a separation, and alimony of $1500 a month is asked. Mrs. Brewster avers that her trouble is all due to Mr. Brewster's infatuation for Corliss Palmer, winner of a beauty contest and later exploited by him as a movie actress, declares that she did not know at the time of her marriage that Brewster had ever been married before, and that he used to tell her he was almost overwhelmed at the contemplation of his own virtue. And to this Mrs. Emilie makes rejoinder that it is not possible that Mrs. Eleanor did not know of Brewster's marriage, because, she says, a Mrs. Wardell, a sister of Mrs. Eleanor, was frequently at her home in attendance at meetings of the Brooklyn Writers' Club, of which both were members, and knew her and Brewster quite well.

And, just so the other ladies do not have the entire field to themselves, Miss Palmer gave

Mrs. Eleanor Brewster, who charges that Miss Palmer has broken up her home and whom she names as co-respondent in her divorce suit.

great deal and I fell in love with her. I wrote my wife 12 letters about the matter."

"I had no thought of romance at that time with Bruce," Miss Palmer resumed. "Of course, when he was kind to me I was delighted. I didn't like him at first at all. I thought him stern and distant. But he was kind and I couldn't have been more pleased if the President of the United States had noticed me.

"Mrs. Brewster told Bruce once she thought he was infatuated with me and it would wear off before a year. 'You go around with her all you like for a year,' Mrs. Brewster said, 'and if you are still infatuated, we will talk business.'

"But one night when we came home she had locked us out and smeared all my clothes up and thrown them with my valise on the floor. The next day she went to a hotel, and Bruce had to get a chaperon for me. Then I went home to Macon, but Bruce followed in a few weeks and took my mother and my sisters to live with me."

Her Beauty Is Indisputable.

There is no gainsaying Miss Palmer's beauty. She is 22 years old, about 5 feet 5 inches tall, perfectly formed and weighs about 120 pounds. Her hair is a rich shade of auburn, her mouth a perfect example of the "rosebud" type, and she has vivacity, temperament and charm. She came from quite an ordinary environment in Macon, where she was born. She was educated in a Masonic home and worked in various places before she secured a position as manager of the Hotel Dempsey news stand. Everywhere / he beauty had attracted attention, and she was quite well known in Macon before she won the beauty contest.

Brewster, before he began the publication of his movie magazines, the best known of which are Shadowland, Classic and Motion Picture, was a newspaper writer, employed on the Brooklyn Eagle. He is 53 years old and the father of four children, three grown children by his first wife and a 2-year-old son by his second wife. He is willing to let her keep the child if she will give him a divorce. He also has a 4-year-old grandchild, who, by a coincidence, is now under treatment in a Morristown hospital for diabetes. He is also a painter in oils and says he has an agreement with a St. Louis man to buy 52 pictures a year from him. This means one a week. And, just to show his versatility and industry, he is writing a book on "Eccentricities of Genius," setting forth the hobbies of all the exceptional men of history, from Homer to Hudson Maxim.

During the general conversation, when Hudson Maxim's name was mentioned, Corliss remembered that one of his eccentricities was his intense dislike for perfume as a part of a lady's toilet. It will be remembered that at the Atlantic City water carnival last summer Mr. Maxim refused to appear as Father Neptune unless the bathing beauties who were to be judged agreed to use no perfumes.

Miss Palmer, recalling this, said:

"Once when we were out in the car with Mr. Maxim we passed a rather malodorous pig sty. Mr. Maxim sniffed the aroma, tossed up his head, and said: 'There, now, isn't that a fine, healthy odor, far preferable to the horrible perfumes with which women delight to make themselves unpleasant.'"

Miss Palmer emphatically doubted a report

MRS. EMILIE BREWSTER.

She is happy because Brewster has fallen out with his second wife and is glad he plans to wed Miss Palmer, who, she says, has been a good influence in his life.

her sister in Macon, Mrs. Oscar Preston, and her stepfather, James Simone, had said she was married to Brewster.

Says Relatives Tried to Shield Her.

"If my sister said so, she did it thinking to shield me. Macon people do not understand, and she feared whatever gossip had reached that city."

Mrs. Brewster has submitted the following frank letter which she says her husband wrote to her, as proof that she no longer has either affection or loyalty from him:

"I think it only fair and just that you know the exact situation regardless of the result and the pain it might cause to everybody. I have been through a most amazing experience during the past 15 months, and an almost unbelievable one.

"When another came into my life it was a long time before I realized that it was anything but an artistic enthusiasm that I had many times expressed to you a desire for long before then.

"And when I saw that it was becoming dangerous, I assure you that I fought it with all my strength. The endless, heart-rending struggle was bitter for everybody concerned, and many the heartache and tear it caused. I assure you it was an honest fight for both of us—a fight against something that it seemed impossible to fight.

"I thought of you being a faithful, loving wife; of my vow to love and cherish you as long as I lived; of our child and its reputation; of my dear old father and other relatives of yours, but all in vain.

"I suppose I could come back to Roslyn to live my old life over again, but I know that in doing so my life would be miserable—and another's also, I am certain. I have had many serio talks over the situation, reviewing things from every possible angle, and finally we agreed to separate for at least two weeks to see just wha we did think of each other. We did separate, she going many hundreds of miles away among her old friends and admirers.

"All the time she was making preparations to go, it seemed as if we could not bear it (just as we had several times before done, as you know), but I managed to endure it, constantly thinking of the old proverb, 'Out of sight, out of mind.'

"She went—I saw her on the train. Thereafter each day seemed an eternity. With all my friends, influence and power, surrounded with theaters and entertainments of all kinds, not one moment of happiness could I buy or procure. I could not eat or sleep, and when she returned I felt that I could never let her leave me again, whatever cost.

"I am as certain as I can be of anything that your judgment of her was entirely wrong, and that you formed a very wrong opinion of her. I have only the kindest feelings toward you, in spite of the terrible things you did to her, and I shall always do my utmost to make you comfortable. Please think this over carefully from day to day, and some time after the holidays we will have a conference. Very sincerely,

"EUGENE."

Brewster, besides writing the work alluded to above, is the author of several books, including one called "What's What in America," there being chapters on Christian Science, Osteopathy, Phrenology, Occultism, Strikes and the High Cost of Living.

The last chapter is a discourse on "Wedding Bells." In this the movie publisher makes the following interesting quotation from Sir John Davies:

Wedlock, indeed, hath oft compared been
To public fetes, where meet a public rout,
Where they that are without would fain go in,
And they that are within would fain go out.

Some excerpts from his dissertation on the marital state follow:

"We know very little of the marriage affairs of the ancient Egyptians, but we do know that they were not restricted to any number of wives."

"Trial marriages were also in vogue in Persia, and seldom was a marriage contract made for life. A new wife was a common luxury."

"The Chinese believe that marriages are decreed by heaven and that those who have been connected in previous existence become united in this. Men are allowed to keep several concubines, but they are entirely dependent on the legitimate wife, who is always reckoned the most honorable."

He concludes with the following bit of philosophy on matrimony:

"As civilization advances, however, we find that the tendency is toward a more rigid enforcement of the marriage contract, and strictly against polygamy.

"The sanctity of the home and respect for marriage vows have not only passed into the statute law of civilized nations, but they have become proverbial with most all enlightened people.

"It also must be observed, however, that at the present time there seems to be a tendency in this country to make marriage more difficult and divorce more easy."

EUGENE V. BREWSTER.

Brewster Is Silent.

Brewster, a handsome, powerful man, does not look his 53 years.

Newspaper files show that in a period of 25 years Brewster, who is known as "the greatest hobby horse rider in Brooklyn" because of his disposition to take up fads, has regarded himself as a good lawyer, actor, author, publisher, artist, club president, opera promoter, inventor of language, occult science explorer, lecturer, domestic healer, lake builder, poet, photographer and moralist.

"It takes about 12 months for a hobby of mine to work out," he once said. "That is, I usually take that time to find out all I want to know about it; then I take up another one."

One of his best known ventures was the establishment of "La Boheme," a club of "good fellows." There were no dues and he, as "vice president," was the only officer. The object was "a good time for all." Meetings were held at his home, with everybody welcome. As president of the Allied Arts Association, he tried to introduce grand opera in Brooklyn.

Another of his ventures was the "Hundred Year Club," whose members had an ambition to live 100 years. He tried real estate and politics, once attempting to be the "power behind the throne" of Mayor Gaynor. He was once chairman of the Democratic Ways and Means Committee of Brooklyn and also was secretary of the Committee of One Hundred. He arranged the famous "Bryan Dollar Dinner" in 1900, Wife No. 1 Helps Former Husband.

"Miss Palmer is a delightful girl, and has been a splendid influence in Mr. Brewster's life," Mrs. Emilie Brewster declares. That she is delighted at the present situation she does not attempt to conceal. "It was that woman," meaning Mrs. Eleanor, "who kept Mr. Brewster from communicating with his children. Since she separated from him he has renewed his parental relations with them, and they have been made very happy. I sent our oldest son to see his father especially to assure him of our sympathy."

Mrs. Eleanor, as a snappy comeback to this, though she has not yet attained any wide public recognition.

Brewster does not deny any of his wife's allegations except the one that his income will admit of his paying her $1500 a month alimony. "All I am able to pay is $125 a week, and that I am willing to give her."

He declares that his love for Corliss is so great that he will marry her "if he has to go to Japan and live in a hovel to do it." Meanwhile, Mrs. Eleanor Brewster lives in the handsome family home at Roslyn, L. I., while Corliss and Brewster live in the Brewster home at Morristown, N. J., also a handsome property, where Corliss' mother, with three children by a second marriage, and a full sister of Corliss, has been installed as a combined duenna and householder. The house is run in her name, while Brewster figures only as a paying guest.

Not the least remarkable feature of the case, however, is that Mrs. Emilie Brewster, wife No. 1, who lives in Brooklyn, and whose divorcement from Brewster enabled him to marry Mrs. Eleanor Brewster, then Miss Eleanor Cator, has rushed to the front to support Brewster and has assured him that she will do all in her power to aid him in his plan to get free of wife No. 2, that he might espouse Miss Palmer as No. 3.

audience to the correspondent of the Post-Dispatch and went into a full discussion of her romance.

"Honest to goodness, I didn't vamp you, did I, Bruce?"

"No, you didn't, Corliss; I fell in love with you long before you knew it. You have been a great help to me in my work, as well as my inspiration."

Brewster here made the declaration, referred to elsewhere, that he loved Miss Palmer deeply and intended to marry her if he had to go to Japan to do it and live there in a hovel. Miss Palmer told the Post-Dispatch the same of her feelings. She said:

She Ran Hotel News Stand.

"I came here from Macon, Ga., where I had charge of a news stand in a hotel. I saw about the beauty contest in Bruce's magazine"—she calls him Bruce as a diminutive of Brewster. "I submitted my photograph and was chosen and sent for. Many other girls who qualified were brought here, too, and we put up in the house at 175 Duffield street, owned by the Brewster publications.

"There Mrs. Brewster met me and insisted I come to her home at Roslyn to live with her. She had taken other girls who were guests of the publication, and I accepted. There she put her arms around me and told me she wanted me for a pal; that often she was snowed in at Roslyn and needed company. Several times I wanted to leave, because the life was rather dull, and I like a little amusement. But she wouldn't hear to it."

"Yes," interrupted Brewster, "and it was Mrs. Brewster who awarded her first prize in that beauty contest. I really picked out another girl, but Mrs. Brewster insisted. Afterward I had her film-cutting in my office, and she was splendid at it. She also helped in editing one of my motion picture magazines. We were together a with the others to serve in his father's jail.

A few weeks ago the son of J. O. Stutzman, Superintendent of the House of Correction, was jailed in his father's institution for speeding. Stutzman approved of the Court's action, but when Judge Bartlett learned that the young man was under 18 years of age, he agreed to his release a few days later.

One of the convicted speeders was sentenced this week to 30 days in jail. Later a letter came to Judge Bartlett from one of the city's prominent priests. It explained the young man was a first offender and was the sole support of a widowed mother, broken in health. Judge Bartlett ordered the young man's release.

Judge Bartlett was born in Battle Creek, Mich., 50 years ago this month and has lived in Detroit since 1888. He enlisted as a private in D Company, Thirty-second Michigan Volunteer Infantry, serving through the Spanish-American war. Brought home near the close of the war, he was confined to his bed for more than a year with fever and for a year after got around on crutches.

Judge and Mrs. Bartlett have no children.

HOW JUDGES ARE PUTTING BRAKES ON SPEED MANIACS

offenses against traffic ordinances and to hold down the mounting death toll in motor accidents, which, between the first of the present year and Nov. 1, reached a total of 116.

In the last year the city's judicial and other officials had tried without success to hit upon a scheme to discourage "speed demons." Penalties, however severe, appeared to have no effect.

Municipal Judge Corlett, about three months ago, inaugurated the plan of sending all traffic law offenders, women or men, to the workhouse for terms ranging from one day to six months. The accident list fell off for a few days, then accidents came at a rate more rapid than ever. The Judges were in a quandary. They increased the length of terms and then added heavy fines to the workhouse penalties and legislation was enacted whereby second offenses meant forfeiture of license for a year. Still, the death toll failed to show signs of decreasing. Many speeders were able to have their cases postponed and before long the court docket was packed. Judge Corlett found it impossible to handle all the cases and Judge Sawicki was asked to help clear up the cases.

Penalties Took Peculiar Turn.

Then it was that penalties for speeding took a peculiar and unexpected turn. On the second day of Judge Sawicki's service in the traffic court, Catherine Gilmore, 7 years old, was killed by an automobile when crossing the street in front of her home.

The following day Judge Sawicki established a precedent and gave all automobile drivers in Cleveland something to talk and think about. He selected six names from the list scheduled to appear before him that day and, summoning the offenders before him, he ordered them to attend the funeral of Catherine Gilmore and provided a guard to see that his order was carried out.

"I am sending you to the funeral of this little girl for a special reason," he said. "You have all been brought into court for being in too much of a hurry. Any one of you, traveling at the high rate of speed at which you were going, might have killed or maimed somebody. It will be a moral lesson to all of you to attend the final services conducted over the body of a little girl whose death any of you might have been responsible for."

Pathetic scenes were witnessed at the home of the little girl and later at St. Philip Neri's Catholic Church, where funeral services were conducted. Eight small girls dressed in white acted as pallbearers for their schoolmate, and their display of grief was touching. Then the mother of the girl was overcome at the church and was carried out in a semiconscious state. The pastor, in his sermon, dwelt upon deaths caused through traffic law violations and deplored the increasing numbers of fatalities and injuries.

The ceremony was impressive and the speeders were moved as probably few sentences would have moved them. Sitting about the casket under police guard and in the presence of relatives of the child, they appeared as depressed as if they had been the actual cause of the sorrow. Occasionally during the service one or another of them was seen to weep.

Judge Lectured Them.

After the funeral the men were taken back to the courtroom where Judge Sawicki lectured them.

"I hope this trip will be a lesson to you—every one of you," he said. "One of you was brought here on a charge of driving while intoxicated. Now I want to tell you that during my term as Judge at least two men who were convicted of driving while intoxicated were back in a few days on charges of manslaughter. I don't want to see any of you here again on complaints of traffic law violations."

Judge Sawicki is pleased with the results of his policy so far. In an interview he expressed his belief that ultimately it will solve the traffic accident problem in Cleveland.

"I intend to continue my plan of sending motorists to the funerals of victims," he declared. "I think it is the most effective measure that has been tried here and am confident that it will succeed in checking the mammoth toll of lives that is being taken. Some persons contend it is heartless to force a man to attend a funeral for which he was not to blame, but by doing this I am seeking to instill into the minds of motorists the responsibilities connected with running a machine.

"My action means that I am going, if possible, to bring home the seriousness of speeding and reckless driving. These offenses, while regarded lightly in the popular mind, nevertheless keep our hospitals filled with victims. I also intend to compel some of these careless drivers to go to the morgue and view the mangled bodies of victims of carelessness. Often, I think, a visit to the morgue will do more good than a jail penalty, and in such cases I mean to order such visits."

Protests against Judge Sawicki's plan have been carried to Chief Justice John P. Dempsey of the Municipal Court, but the Chief Justice refused to interfere.

"If the Judge wants to send erring motorists to funerals, hospitals or the morgue, he is entitled to do so," he said. "If he can save but one or two lives in this way he will have performed a great service. All other efforts to check the rapidly mounting traffic toll have met with failure, but I believe that Judge Sawicki has found a way to stop speeding."

DANDRUFF SURELY DESTROYS THE HAIR

Girls—if you want plenty of thick, beautiful, glossy, silky hair, do by all means get rid of dandruff, for it will starve your hair and ruin it if you don't.

It does no good to try to brush or wash it out. The only sure way to get rid of dandruff it to dissolve it, then you destroy it entirely. To do this, get about four ounces of ordinary liquid arvon; apply it at nighht when retiring; use enough to moisten the scalp and rub it in gently with the finger tips.

By morning, most if not all, of your dandruff will be gone, and three or four more applications will completely dissolve and entirely destroy every single sign and trace of it.

You will find, too, that all itching and digging of the scalp will stop, and your hair will look and feel a hundred times better. You can get liquid arvon at any drug store. Four ounces is all you will need, no matter how much dandruff you have. This simple remedy never fails.

It's Neuritis!

Not Rheumatism

That sharp, stabbing pain in the upper arm, about the shoulder blade, in the shape of the neck, along the forearm or down the thigh and leg, is often Neuritis—not Rheumatism.

If you have severe frontal headache with a feeling that something is twitching or pulling at the eyeballs—a dull, aching pain in the back, accompanied by an occasional shooting pain in the side—numbness or tingling in the fingers or "stitches" of pain here and there the chances are that your trouble is Neuritis.

No matter where your pain is located, you can get prompt relief without taking bromides, narcotics or other dope. Apply Tysmol over the part that hurts, and you will be rid of the torture. Tysmol is guaranteed harmless. It helps to soothe and heal the weak, inflamed nerves.

Don't suffer any longer. Get a $1 package of Tysmol Absorbent from Judge & Dolph Drug Co., as well as Wolff-Wilson Drug Co.

35 CHILDREN IN NEED OF HOMES THIS CHRISTMAS

Board of Guardians Seeks Firesides at Which Little Ones Can Hang Stockings.

The Board of Children's Guardians wants to find homes at once for about 35 children, so that they can have a place to hang their stockings on Christmas eve and be part of a real family celebration on Christmas day.

The children include both boys and girls from tiny babies to children 12 years old, and are offered for adoption, but must be placed on trial under supervision of the board for two years, to prove that conditions are satisfactory, and the children happily placed.

All the children are bright and in good health, and among the 35 are twin baby girls, one year old. There are also a number of brothers and sisters who want to be placed together, so that if any family wants two children, they can be found at the Board of Children's Guardians. Included in the last are two girls, each 2 years old; three girls, 10 years old, and two who are 12. There are five baby boys only a year old, three who are 5 years old, and several others between the ages of 5 and 12. There also are two negro sisters, one 7 and the other 9. The children may be seen by calling on Miss Emma Puschner, agent of the Board of Children's Guardians, room 237, Municipal Courts Building.

The Board of Children's Guardians, which is a municipal agency, is now caring for more than 1000 children, of whom 320 are boarded with their own mothers, support being given the women who are widows; 530 children are in free private homes, and 200 are being boarded with families. There is a working staff of 10 women on the board. Irvin Bettman is chairman of the board and Mrs. G. V. R. Mechin, vice chairman.

RAPID PROGRESS MADE IN IMPROVEMENT AT ODEON

Completion of Work Expected in February; No Increase in Rental Contemplated.

Rapid progress is being made in the remodeling of the entrance and side of the Odeon Building, and already sections of the interior walls along the front lobby have been removed, preparatory to making the present narrow hallway into a comparatively spacious outer foyer.

As has been told, another exit is being made at the north side of the building, opening off the north end of the present foyer. This will lead to Grand boulevard.

It is expected that work will be finished early in February. Meanwhile, performances are to be held as usual.

The management contemplates no increase in the rental, which is $350 a night.

Safety Talk to Industrial Foremen.

"How Safety Brings Results in Human Dividends," is the subject of an address to be delivered by Oliver T. Remmers, attorney and member of the Executive Committee of the St. Louis Safety Council, to foremen and superintendents of the St. Louis industrial district, at Community Center Hall, Grand boulevard and Vista avenue, at 8 p. m. Friday. This will be the Christmas meeting of the organization and a special program has been prepared.

HANDICRAFT OF 'WORK-CURE' PATIENTS ON SALE DOWNTOWN

Articles Made by Handicapped Veterans and Crippled Children Included.

The handicraft work of patients in about 20 hospitals and institutions will be on sale this week under the auspices of the Missouri Association for Occupational Therapy, space having been given for the sale by Henry A. Weil, Inc., 916 Olive street.

Articles of many descriptions suitable for Christmas gifts and household use will be on sale, including the work of a number of handicapped war veterans in Government hospitals. There will also be work of crippled children made in the occupational therapy shop of the Children's Hospital. The proceeds will go to buy more materials for patients, and also to pay others, who are thus afforded an opportunity of earning money while learning a useful occupation during their illness or hospital convalescence.

Members of the Junior League, the College Club, the Workshops Committee of the Missouri Association for Occupational Therapy, the Good Will Club and other organizations will act as saleswomen during the week, being on duty from 9 a. m. to 5 p. m. Instruction in "selling points" was given these women last Thursday, when Miss Geraldine Lermit, director of the Missouri Association, explained the methods of teaching therapy to patients, the aims of the various "work-cure" shops, and the processes of work in the various articles in the sale. Included in the sale will be baskets of many styles, handwrought jewelry of original designs, quaint toys, woven rugs, runners and scarves; bags, children's furniture and gift novelties, all to be sold at reasonable prices.

Soda Water Men to Meet Here.

The Missouri Soda Water Manufacturers' Association will hold its annual convention here, Jan. 24 to 26, inclusive. About 200 delegates are expected to attend.

Workers in the campaign in behalf of the Women's Union Christian Colleges in the Orient will meet at 3 p. m. today in the assembly room of the Second Baptist Church, King's highway and McPherson avenue. Team captains will report on collections and pledges.

The allotment for St. Louis is $25,000. The campaign has been conducted by the Women's Missionary Federation of St. Louis, of which Mrs. T. D. Shaffer is president. If the full amount is obtained, a memorial building to be known as the St. Louis building, will be erected at one of the Oriental women's colleges, which are located at Tokio, Pekin, Nanking, Lucknow, Madras and Vellore.

A pageant, "Lighting the Christmas Candles," will be presented by the Young Women's World-Wide Guild of West Park Baptist Church. The pageant will depict the story and needs of the colleges.

At the annual meeting and dinner of the Church Federation, held Thursday night at the Chase Hotel, Mrs. Shaffer presented plans for the campaign and received pledges of support from pastors.

Her Happiest Christmas

THIS dear old mother is living in perfect contentment in her old home—still her very own. Her life is never dreary for that "happiest Christmas" of thirty years ago did not end with the day.

TODAY, she lives over in memory the happiest Christmas of her life. Then, her children were young and Dad was working hard. It had been a poor year in business, and the gifts were not expensive ones—little more than necessities. While the children noisily exclaimed over the presents Santa had left, Dad put into her hands the gift which made it "her happiest Christmas." She remembered well what he said as he gave it to her: "This gift, mother, is to make certain that Santa will visit you and the children always—no matter what happens. It's my Christmas Remembrance Policy and will pay you $100 on the first day of every month as long as you live."

THROUGHOUT the years, month after month, the wonderful policy has done all that Dad said it would. After his death, it enabled her to keep up the old home—made her independent of relatives—gave her a $100 income every month enabling her to keep the children in school. Why, only this Christmas, that policy—her Christmas gift of thirty years ago—made it easy for her to send son's little daughter the pretty talking doll and Junior the fine new football suit.

YES, that "happiest Christmas" has made every Christmas since a Happy Christmas—has helped to make every day a happy day.

You can make Christmas, 1922, your family's Happiest Christmas. One of our representatives will be glad to explain the Christmas Remembrance Policy we have for you.

The Higher Life.

At last! A new era is dawning!

Boundless encomiums are due the assiduous efforts of various local organizations in their espousal of a cause which is and unto eternity will be for the GREATEST GOOD OF THE GREATEST NUMBER ever undertaken—namely, THE BETTERMENT OF HOMES.

Volumes are contained in those four words!

In our anxious pursuit of profit and pleasure the beatitude of the HOME is often temporarily lost sight of, all to the detriment of generations here and hereafter. Pity 'tis!

Bring up a child in the way he should go and when he is old he will not depart from it!

Doctor Cuts Out Own Appendix

Sixty-Year-Old Surgeon Reported to Have Operated on Self for Appendicitis

An Associated Press Dispatch reports that a 60-year-old Pennsylvania doctor cut out his own appendix, assisted by a nurse. Several years ago he amputated one of his own fingers.

A Treacherous Disease.

Appendicitis attacks at any moment even persons seemingly in good health. Usually, however, it is preceded by so-called stomach trouble, constipation or similar disturbances. Often when there is a warning feeling of uneasiness in the abdomen, appendicitis can be guarded against in exactly the same manner in which one guards against the spread of throat infection because that is just what appendicitis is—an infection in the intestines spreading to the appendix. When one has sore throat, one can often prevent further trouble and the development of influenza or grippe, by using an antiseptic wash or gargle to fight the germs and a laxative to carry off the poisons from the body. Just exactly the same procedure is necessary to fight the intestinal germs and guard against appendicitis. But instead of an antiseptic wash for the throat, an INTESTINAL antiseptic is necessary.

Intestinal Antiseptic.

There is now offered to the public a preparation having the DOUBLE action of an intestinal antiseptic and a COMPLETE system cleanser. This preparation, known as Adlerika, acts as follows:

It tends to eliminate or destroy harmful germs and colon bacilli in the intestinal canal, thus guarding against appendicitis and other diseases having their start here.

It is the most complete system cleanser ever offered to the public, acting on BOTH upper and lower bowel and removing foul matter which poisoned the system for months and which nothing else can dislodge. It brings out all gases, thus immediately relieving pressure on the heart. It is astonishing the great amount of poisonous matter Adlerika draws from the alimentary canal—matter you never thought was in your system. Try it right after a natural movement and notice how much more foul matter it brings out which was poisoning you. In slight disorders, such as occasional constipation, sour stomach, gas on the stomach and sick headache, one spoonful Adlerika ALWAYS brings relief. A longer treatment, however, is necessary in cases of obstinate constipation and long standing stomach trouble, preferably under direction of your physician.

Reports From Physicians.

"I congratulate you on the good effect I had from Adlerika since I prescribed it." (Signed) Dr. L. Langelois.

"I have found Adlerika to try 50 years' practice to excel Adlerika." (Signed) Dr. James Weaver.

"I use Adlerika in all bowel cases. Some require only one dose." (Signed) Dr. F. M. Prettyman.

"After taking Adlerika feel better than for 20 years. Haven't language to express the AWFUL IMPURITIES eliminated from my system." (Signed) J. T. Puckett.

Adlerika is a constant surprise to people who have used only ordinary bowel and stomach medicines, on account of its rapid, pleasant and COMPLETE action. It is sold by leading druggists everywhere.

PILES CURED

WITHOUT OPERATION
By Dr. Henrich's Method
TO STAY CURED

No Cutting. No Pain. No Chloroform. No Hospital. No Danger. No Loss of Time.
Consultation and Examination Free—Tell Your Friends.

A WISE MAN

Knows that he can Enjoy Life only by possessing Good Health; anyone who is afflicted with Piles will agree with this.

Now, if every man, woman or child were wise, their sufferings would soon vanish at the hands of science. Dr. W. P. Henrich, the Reliable St. Louis Pile Specialist, has discovered and practised for 27 years, in St. Louis and vicinity, a positive, painless Cure for Piles and other Rectal Diseases.

All over the country, The HENRICH TREATMENT is recognized by physicians as the best and only Painless Pile Cure. No Knife! No Scissors! No Cutting! It is the only method that does not confine the patient to bed; it brings relief and new life with the first treatment. The pain stops almost instantly and the sufferer grows stronger and in better spirits with each succeeding treatment. The improvement forges ahead steadily and in a short time you are entirely well. There is no secret about Dr. Henrich's Treatment. He explains it fully to each patient; you understand perfectly what is being done, and if you have any doubt, or if skeptical in any way, he insists that you bring your family physician and let him understand the matter and be the judge of your cure when the treatment is completed.

With health and happiness so easy to obtain there is no excuse for any sufferer not being cured. Place your confidence in Dr. Henrich, as hundreds of others have done, and be cured for life. You can see original Testimonials at his office. Call on any of the persons cured and hear the story they have to tell.

Remember, Dr. Henrich consults with anyone free, in person or by mail.

Laboring people, especially those engaged in the building trades, are more or less troubled with Piles, Fistula, Fissure, etc., and often are forced to neglect their regular work because of these difficulties, causing loss of time and money and the handicapping of the jobs they are working upon.

Hundreds of these working people, as well as scores of other citizens of St. Louis, have learned to their entire satisfaction of the successful work of the troublesome affections of W. P. Henrich, Ph. G., M. D., the well-known Pile Specialist.

Dr. Henrich established his practice in this city in 1895, and since that time has enjoyed a successful practice.

Dr. Henrich cures without the use of the knife, thus doing away with all pain and chloroform; no danger or loss of time from work or business, or inconvenience. Dr. Henrich makes examinations free and gladly counsels sufferers from this dreadful trouble, and also enjoys a splendid practice in this line.

As has been said, Piles and kindred troubles are too serious to neglect. We can recommend Dr. Henrich from the strength of personal investigation and from the experience of friends of the Illinois Labor Press.

We advise the working men and women of East St. Louis to make it their business to call upon Dr. Henrich for examination and advice, as Piles when neglected nearly always become critical, and cause permanent disability unless taken in time.

WRINKLES AND FACIAL BLEMISHES REMOVED

For more than ten years famous European and American Beauty Doctors have been able to remove fine lines and wrinkles from about the eyes, face and neck, as well as remove facial blemishes, including smallpox, blackhead, comedone pits, freckles, blotches, scars, enlarged pores, powder and birthmarks. For these purposes "Cosmoleum" and "The Gordon Tristian Process," originated by a famous French dermatologist, are used. Neither treatment is a peeling, astringent, wax, lotion, cream, exercise or massage process—for it disintegrates blemishes and wrinkled tissue and forms new unblemished and unwrinkled skin in its place.

These famous treatments may now be obtained for home use from the Gordon Dermatology Co., 1 Tramway Building, Denver, Colo. Literature is sent those interested on request.

JILTED WOOER CONFIDES HIS WOES TO BARRETT

Man Who "Et" a 'Possum by Mistake Would Prosecute "One Sam —, Who Claimed It Were a Coon."

By the Associated Press.

JEFFERSON CITY, Dec. 9.—In a case in which a young woman changed her mind after a suitor gave her presents, Attorney-General Barrett has been asked to give legal advice.

The following letter came recently from the jilted wooer:

"Last September I was in Missouri to visit a lady whom I have known for years. She is a teacher in one of the high schools. While I was there we agreed to marry. We talked of the furniture we would have in our house. She said she would like to have a desk and asked me if I wouldn't get that for her before we were married, then she would still have it after we were married. I was so sure we would soon be married, I bought her a $160 desk.

"I was to see her Christmas. She told me she would like to have a leather pocketbook that she could be using till we married and still have it afterwards, so I bought her a $43 pocketbook. Now she has turned me down for another man and said she never said she would marry me.

"Lots of our friends in Kansas City said they thought we were going to marry. One man said she as good as told him we were going to marry. What I want to know, by the law of Missouri, can she keep the desk and pocketbook? I wrote her and told her to send them to me C. O. D., or else pay me for them. So far she hasn't answered. Please inform me the proper way to get the desk or compel her to pay me for the desk and pocketbook. Please let me hear from you soon."

Then there was a letter from a man who had been deceived into buying an opossum misrepresented as a soon. He wanted to know what to do to the person who tricked him out of $1.

His letter is as follows:

"On the 9th day of Dec., one Sam —— come to my place of business and sold me one opossom and claimed it were a coon and charged me $1 for same and he goes back home and tells 2 of my friends how he worked off his opossom on me for $1 and I would not have et one bite of it if I had knew what it were for no amt. of money.

"I had not the least idee he would misrepresent this food to me. I want to know just what to do to prosecute him for same. I have 2 good witness to prove that he abertained this money through false pretent by selling me one opossom for a coon. He knew I would not buy or eat opossom meat so he told me before 3 men it were a young coon and charged me $1 for same in order to make this sale. Please tell me what to do in regards to same. Please find stamped enclosed for reply and oblige."

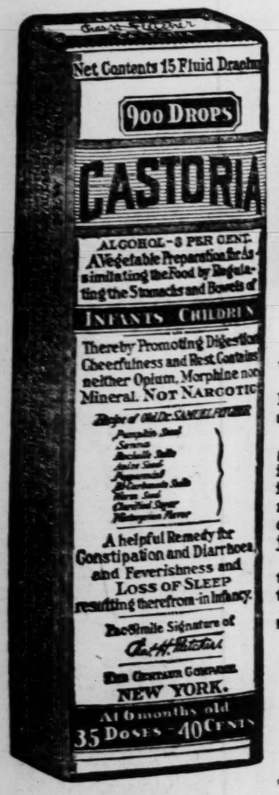
Are You Human?

A little baby. A little child. Don't they appeal to you? Doesn't your heart yearn to pick them up, to cuddle them close to you, to shield them from all harm? sure it does else you're not human. Being human you love them. Their very helplessness makes you reach out in all your strength to aid them. In health there's no flower so beautiful. In illness there's no night so black.

Save them then. Use every precaution. Take no chance.

When sickness comes, as sickness will, remember it's just a baby, just a child and if the Physician isn't at hand don't try some remedy that you may have around the house for your own use.

Fletcher's Castoria was made especially for babies' ills and you can use it with perfect safety as any doctor will tell you. Keep it in the house.



Exact Copy of Wrapper.

Children Cry For

Fletcher's

CASTORIA

Do the People Know?

Do you know why you are asked to call for Fletcher's Castoria when you want a child's remedy: why you must insist on Fletcher's?

For years we have been explaining how the popularity of Fletcher's Castoria has brought out innumerable imitations, substitutes and counterfeits.

To protect the babies: to shield the homes and in defense of generations to come we appeal to the better judgment of parents to insist on having Fletcher's Castoria when in need of a child's medicine. And remember above all things that a child's medicine is made for children—a medicine prepared for grown-ups is not interchangeable. A baby's food for a baby. And a baby's medicine is just as essential for the baby.

The Castoria Recipe (it's on every wrapper) has been prepared by the same hands in the same manner for so many years that the signature of Chas. H. Fletcher and perfection in the product are synonymous.

THIRD PARTY ISSUE PROVIDES SATIRE AT GRIDIRON FETE

Witches Dressed as Borah, La Follette and Johnson Dance About Pot of Political "Devil's Brew."

HARDING A GUEST AT ANNUAL DINNER

Coolidge, Cabinet Members and Other Officials Entertained; Most of Members Are Newspaper Men.

By the Associated Press.

WASHINGTON, Dec. 9.—The recent elections and the suggested organization of a third political party gave members of the Gridiron Club humor and satire in abundance tonight at their annual banquet.

The December frolic of the club, which is composed largely of Washington newspaper men, entertained President Harding, Vice President Coolidge, members of the Cabinet and of the diplomatic corps, other Government officials and business men and publishers from all sections of the country.

The numerous picketings which have become common in this city since women suffragists paraded before the White House, made the basis for the greeting to the assembling guests. Club members dressed in Italian Fascisti costumes met them at the doors with appropriate banners. One, typical of the group, bore the question:

"Mr. President, are you with us or against us? The hour has come."

Political "Devil's Brew."

The third party skit was the feature of the dinner. Around a large kettle three members dressed as witches and representing Senators Borah, La Follette and Johnson, concocted a "devil's brew," Borah reciting:

"Round about the cauldron go,
In new party issue throw.
Knocks of every known condition,
Russian soviet recognition,
Bloes the standpat goat hath got,
Boil thou first in the charmed pot."

All the witches insisted the new brew would not only have a kick, but should be composed of kicks. This led "Borah" to soliloquize on the question whether it were better to stay within the party and swat the administration, thereby affording the Democrats much glee, or be a new party man in name as well as in deed. Former Senator Beveridge then announced his willingness to join, explaining:

"Twice have I switched, each time in turn rejected;
I seek some haven now where I can be elected."

"Ford" Feeds the Flames.

The act closed with "Henry Ford" feeding the fire with greenbacks and with a farmer and a banker attempting to stir up the brew together, whereupon there was an explosion and the party broke up with the organizers blaming everybody and shaking their fists in each others' faces.

Four men wrapped in sheets appeared as the ghosts of "normalcy," "reduced taxation," "lower cost of living," and the "international court"; but when they were unveiled the issues were shown to be still alive.

Good music featured the dinner, with several parodies, one of which, entitled "Sailing, sailing, over the three-mile line," described the troubles of rum ships. A musical skit, "The Gridiron Follies of 1922," was the central point.

Finally a member remarked that President Harding had a number of problems on his mind.

"Take the next Congress for instance, I wonder what the President will do with it."

"I have a better conundrum than that. What will it do to him?"

"What Will the President Do?"

In the finale the President was asked a number of questions in a song ending:

"And now just a query in Gridiron vein—
What will the President do?
Will he say he declines or will he run again?
What will the President do?"

This was the introduction to the President's address, a part of the program yearly, but as Mr. Harding was told he did not have to answer the question, and as it is a Gridiron rule that neither his address nor those of other speakers are reported, his answers remain secret. Other speakers included Justice Sutherland of the United States Supreme Court; former Vice President Marshall; Senator Borah and "Uncle Joe" Cannon. As the dinner was the last public entertainment in the national capital at which "Uncle Joe" will appear, he was presented with a bronze gridiron as a memento of the occasion.

Art League Dinner Dance.

The dinner for the board of governors of the Art League will be held Dec. 14 at Bevo Mill, 4749 Gravois avenue. An auction of small works by St. Louis artists and general dancing will follow the dinner. Other coming events on the calendar of the Art League are the annual appearance here of the Flonzaley Quartet, at the Odeon, and Art League night, Jan. 16, at the San Carlo opera at the Odeon.

ILLINOIS TO VOTE ON NEW CODE TUESDAY

Opponents' Attack Centered on Income Tax Law and Submission in Entirety.

By the Associated Press.

CHICAGO, Dec. 9.—Illinois voters will decide Tuesday whether the present State Constitution, adopted 52 years ago, is to be supplanted by the draft prepared by the recent Constitution Convention, which worked from January, 1920, until this fall on the subject.

Drafting of the proposed Constitution was attended by bitter controversies, principally over the question of home rule for Chicago and legislative representative of Chicago and Cook County.

Opponents of the draft have centered their attack on the income tax law provisions and on the fact that it is submitted in its entirety. They point out that the Ohio Constitution Convention in 1912 submitted a draft which could be voted on by sections.

No Claim of Perfection.

The convention, in an address to the people of the State, did not claim perfection for its product, but asserted it was the best compromise possible between the various elements represented.

Besides providing for a State income tax, and admitting Chicago to home rule if the city wishes to adopt a new charter, the draft provides, among other changes:

The right of trial by jury may be waived in all felony cases except those involving capital punishment, and the General Assembly may enact laws permitting women to serve on juries, or permitting juries of less than 12 in civil cases.

Cook County is permanently limited to not more than 19 of the 57 seats in the State Senate, but is given equal representation with the rest of the State, on the basis of population, in the House.

The Governor may supplement proclamations calling special sessions of the Legislature with one additional message covering matters omitted from the original call.

Zoning Ordinances Permitted.

Municipalities are permitted to pass zoning ordinances to supervise their growth.

Reader Takes Newer Form of Iron — Feels Years Younger

"Six weeks ago I saw a special offer in the paper telling how thousands of people grow old in looks and energy long before they are really old in years, because, as examinations by physicians have shown, an enormous number of people do not have enough iron in their blood. I have been taking this newer form of iron, called Nuxated Iron for two weeks; the results are simply astounding. The roses have come back in my lips and cheeks and I can conscientiously say that I feel and look ten years younger."

The above is a typical hypothetical case showing the results that have been achieved by people all over the country since we started this great trial offer. You can now try a full-sized bottle of Nuxated Iron containing two weeks' treatment at our expense. Cut out the trial coupon and go to any druggist and get your first package of Nuxated Iron. Look in the mirror and note carefully the color of your lips and cheeks. See how long you can work and how far you can walk without becoming tired. Next take two five grain tablets after meals, three times daily for two weeks, then see if you do not feel and look years younger.

Trial Coupon

Fill in this coupon with your name and address and take it to any druggist in your city. Deposit with him the price of one regular full-size bottle of Nuxated Iron. This is not a payment, but a deposit only. If you are not more than delighted with the results obtained by two weeks' use of Nuxated Iron, simply return the outside wrapper to your own druggist who will promptly refund your money. We will repay the druggist the full amount he refunds upon receipt of the coupon and wrapper.

SKIRMISH

THE NEW AMERICAN GAME OF SKILL

One of the most exciting and fascinating games ever played on a game board, no game is more simple—it can be played by any school child—yet scientific enough to tax all the resources of the best chess or checker players that may attempt to solve and discover the many hidden nooks that are created by the ever-changing position of the men.

At the present day most people prefer to play games of cards where luck or chance may favor an inferior player, but remember that in the game of Skirmish all the element of chance is eliminated and the player is required to rely upon his own mental resources, reasoning power and skill to win.

A wonderful game for the family circle and a great pastime for the long cold winter evenings.

A good Christmas present for young or old.

Festival Fund Has No Solicitors; Lists to Go Out as in Other Years

FOR the information of the general public the Post-Dispatch announces that, as in other years, the Christmas Festival Fund has no solicitors of cash contributions. Persons endeavoring to make cash collections are impostors and should be reported immediately to the secretary of the Executive Committee, Post-Dispatch, Olive 6600, or Central 6600.

As usual, subscription lists will be delivered by young women, where that is practical, and elsewhere by mail. These lists will be sent out with the request that they be so displayed that anyone wishing to subscribe any sum, large or small, to the fund, may do so. This request will be made by the young women when they distribute the lists, and these workers will make further visits to see that the lists have not been mislaid or forgotten; but none of them are authorized to ask for or to receive money.

When a list has served its purpose it may be returned to the cashier of the Post-Dispatch by mail or messenger, or if that is not convenient, a telephone request to the Post-Dispatch will bring a representative with written authority to receive and receipt for the list and money.

Donations may be made in cash or by mail to the cashier of the Post-Dispatch, in addition to the subscription list medium. Acknowledgment in the columns of the paper, of every subscription of whatever size, will be made accompanied by the donor's name, unless a request for an anonymous acknowledgment is made.

morning are being worked out by children from the municipal playgrounds under the direction of the recreational division of the Park Department, of which Rodowe H. Abeken is superintendent. Last year nearly 800 playground performers presented an allegorical fairy play depicting the adventures of Santa Claus in the Northland with good and evil sprites. The theme of this year's entertainment will be announced within a few days.

Pipes and Tobacco for Men.

It was decided at the first meeting of the Executive Committee of the Post-Dispatch Christmas Festival, which convened at the Hotel Jefferson last Wednesday that pipes and tobacco would be given to the men who are to be the dinner guests on Christmas day of the municipal lodging houses and the Salvation Army missions. This activity will replace the dinner for homeless men which prior to 1916 was annually given under the direction of the Christmas Festival Association.

This year more than 45,000 toys and gifts have been provided for the boys and girls who will be the guests of the Festival Association at the Coliseum on Christmas morning.

The budget for toys and gifts approximates $4000 this year, and Chairman Robert D. Corlett, who heads the Gift Buying and Distribution Committee, reports that the gifts embrace a bigger variety and a better grade than ever before in the history of the festival. Hockey or skating caps have been procured for both boys and girls, nearly 10,000 balls will be given away, more than 8000 horns and crickets will contribute to the general din which always precedes the elaborate entertainment, and 5100 dolls will be distributed among the small feminine guests, while the younger children will receive books and the older boys will be presented with knives. Each child will be given a generous package of Christmas candy.

Well-Filled Baskets.

Under the direction of Chairman Louis Nolte, the Committee on Food Buying and Distribution has begun its work and the deserving families who will receive Christmas dinners through the Festival Association will be generously cared for with a well-filled basket containing all the supplies needed to prepare a bountiful holiday meal.

This year the Basket List Committee will receive individual applications, preferably in writing, until Dec. 18. Personal application may be made at the Information Desk, first floor, Post-Dispatch. Experienced social workers will investigate all applications received up to the evening of Dec. 18, and the number of baskets to be distributed will be definitely determined as soon as the investigations are completed. Charitable organizations or organized charities who submit lists of applications to the committee are urged to file their lists on or before Dec. 15 to facilitate the cross-checking necessary to prevent duplication. Agencies or individuals operating independently in the effort to provide Christmas cheer for persons whom they know need the public's hospitality, are invited to submit lists of those whom they expect to care for, so that they may be compared with the roster of those who will partake of the Christmas hospitality provided through the Christmas Festival by St. Louisans.

It is the definite aim and yearly endeavor of those in charge of the basket list to make sure that all legitimate requests are cared for.

Lists to Be Distributed.

Distribution of the Christmas Festival lists will begin tomorrow. While as many of the larger donations as it is possible to obtain will be needed this year, the Festival Committee is placing particular emphasis on the small gifts—the nickels, dimes and quarters—which aided so materially in raising the record fund of $15,703.98 last year, enabling more than 35,000 persons to participate in the spreading of Yuletide cheer.

It is the desire of the Subscription List Committee to place a contribution list in every place of business in St. Louis, and about 15,000 new lists of offices and business establishments have been compiled from the latest telephone and business directories.

In each place to which a list is delivered some individual will be asked to take charge of it and of contributions, and when the list is closed, to send the money subscribed, with the list, to the cashier of the Post-Dispatch. Every contribution, large or small, will be acknowledged in the Post-Dispatch.

Organized 22 Years Ago.

A brief summary of the history of the Post-Dispatch Christmas Festival Association should not be amiss in connection with the announcement of its plans for the current season. Organized 22 years ago, it is managed by an Executive Committee comprising well-known citizens and representatives of the leading organized charitable forces of St. Louis. The members of the association are appointed by the executive chairman to preside over various minor committees and each sub-committeeman assumes responsibility for a certain department of the festival work, choosing as many helpers and asosciates as he deems needful to administer effectively the details of his particular department.

The work of the Christmas Festival Association is not a charity in any sense—it is rather a hospitality—a recognition of the age-old maxim that Christmas joy in the fullest sense comes not from receiving, but from giving.

Co-operates With Charities.

The Christmas Festival Association is not identified with any single organized charitable agency, although it works in co-operation with all, regardless of creed or standards. It is merely a one-day institution which has for its sole object the business of making certain that no person in the city, young or old, regardless of race or color, shall lack the means of escape, for one day, from the surroundings and conditions which make for misery and downheartedness. It is particularly anxious to reach those families in which there are small children, even those whose physical needs are fairly well year by a committee of business men. The following report of the chairman of the Audit and Finance Committee shows clearly the purposes for which the 1921 fund was used:

Audit Committee report on the Post-Dispatch 1921 Christmas Festival Fund:

St. Louis, Mo., Nov. 21, 1922.

To the Executive Committee, Post-Dispatch Christmas Festival Fund:

As chairman of the Audit and Finance Committee of the Post-Dispatch Christmas Festival Fund I submit the following statement of receipts and disbursements for the festival for the year of 1921:

Receipts—
Balance from last year with interest	$ 1,317 43
Post-Dispatch contribution	500 00
Other contributions	15,203 98
From Post-Dispatch to pay administration expense	2,308 82	$19,330 23
Disbursements—
Baskets	$6,541 32
Dinner	17 50
Festival expense	3,640 09
Toys and gifts	5,008 36
Administration expense paid by the Post-Dispatch	2,308 82
Balance on hand	1,814 14	$19,330 23

I have examined the books and accounts of the treasurer of the fund, Mr. Dumont Jones, cashier of the Post-Dispatch, and find them correct. All contributions to the fund were received, entered on the books and acknowledged in the columns of the Post-Dispatch.

All supplies, labor and other necessaries for the festival were ordered on requisition of the chairman of the committees and ordered by the chairmen of the Supply Committee and on the approval of the Executive Committee.

All bills were approved by the chairman of the committees and paid on vouchers signed for the Executive Committee and the Post-Dispatch by Miss Mabel Denison and Mr. George S. Johns.

Every dollar expended is accounted for by an approved bill and a signed and approved voucher.

Besides its contribution of $500, the Post-Dispatch paid the expense of the administration, including salaries of office help, solicitors, etc., typewriting, stationery, postage and committee expenses, which amounted to $2308.82. Thus all of the money expended from the fund was applied to the actual necessaries of the several divisions of the festival.

It is gratifying to note the efficient system on which the festival is conducted and the economy and accuracy with which the fund is administered.

It gives me pleasure to state that, despite the increases of expenditures due to greater cost of materials, there is a balance of $1814.14 deposited at interest to the credit of the fund.

J. R. COOKE,
Vice President First National Bank,
Chairman Audit and Finance Committee.

Total of $191,259 Disbursed.

During the 22 years of its stewardship the Post-Dispatch has received and disbursed approximately $191,259.88, every penny of which has gone for the purpose for which it was given.

The Executive Committee, which has complete charge of the management of all branches of the festival and directs the expenditures and work through subcommittees, is composed of the following members, many of whom have been on the committee for many years: A. M. Roth, chairman Executive Committee; William L. Igoe, representing St. Vincent de Paul Society, chairman Police and Fire Protection Committee; C. M. Hubbard, representing Provident Association; Maurice Weil, president Jewish Community Center, chairman Automobile Transportation Committee; Mrs. Robert Hykins, representing Jewish Community Center, chairman Crippled Children Committee; Louis Nolte, chairman Food Buying and Distribution Committee; Fred W. Pape, chairman Entertainment Committee; Rodowe H. Abeken, chairman Ticket Distribution Committee; C. J. Kehoe, chairman Transportation Committee; Col. A. T. Perkins, representing United Railways; Brig. David E. Dunham, representing Salvation Army; Dr. A. H. Sippy, chairman Medical Committee; Mrs. A. H. Sippy, chairman Basket Packing Committee; Robert D. Corlett, chairman Gift Buying and Distribution Committee; Nelson Cunliff, chairman Tree and Decorations Committee; Henry J. Bube, chairman Hall Committee; Oscar Stifel, chairman Door Committee; Samuel J. Russack, chairman Lost Children Committee; Herman Spoehrer, chairman Basket List Checking Committee; J. R. Cooke, chairman Auditing Finance Committee.

The Post-Dispatch is represented on the Executive Committee by George S. Johns.

Applications for Basket Christmas Dinners Must Be Received by Dec. 18

THIS year, as for the last two years, the list of persons to whom Christmas dinners will be sent in baskets by the Post-Dispatch Christmas Festival Association will be handled and checked by a central committee of representatives of leading charitable organizations, assisted by a staff of investigators from the Board of Children's Guardians under the direction of Miss Emma C. Puschner.

Applications for the basket dinners from individuals should be sent in writing, if possible, to the Basket List Committee, care of the Post-Dispatch, Twelfth and Olive streets, or given in person at the information desk, first floor, Post-Dispatch Building. All applications must be in the hands of the committee by Monday, Dec. 18. Charitable organizations are urged to submit their lists of names on or before Dec. 15, as early filing aids in cross-checking the names of applicants and facilitates the elimination of duplicates.

Arrangements have been made with other local forces which dispense Christmas hospitality for a comparison of the Post-Dispatch basket list names with the lists of persons cared for by other organizations, so that no one will be overlooked, but that all deserving families will be provided with Christmas cheer.

MEMBERS OF THE EXECUTIVE COMMITTEE OF THE POST-DISPATCH CHRISTMAS FESTIVAL ASSOCIATION

Coliseum Will Be Scene of Joyful Celebration Christmas Morning When Children Who Might Not Otherwise Share in Holiday Cheer Gather as Guests of Association—All Will Get Candy and Toys and Effort Also Will Be Made to Send Dinner Baskets to All Deserving Families Requesting Them.

PREPARATIONS for the twenty-third annual Christmas Festival under the auspices of the Post-Dispatch are going forward rapidly. Toys and gifts for at least 10,000 children have been purchased by the Gift Committee, and the Basket List Committee is working overtime in order to take care of all requests for Christmas dinner baskets from the many members of the St. Louis community family whose only hope for Christmas cheer lies in the work of the Christmas Festival Association.

Last year the association distributed 2750 baskets, which cost approximately $2.32½ each, or a total of $6641, and it is estimated that each basket will cost about the same this year.

RADIO STANDARDIZATION CONFERENCE TO BE HELD

Called by Bureau os Standards; Will Be Held in New York City, Jan. 12.

The Bureau of Standards of the Department of Commerce has called a conference on radio standardization to be held on Friday, Jan. 12, 1923, in New York City. The desirability of calling a general conference on radio standardization has been apparent in many ways, and this call is issued by the Bureau of Standards at the specific request of the following associations and organizations:

Institute of Radio Engineers.
Radio Apparatus Section, Associated Manufacturers of Electrical Supplies.
National Retail and Dry Goods Association.
American Radio Relay League.
Radio Corporation of America.

These organizations have pointed out that there is need for greater uniformity in the methods of describing, rating and testing of performance of radio apparatus.

Invitations are being issued to all of the national associations of an engineering and technical nature which are known to be interested in radio standardization. The representation of radio manufacturers will in general be through the trade associations of which they are members. While it is desired to make the conference thoroughly and broadly representative, it is expected that the organizations invited will limit their representation to one or two persons in order that the conference may be as effective as possible.

The purpose of the conference is to consider broadly (1) whether a formulation of standards for radio apparatus and service shall be made, (2) if so, what general classes of apparatus or service should be included, and (3) what procedure shall be recommended for carrying out the conclusions reached by the conference. If the conference decides that radio standards should be formulated, it is expected that they will be prepared with special consideration of the wide range of interests which are concerned with the subject, and that these standards may ultimately be adopted with the approval of the American Engineering Standards Committee as an American standard.

CLUB FOR LIGHTHOUSE KEEPERS

Men Form Organization for Purpose of Mutual Benefit.

Several men in the Lighthouse Bureau at Washington have been dabbling with radiotelephone receiving sets, and it has occurred to them that their experience would be valuable to keepers and other members of the service who would like to enjoy the pleasures of the radio concerts. Therefore they propose to organize a radio club among the amateur "fans" of the service. The initiation fee will be a postal or letter stating approval of the scheme and a desire to be enrolled as a member. The dues will be a word or two from time to time telling of difficulties encountered, results secured, or asking information.

A space in the Lighthouse Service Bulletin will be reserved for answers to questions and interesting information as will enable them to construct their own sets or improve those they already have and to conduct a clearing house for new ideas. Articles will appear from time to time on different phases of the subject. Charles C. Brush is in charge of the plan.

For the Notebook.

A variometer makes a good loading inductance for short waves.

A fixed-condenser should be shunted across the head-set.

Broadcasting descriptions of missing persons is a new use of the art.

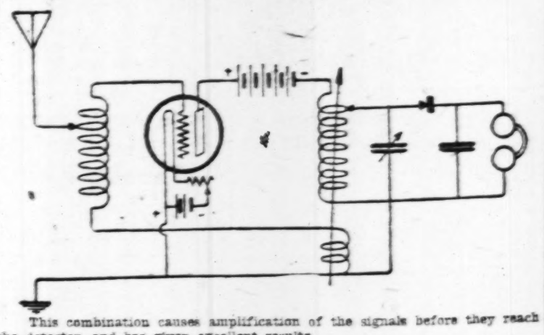
A "loud speaker" will not function in connection with a crystal set.

When setting up an aerial, one long wire is better than several short ones.

Close coupling is used to hear several stations, and loose coupling for selectivity.

A crystal detector is less sensitive and more difficult to adjust than a vacuum tube detector.

Radio Frequency Amplifier for Crystal Detector Set



This combination causes amplification of the signals before they reach the detector, and has given excellent results.

How to Assemble a Tuning Coil and Loose Coupler for Better Signals

Set May Be Made Up From Instruments to Be Found on Any Experimenter's Workbench.

Enthusiasts seeking diversion and something new to try in the way of experimentation will find the above hookup from the Radio News worth their while.

The necessary apparatus to be added is perhaps a 22½-volt "B" battery (depending upon the tube), a tuning coil consisting of 100 turns of No. 24 double cotton-covered wire wound on a tube 2½ inches in diameter, either tapped every five turns or provided with a slider, and a loose-coupler or vario-coupler. The loose-coupler may be constructed by winding 105 turns of No. 23 d. c. c. wire on a 4¾-inch tube, tapped every 15 turns, and the secondary coil is made by winding 45 turns of No. 24 d. c. c. wire on a 3½-inch tube. The latter coil, connected in series with the aerial tuning inductance, provides a feed-back between the grid and plate of the vacuum tube.

The variable condenser has a capacity of .0005 mfd. and in some cases it might help in tuning if a .0015 mfd. condenser were connected in series with the antenna, depending, of course, upon the dimensions and size of the particular aerial to which the set is connected.

When the crystal is out of adjustment, a continuous howling in the telephones will result, as the degree of amplification obtained is entirely dependent upon the sensitiveness of the detector. In the beginning, use a fairly tight coupling between the grid and plate coils and then carefully adjust the detector. The results are surprising.

Using this hookup, distant stations have been heard all over the room which previously could barely be heard with the 'phones lying on the table.

The Radio Editor will appreciate comments from those who try this circuit, as well as hearing of any changes which in any way improve its sensitiveness.

Radio Questions Answered

All Queries Must Be Accompanied by the Name and Address of the Sender.

Q. Does it make any difference where the lead-in wire is connected to the antenna? G. F.

A. Not if the aerial is perfectly horizontal. If one end is higher than the other, the lead-in should be attached to the lower end.

Q. What is the use of a ground-clamp? W. L.

A. To obtain a more perfect connection with the water pipe. The pipe should be scraped clean and bright and the connector placed around it, then drawn tight by means of the screw which is a part of every connector. It provides the most efficient means of insuring a good contact with the pipe.

Q. My set consists of a variometer and a crystal detector. I hear a continual hum. What causes this?

A. Probably either electric light wires in your home, or alternating current power leads running near to or parallel to your aerial.

Q. If two aerials are very close to each other, is one likely to affect signals received by the other?

A. Not unless single-circuit vacuum tube sets are in use. Where both are crystal sets, one will not affect the other.

Q. Is there any penalty for tacking up signs on telegraph poles for the selling of crystal detector sets? C. L.

A. There is a law against posting advertising matter of any kind on poles belonging to the telegraph, telephone and electric companies.

Q. Please tell me what kind of an audio-frequency amplifying transformer is used with a "peanut" tube; will any kind work satisfactorily? C. W. B.

A. Yes.

Q. What is meant by radiation being "6.8 amperes"? P. T.

A. It means that 6.8 amperes of current is flowing into the antenna, and being radiated.

Q. Why does K S D broadcast on 400 and 485 meters? What does that mean?

A. 400 meters is the wave length assigned by the Government to all class "B" stations for broadcasting entertainment programs, while 485 meters is designated to be used for the transmission of weather forecasts and market quotations. Limited space does not permit giving a complete technical explanation. The subject is completely covered in books obtainable at radio stores.

Q. Is variable condenser needed in a loose-coupler crystal detector set? Would it improve it? Where should it be connected? E. B. W.

A. While signals may, in many cases, be heard without a variable condenser in the circuit, the addition, either across the secondary, or in series with the aerial, will bring in the signals louder, as it permits finer tuning.

Q. Will 12 volts burn out my Magnavox loud-speaker? I tried it, and the signals are much louder? R. J.

A. It is not advisable to use a higher potential on any instrument than that for which it was rated by the maker. Using 12-volt "A" battery on a loud speaker will cause the field coils to heat if connected for any length of time and might burn them out. You might try 8 volts, but if the instrument becomes warm, reduce it to 6, as primarily intended.

K S D'S DAILY PROGRAM OF PUBLIC SERVICE

In the Air Every Hour With Information of Value to the Mississippi Valley.

A multitude of listeners on receiving sets rarely hear K S D except in the evening hours. They know vaguely that there is a day-time service, but are wholly unaware how extensive it is.

The Post-Dispatch radio station might almost be called a "radio newspaper." Market information of every kind of interest to the Mississippi Valley is broadcast hourly. In hundreds of towns this information is received in banks, stores and public schools, and posted on bulletin boards for the information of the local public. In many cases the news received by radio is relayed on local telephone lines. At each hour of transmission general news items are also broadcast.

An idea of the extensiveness of this service can be had by consulting the following schedule:

Denver Radio Stations Hear Concert in St. Louis

Denver radio fans last night heard distinctly a superb concert presented 1,000 miles away by the St. Louis Symphony orchestra in the Odeon theater, St. Louis. The concert was staged under the auspices of the St. Louis Post-Dispatch and was caught by scores of radio stations here. H. H. Buckwalter, at Station 9-XAG who caught every note of the extensive program on his instruments, said the transmission on this program was the clearest he had heard in months and the nearest to perfect of any concert he had caught at this distance.

RIGHT WAY TO MAKE SOLDERED CONNECTION

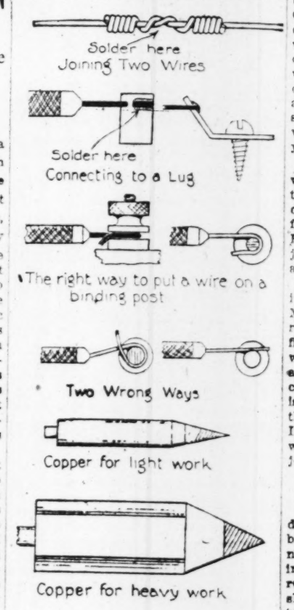
True Efficiency Can Only Be Realized When Practically Every Joint Is Perfect.

Everyone who has tinkered with a radio set has had experience with that most elusive trouble—the loose connection. Where many wires must be connected, some to other wires, some to binding posts of many kinds, the greatest care must be taken to see that every joint is tight and, if possible, soldered. Radio fans may well take a tip from the practice of the Western Electric Co., whose workmen make millions of soldered connections every year in building mammoth telephone switchboards and in all sorts of apparatus work. In fact, the only connections that are not soldered are those that must be opened as a matter of routine, as in replacing worn-out cords or batteries.

A good electrical joint must first of all be strong enough to stand the strains of handling, etc., to which it will be subjected. When two wires are joined, they should always be twisted together for mechanical strength. A wire should be twisted around some part of a fixed terminal. Where a flat screw or nut is turned down on the wire, the latter should pass nearly around the screw, but not cross itself. This allows the screw or nut to seat itself evenly. If two or more wires are to be clamped under the same screw, a washer should be put between each wire, or the wires should be twisted together before being bent around the screw.

Avoid the kind of binding post through which a wire passes and which clamps the wire under the tip around the screw.

The ideal connection, however, is one made on a flat metal lug, which has a notch in one or both sides through which the wire is looped. This transmits a pull on the wire directly to the lug, and the solder is not strained. Solder is not a strong metal; a wire held by it alone can be pulled loose, and repeated bending will soon make it crystalize and give way.



Before starting to work with a soldering copper, file the tip of it to a smooth surface on all sides, then heat it, being careful to keep the tip in the flame. When heated in air copper rapidly takes on a black coating of oxide. When hot enough to melt solder, give the tip a final rub with the file, then quickly rub it in a little sal-ammoniac powder or soldering paste in which are a few drops of solder. The paste will dissolve the oxide on the copper and the solder will amalgamate with the clean copper, just as water will wet a clean board, but not a greasy one.

The solder on the copper will now act as a ready means of carrying heat from the body of the copper to the work. This can easily be seen by touching a piece of cold solder first to the black surface of the copper, then to the tinned tip; it will melt much more quickly on the bright surface.

The copper must be hot—not just enough to melt the solder, but hot enough to heat the parts so that the solder will adhere to them.

For all electrical work, where copper and brass are to be soldered, only rosin should be used. Any paste or liquid will inevitably corrode the metals, and it is a difficult job to get all the paste off after the joint is made. For this reason rosin-cored wire solder is ideal. This is tubular solder filled with rosin, and no cleaning-up is necessary afterward.

Anything to be soldered must be "tinned," that is, covered with a coating of solder. If you use tinned copper wires, and if the lugs have been tinned by the manufacturer, you need not bother much about cleaning. If not, they must be scraped or sandpapered clean, then tinned. On heavy work, such as a lead to a ground rod, tin the parts before putting them together. An iron pipe may be tinned by scraping, heating, and applying sal-ammoniac and solder together. For copper and brass, you should use rosin, usually in the form of rosin-cored solder.

To connect a wire to a lug, loop the wire once only around the neck of the lug, heat the joint with the copper, and touch it with the solder. Only a drop is necessary. Take the copper quickly away and keep the wire motionless until the solder cools. If the solder is disturbed while the joint is cooling, it will crystallize, giving a dull surface and a weak joint. If you wrap the wire several times around a small lug, you will infallibly break the lug when you try to remove the wire.

Sometimes you may have to solder wires where no copper can be obtained. For heat, the flame of a candle is sufficient. The soot that forms on the wires will do no harm. Rub the rosin-core wire on the hot joint and it will melt and flow around the wires.

Never tape up an unsoldered joint if you want it to be permanent. Many tapes contain sulphur in the rubber compound. This will form a film of copper sulphide which will work its way around all the wires and form a high resistance in the circuit. If any considerable current is carried, the joint will heat up and the sulphide will form all the faster. In radio antennas the minute voltage will not overcome a high-resistance joint. Solder, and be sure!

Radio Technique.

The success of radio reception does not depend on the set alone, but requires a certain skill and technique in tuning and handling the instruments. Poor results in radio receiving, such as feeble signals, short-distance range, maximum interference and distorted music, can be attributed very often to faulty manipulation of the instruments.

Care of Head Phones.

The head receivers should be treated with much care and not be dropped or jolted, as they are very delicate. Do not put fingers into the little holes, or you may bend the diaphragms, which would be hard to straighten. A hook under your receiving table is a good place to hang them when not in use.

Radio Exports Increase.

Domestic exports of radio apparatus during the month of October totaled $207,535 and weighed 114,309 pounds, according to figures compiled by the Department of Commerce. The value of these radio shipments was as follows: England, $70,391; Quebec and Ontario, $35,728; Argentine, $32,092; Brazil, $27,072, and Japan, $11,299, the balance going to 20 other countries.

LOUD-SPEAKER MADE FROM SHELL & PHONE

Excellent Results Obtained Using Triton in Connection With Receiver.

William D. Pyle, in the Denver Rocky Mountain News, tells in a very interesting way how a conch shell has successfully been utilized as a loud-speaker.

"It is a new and easily constructed device that amplifies the smallest detail of broadcast music with a minimum of the echoes and harsh distortions made by metal amplifying horns. The compartment of the human ear known as "the winding staircase," suggested the sea shell to the inventor, Father Frederick L. Odenbach. After experimenting he found that a triton or conch shell served the purpose best. So he sawed off the tip of the shell, making a cross section of about an inch and a half in diameter. The opening in the sawed end of the shell was then widened out, and the winding chamber inside was enlarged so that it was about the size of a finger. The shell was mounted on a block of wood to hold it solid, and a piece of ordinary garden hose was attached. The hose was extended to a sensitive telephone receiver or to one of the many commercial sound-amplifying devices which use a horn for a resonator.

The sea shell amplifier is reported to work well in a parlor, but for concert halls the inventor has perfected a pyramid horn of thin wood. The wooden horn is not quite as clear as the shell amplifier, but it is more powerful. The pyramid horn was made two inches square at the small end and a foot square at the large end. Thin shellacked wood was used for all four sides, two opposite sides of pine and two of maple. The opposite sides were connected by thin splinters of wood fitted into the interior of the horn.

Over the large end was placed a thin piece of wood with a round hole in the center, six inches in diameter. This was the ordinary wood used on the backs of framed pictures. The wooden pyramid was connected to some kind of electromagnetic amplifier in the same manner as the sea shell was connected, with a length of rubber hose.

For Soldering Copper.

Mix powdered rosin and wood alcohol together to make a good soldering flux for copper.

BOOK ON SUPER-REGENERATION GIVES COMPLETE DETAILS OF SET

Explanation of the Theory of Circuit Is Given, as Well as Instructions on Operation.

"The Construction and Operation of Super-Regenerative Receivers," by Kenneth Harkness, published by the Radio Guild, New York, has just been released.

The receivers employing this new method of reception were constructed after much experiment in design and operation. They have already been widely discussed in prominent radio and secular publications. In this new book the author gives, for the first time, full and complete information which permits anyone to construct a set of this kind and obtain the same remarkable results he achieved.

The book is illustrated with wiring diagrams, mechanical drawings and photographs of three different types of receivers. Instructions are given for the operation of these receivers, which will greatly assist the experimenter in locating trouble and properly operating his set.

A New Radio Book.

A new book that will be of interest to radio enthusiasts who like to make their own equipment is "Practical Radio," by Henry Smith Willard, M. D., LL. D., just issued from the Funk and Wagnalls' press.

This is an up-to-date manual which explains the construction of all radio devices from the simplest crystal detector apparatus to the most elaborate amplifying and super-regenerative outfits. The explanatory matter is clear and easily understandable and the text is embellished with many useful diagrams and illustrations.

Long-Distance Record for Amateurs.

An amateur radio record was established recently, when a message was sent from Hartford, Conn., to Wailuku, Hawaiian Islands, and the answer received in four minutes and 18 seconds. The radiogram was relayed at Sleepy Eye, Minn., the airline of the message being about 5200 miles.

Conductors and Non-Conductors.

Among the good conductors are: Aluminum, antimony, brass, bismuth, copper, iron, lead, mercury, nickel, platinum, silver, tin and zinc. Dry leather, dry paper, dry air, glass, gutta percha, oils, porcelain, slate, silk and wool are insulators or so-called non-conductors.

NEW OKLA. GOVERNOR TO GIVE PUBLIC FETE

Enough Provender to Serve 200,000 Persons Two Days Sought for Inaugural Party.

By the Associated Press.

OKLAHOMA CITY, Ok., Dec. 9.—A call for enough provender to serve 200,000 persons two days has gone out in Oklahoma. Governor-elect J. C. Walton, Democrat, has invited the world at large to his inaugural party, Jan. 10 and 11, at the State Fair grounds here.

He said he expects his guests to come in ox-carts, airplanes, motor cars, special railroad trains, riding the rods and the cushions, a-foot, horseback, and by all other available methods of travel.

He will serve them barbecue, and give a square dance—on the completely floored-in circle of a half-mile race track.

Dan V. Lackey, prize fight promoter, is chairman of the committee of 3000 members arranging the festivities.

Here is a tentative list of supplies for the barbecue, prepared by Lackey: 500 beef cattle, 200 hogs, 200 sheep, 5000 chickens, 1000 turkeys, 3000 rabbits, 1000 squirrels, 200 opossums, 500 ducks and geese, 10 buffalo, 10 bears, 10 deer, 10 antelope, 5 tons of coffee, 5 tons of salt, 5 tons of sugar, 1000 pounds of pepper, 250 bushels of onions, 100,000 loaves of bread, 100,000 buns, 15 carloads of firewood and three carloads of pine-knots for kindling.

Here might be included, also, as listed by Lackey, 3000 persons to serve the multitude and 500 expert butchers, slicers and barbecuers.

The new Governor is to take his office on a stand erected in the race track paddock. The two houses of the State Legislature will convene in joint session on the stand and swear into office the Chief Justice of the Supreme Court, who then will administer the oath to the chief executive. This is to take place on Jan. 9. The two-day celebration will follow.

The new Governor will ride a $5000 saddle horse, seated in a $10,000 saddle, in a parade which will start the festivities.

The horse has been promised, according to Lackey, by Col. Zach Mulhall, of Mulhall, Ok., and the diamond and ruby studded, gold-mounted saddle by Col. George Miller, of the 101 Ranch. Both are members of the Central Barbecue Committee, as is also Pawnee Bill, showman and rancher.

Word has gone to Democratic headquarters in every county of the State to enlist all the old-fashioned fiddlers who know how to play "Turkey in the Straw." Other old-timers who specialized in calling the figures for dances are being sought.

Adjutant-General C. F. Barrett has promised that units of the Oklahoma National Guard will police the gathering. From national guard and regular army sources in the State, according to Lackey, it is expected that enough tents can be gathered to shelter the visitors.

Among the especially invited guests of the new Governor at his inaugural party will be about 1000 Indians, representing all the tribes living in Oklahoma. Several tribes have promised to give dances.

Governor-elect Walton was the nominee of the Democratic party. In his State-wide campaign he promised that if he were chosen for the office of chief executive his inaugural ball would be no "pink-tea party" for "the four hundred," but would be a real old-fashioned outdoor celebration for anyone who cared to be present. The barbecue will carry out his campaign promise.

Walton's barbecue, however, will not be the first inaugural celebration of its kind in Oklahoma. C. H. Haskell, the first Governor of the State, who, in 1907, took the oath of office three hours after the President had signed the statehood bill, gave such a celebration at Guthrie, the former State capital.

FRANCE ADVISED TO KEEP RHINELAND POSITION TO CONTROL GERMAN INDUSTRY

FRANCE'S MILITARISM A MYTH, CLEMENCEAU WRITES "WE ARE ALONE IN OUR RUINS," FIRST ARTICLE

"Throughout Bismarckian Bullyings From 1870 to 1914, Our People Only Worked, Relying for Reparation Entirely Upon the Reign of International Justice."

By this article, the first of a series, Georges Clemenceau breaks a silence which dates back to the signing of the treaty of Versailles. Not the present visit has "The Tiger of France" used himself upon international affairs in speech or writing, not even in the pages of his own journal, Echo Nationale. His words are being read eagerly today in France, England, Switzerland, Argentina, Japan and many countries, where these articles are being published as well as in the United States.

Mid-West Tenpin City Must Put Up Bond by March 1

Difficulty in Completing Arrangements for 1922 Event Causes Action at Kansas City Meeting.

KANSAS CITY, Mo., Nov. 28.—When the executive committee of the Middle West Bowling Association awards the next annual tournament, the successful city will have to put up a bond March 1, instead of 60 days before the scheduled opening, as has heretofore been the case. This was decided upon yesterday.

The reason for this change in the laws came as a result of a hitch in arranging the event, which is now in progress here. President Henry Menne was forced to make several trips to St. Louis and for a time it looked as though a switch in cities might have to be made.

With the Tournament Company being forced to put up a bond by March 1, that difficulty will be avoided. St. Louis, Des Moines and Omaha put in bids for the 1922 rolling.

State Examiner Found $36,000 Error in Bank Year Before It Failed

THE letter written to President Hohenschild of the Night and Day Bank, one year before the bank's failure, by the late C. F. Enright, then State Bank Commissioner, was introduced in evidence in Hohenschild's trial today. Finance Commissioner Hughes, Enright's successor, has heretofore refused to make public this letter, which was in the office files, as he has said that it was confidential matter of the department. The text of the letter follows:

City of Jefferson,
Jan. 6, 1921.

Mr. H. H. Hohenschild, President,
Night and Day Bank,

Dear Sir:

State Bank Examiner Virgil D. Wall has filed his report in this office showing condition of your bank at the close of business Dec. 17, 1920.

Sectional Bookcases

An ideal present—useful, ornamental, encourages reading—and the giving of additional sections solves the "gift" problem for future anniversaries. The Globe-Wernicke Bookcase is a staple article of furniture having a substantial re-sale value.

This is exceptional, first, because Globe-Wernicke Bookcases can be matched up and bought in over 2000 cities and towns in the United States, and second, because over three-fourths of all sectional bookcases in use are Globe-Wernicke.

Re-sale value establishes true worth. It is just another evidence of Globe-Wernicke superiority — another reason why Globe-Wernicke Sectional Bookcases make sensible, valuable, acceptable gifts for any occasion.

Made in oak or mahogany—with dust-proof glass receding doors—styles and finishes in keeping with surroundings.

MIRRORS ON ALL AUTOS RECOMMENDED BY A. A.

Fifteen States and District of Columbia Now Require Mirrors on Trucks.

Mirrors on automobiles, showing the driver, at a glance, the condition of traffic immediately behind him, are among the best preventives of traffic accidents in use today, according to A. A. A. officials. Mounted at the left side of the windshield on the open car, or screwed to the frame of the closed car in the same position, the mirror calls immediate attention to a car approaching from the rear, and often saves a collision, with resultant loss to both cars, it is pointed out.

"The A. A. A. has always maintained that every truck in the United States should be equipped with a mirror," said M. O. Eldridge, executive chairman of the A. A. A., "and the addition of a mirror to the left-hand side of the passenger automobile would prove a large added factor of safety. The A. A. A. rule of the road is that one vehicle approaching another from the rear and passing it, shall pass to the left of the vehicle ahead, and this rule gives the driver with a left-hand mirror a perfect view of the approaching motorist and enables him to give the passing car its share of the road. It does not attract the attention of the driver from the road ahead, as a passing glance is all that is needed to show him traffic conditions to the rear of his car.

"Fifteen states and the District of Columbia now require mirrors on trucks, the states being Vermont, Washington, California, Connecticut, Delaware, Pennsylvania, New York, Indiana, Kentucky, Maryland, Maine, Massachusetts, Michigan, Missouri and New Jersey. Nevada is now considering such a law and the movement is spreading to other states.

"Passenger cars can benefit from this example and their drivers can do much to increase their present margin of safety by affixing a small mirror to the left-hand side of the car."

AUTO CLUB WILL NOT ENTER INSURANCE FIELD

After a thorough investigation extending over a period of 18 months, the Automobile Club of Missouri has determined not to establish an interinsurance exchange for members. Formal action declaring against this proposed club activity was taken by the board of governors of the organization on Dec. 5.

Inquiries into every phase of automobile insurance, including a close survey of the exchanges in operation under the auspices of the Automobile Club of Southern California and the Chicago Motor Club convinced the committee in charge of the work of gathering data that not enough service to members and savings in premiums could be brought about through interinsurance to compensate for the difficulties in establishing an exchange and getting it successfully under way.

It was felt that the club could be of greater benefit to its 25,000 members throughout the State by intensify its antitheft and safe-driving labors, thus bringing about a reduction in motoring hazards which would be in due course reflected in insurance rates. Reductions in certain phases of insurance have already been brought about by the activities of the Automobile Club in legislation and in cutting down insurable accidents, and it is planned to redouble the efforts of the organization with a view to further curtailing mishaps on the highways.

OAKLAND TO START ON NONSTOP RUN TODAY

A seven-day nonstop run of an Oakland touring car will start this afternoon in the showroom of the Mississippi Valley Motor Co., 3137 Locust street.

The run is being held for the purpose of determining the number of miles that will be registered on the speedometer, quantity of gasoline and oil used and the amount of water consumed during the run.

Prizes will be awarded by the company to those guessing the nearest to the speedometer reading, amount of gasoline, oil and water used.

The car will be mounted on a special stand and started and left running in high gear until next Sunday afternoon. Only gasoline and oil will be added during the test. The radiator will be filled with water before the test and then sealed. No water will be added during the run.

In order to assure the front wheels of the car revolving in the same manner as the rear, while the car is running, a belt will be extended from the rear to the front wheels.

SHERMAN TO ADDRESS AUTOMOBILE DEALERS

Ray W. Sherman of the Automotive Equipment Association of the United States will be the principal speaker at the "Ask 'Em to Buy" meeting of the St. Louis Automobile Dealers' Association, which will be held Wednesday evening at 7:30 p. m. in the Chamber of Commerce auditorium.

Members of the association have been requested to invite the entire personnel of their establishments to the meeting, as well as all their sub dealers in the city and neighboring towns.

One of the features of the meeting will be two reels of motion pictures, one on "Ask 'Em to Buy" and the other on "Shop Profits," prepared by the Automotive Equipment Association. These same pictures were recently exhibited to members of the Accessory Trade Association of St. Louis.

HAYNES ANNOUNCES NEW 1923 TOURING CAR

Featured by a new and roomier body and finished in Burgundy wine, the new 1923 Haynes 55 five-passenger standard touring car is announced by the Haynes Automobile Co. of Kokomo, Ind.

The new body is three inches longer than the former standard body. The rear and front seats are wider and deeper.

The seats are upholstered in plain black leather, club style. The car carries full crown fenders and a full-length running board with ornamental scuff plates. A gasoline gauge is on the instrument panel and a new, especially designed instrument board groups all the essential controls into a compact semi-circle within easier reach of the driver.

A nickel-plated radiator bar cap, sun and vision visor, exterior cowl lights and head lamps contribute to the appearance of this new model. Wooden wheels or Harvey disc wheels are standard equipment, with a tire carrier mounted at the rear. The top is black. The high hood is set off by an aluminum hood ledge.

The Wilson Motor Co. distributes the Haynes car in St. Louis.

Stephens motor "cracks" and tempers heaviest gasoline

With instant throttle response, the Stephens Six motor combines dependable power, low upkeep cost and exceptional economy for a man-size motor car. Its intake manifold, wholly inside the cylinder head, is both a super-heating and tempering gas chamber. Heated by the exhaust from all six cylinders, it "cracks" every sluggish particle of gasoline and turns it into high-power gas. Water-cooling keeps the gas at a temperature not too high to supply full cylinder charges. Come in and test Stephens power and economy today.

The Battery with California Redwood Insulation—the best-known resistant to acid.

A WINTER Battery

The ability of the GENERAL Battery to turn the motor on the coldest morning is due largely to its California Redwood insulation and the high porosity of its plates. Internal resistance is reduced to a minimum and the extra current required in hard winter service is supplied with ease, losing none of its energy in its flow from the battery plates to the starter.

This is the reason so many owners of GENERAL batteries drive throughout the winter without having the battery recharged. This is why the GENERAL has become known as the winter battery. Our ironclad guarantee (not an adjustment) guarantees protection you against all winter battery trouble.

REMY
STARTING LIGHTING IGNITION SYSTEMS

Builders of Oakland have made it their ideal to produce the finest light-six in the world. The choice of Remy as Oakland's starting, lighting, and ignition system is, therefore, thoroughly sound and logical.

The Remy generator, through its distinctive thermostatic control, automatically regulates the flow of current into the battery. When demand is small the generator supplies current accordingly—eliminating entirely any possibility of battery over-charging. On the other hand, when a heavy or extraordinary amount of electricity is required the Remy generator sees to it that such current is ever present.

DODGE BROTHERS SEDAN

Many women who could well afford more expensive closed cars prefer the sedan for their personal use.

They find it easy to drive, easy to park, economical to run, and comparable in the beauty and richness of its appointments with cars much higher in price.

The upholstery is done in genuine mohair velvet of a singularly rich and beautiful pattern. The seats are roomy and luxurious. The hardware and minor fittings reflect thoughtfulness and rare good taste.

Steel disc wheels (with cord tires) screen the under part of the car and harmonize in a most effective way with the new grace and smartness which Dodge Brothers have recently brought to the lines of the body.

The price is $1545 delivered in St. Louis

Put a Hupmobile In Her Stocking

Perhaps you are going to buy a car in the Spring. Why not make a Christmas gift of it?

If you were to ask the opinion of any garage mechanic as to the car you should buy for anywhere near the Hupmobile price, chances are probably ten to one that he would say "Hupmobile."

Garage mechanics know motor car mechanism intimately; and they, therefore, know that the Hupmobile is built—that it has the stuff in it.

They know that its materials, and its workmanship, compare favorably with cars two and three times its price.

OLDSMOBILE CAR HERE ON 50,000-MILE TRIP

The Oldsmobile model 47 light eight sport car, which started out on May 15 from the Flint Motor Car Co., Oldsmobile distributers, Milwaukee, as the transportation medium for Brownie, the road-map authority for the Milwaukee Journal, visited the De Luxe Automobile Co., Oldsmobile distributers in St. Louis, Friday.

This car had traveled 49,317 miles at 10 o'clock Friday when it started on the return trip to Milwaukee, driven by H. E. Griffin, superintendent Flint Motor Car Co., accompanied by E. F. Berry of the Milwaukee Oldsmobile Sales Co.; D. F. Nicolazzo of the Bearings and Gears Sales Co., Milwaukee, and W. H. Winters, formerly of St. Louis but now of Milwaukee.

Griffin states that the car has averaged about 385 miles per day and expects to cross the 50,000-mile mark on Saturday, Dec. 9. The trip from Milwaukee to St. Louis showed 472.8 miles.

The average miles per gallon of gas for the first 49,000 miles has been 16.1 miles per gallon. A set of tires has run from 13,000 to 20,000 miles. The only motor work done on the car so far has been grinding of the valves at 27,000 miles.

Griffin states that as soon as 50,000 miles have been covered he contemplates driving from Milwaukee to St. Louis and back in 24 hours. Griffin and his party left on their return trip to Milwaukee at 10:45 o'clock Friday morning and expect to be in Milwaukee the early part of the evening.

A new auto accessory firm, to be known as the McKnight-Jones Co., has opened headquarters at Twenty-seventh and Locust streets. The company will handle a full line of automobile accessories and tires in addition to operating a U. S. L. battery service station. A 24-hour recharging system has been installed and a battery will be furnished the owner free while the original is being charged.

The company has also been appointed distributer for the Gasoscope, a gasoline gauge, which, when placed on the dash board of the car, registers the exact amount of gasoline in the tank. It is claimed that contracts have been made with the Dorris and Elcar manufacturers to place the instruments on these cars as standard equipment.

Loyal E. Jones, for many years connected with a local shoe firm, and O. F. McKnight, tailor, are organizers of the new company.

WILDGEN SUCCEEDS HUNT AT CHEVROLET FACTORY

J. F. Wildgen, formerly superintendent of the Chevrolet plant at Natural Bridge and Union avenues, has been promoted by the Chevrolet Motor Co. to the position of manager of production, left vacant last week by the resignation of J. H. Hunt.

Hunt, who has been manager of production at the local Chevrolet plant for several years, resigned his position with the General Motors Co. in order to join the Durant organization and take charge of the Hayes-Hunt Corporation recently incorporated at Dover, Del.

According to present plans, the Hayes-Hunt Corporation, which is a Durant subsidiary, will take over the large plant formerly owned by the Willys Corporation at Elizabeth and build closed bodies for the Durant and Star cars. The present production schedule set by the new company calls for 200,000 closed bodies a year, a majority of which will be for the Star car.

PROFIT OF NEARLY $1,000,000 MADE IN REALTY DEAL

Columbia Theater Co. Exercises Option to Acquire Fee to Site of Building at Sixth and St. Charles.

VALUE OF PROPERTY PLACED AT $1,185,000

Purchase Under Terms of Lease Obtained 15 Years Ago by F. R. Tate, J. E. Martin and Late L. A. Cella

By Berry Moore.

Through the purchase on Thursday of the fee to the site of the Columbia Theater Building at the southwest corner of Sixth and St. Charles streets, Frank R. Tate, Joseph E. Martin and the estate of the late Louis A. Cella, represented by Charles Cella, have virtually realized a profit of $822,500, according to real estate sources. The price paid for the fee under the provisions of a lease of the site, it is understood was approximately $362,500, while the present valuation of the site is estimated at $1,185,000. The improvements are not taken into consideration.

Fifteen or 20 years ago Louis A. Cella, Tate and Martin, composing the Columbia Theater Co., acquired a 99-year lease of the property from the late George S. Meyers of the Liggett & Meyers Tobacco Co. The lease provided for an annual net rental of $14,500, according to real estate men, and gave the lessee the privilege of purchasing the fee on a basis of the rental. Formerly all 99-year leases of sites in the central business district, were made on a 4 per cent basis net to the lessor, exclusive of taxes, and it is assumed that the price paid by Tate, Cella and Martin was $362,500, with the rental provided for in the lease being at the rate of 4 per cent on that price.

Description of the Site.

The site has a frontage on Sixth street of 75 feet by a depth on St. Charles street of 123 feet. The price mentioned as having been paid for the fee, which gives absolute ownership of the property, is at the rate of $15,000 a foot for the Sixth street frontage.

The same interests, through the Columbia Theater Co., recently purchased from Charles Bates, an attorney, 26x123 feet on Sixth street, south of and adjoining the site of the Columbia Theater. This purchase was also made under the provisions of a 99-year lease, providing for an annual net rental of $9000.

The purchases give the Columbia Theater Co. a total frontage on Sixth street of 103 feet by a depth on St. Charles of 123 feet, and form one of the most alluring sites in the central retail district. The purchasers have disclosed no plans for displacing the present improvements of the site with a building commensurate with its value and importance as to location.

Another Deal Under Way.

Negotiations have been practically concluded for the purchase of the northwest corner of Seventh and Locust streets by a syndicate which has plans for its improvement with a towering office structure. Paul Jones Jr. of the Paul Jones Realty Co. is conducting the negotiations.

The site has a frontage of 127 feet on Locust street by a depth of 164 feet. The site originally was intended for a home for the First National Bank, its present owner.

Two years ago the Famous-Players-Lasky Corporation, photo producers and distributors, acquired through F. L. Cornwell, who at that time was its counsel, an option to purchase the site for $1,250,000, with plans for the erection there of a combination motion picture theater and office building, but the City Plan Commission declined to approve the project as in violation of the zoning ordinance. Cornwell is now one of the principal owners of the Delmonte Theater and Building.

The site is just east of the Mercantile Trust Building at Eighth and Locust streets, which embraces half of a block, extending from Locust to St. Charles street.

W. K. Roth Opens Realty Office.

Will K. Roth has gone into the general real estate business on his own account at 618 Chestnut street. He formerly was associated with Papin-Tontrup, Noble-McCawley and Campbell-Jones.

Grand Avenue, Bates to Carondelet Park

CIVILITY CIVIC PRIDE

ST. LOUIS, MO. Nov. 17, 1922

Federer-Arendes Realty Co.,
2610 Gravois Ave.,
St. Louis, Mo.

Gentlemen:

We have been informed through local papers in St. Louis, that your firm is contemplating opening a Sub-Division, on Grand Avenue, just north of Carondelet Park.

We wish to say for mutual interests, that the United States Bus Transit Corporation will operate over one hundred (100) buses in St. Louis, on and after April 1st, 1923, and it is our intentions to run one of these lines north and south on Grand Avenue to Carondelet Park.

Buses will be run at regular intervals, and will be of the same type as the buses now used by the Fifth Avenue Coach Company of New York.

We will transfer from our North and South line on Grand Avenue to our East and West line on Washington Avenue, hence a passenger boarding bus at your Sub-Division can secure transportation for one fare, to the down town district. The fare will be ten cents (10¢).

You are at liberty to give this some publicity as it will be to your mutual benefit. Inform the people of our intentions.

Yours very truly,

AB:EH

ANSWERS TO QUERIES

The Post-Dispatch reserves the right to reject any query. Personal and telephone calls, or answers by mail, cannot be given attention, except letters on medical questions of undoubted sincerity, when accompanied by stamped addressed envelope.

M.—The Arabs are of the Semitic race and are of the Mohammedan religion.

HIRAM.—We do not know the lodge affiliations of the Englishmen mentioned.

ANXIOUS.—The David Ranken Jr. School of Mechanical Trades has evening classes in engineering.

A READER.—A school instructing those who stammer is located at 808 South King's highway.

C. Mc.—The coin is a Spanish coin, but we cannot identify it or determine its value. Take it to a coin dealer.

ST. CHAS.—There is no premium on the $5 gold piece of the year 1847. The dollar gold piece dated 1853 is worth $1.50 to $1.75.

K. G.—Recent quotation of the mark placed it at .01¼c. At this price if you sent $10 to Germany it would be worth there 12,500 marks. The "Order of the Red Men" is a fraternal organization.

A SUBSCRIBER.—For information regarding the adoption of a child call Miss Hertha Miller, General Secretary of the Children's Aid Society, Vanol Building, Olive and Vandeventer.

K. Q. H.—The poem, "The Three Bugs," was written by the sisters, Alice and Phoebe Cary. 2. There is such a wide range of English and American poetry and such an abundance of style, that it would be difficult to choose seven poems and acclaim them as the greatest. Different poets have different modes, each possessing its peculiar merit so that the choice would be a matter of taste and opinion of the reader. Specimens of poetry of different centuries show how the human thought varies in its liking and turns from one style to another.

E. V. S.—To tan skins cut off useless parts and soften the skins by soaking in warm water. Scrape away the fatty part from the inside, then soak the skins in tepid water for two hours. Mix equal parts of borax, saltpeter and Glauber salts (sulphate of soda), about one-third of an ounce to each skin, with water to make a thin paste. Spread with a brush over the inside of the skin applying more on the thicker parts than on the thinner. Double the skins together, flesh side inward, and place in a cool place. After standing 24 hours wash the skin clean and apply the following mixture in the same way as before: One ounce of sal soda, one-third ounce borax, two ounces hard white soap, melted slowly together without coming to a boil. Fold together again and put in a warm place for 24 hours. Then dissolve three ounces alum, seven ounces salt, one and one-half ounces saleratus in sufficient hot rain water to saturate the skin. When cool enough not to scald the hands, soak the skin in it for 12 hours, wring out and hang up to dry. When dry give a soaking and drying two or three times until the skin is sufficiently soft. Last, smooth the inside with fine sandpaper and pumice stone.

LEGAL INFORMATION.

(By a Member of the St. Louis Bar Association.)

BOBBY.—No, the marriage license cannot be used outside of the State in which it was issued.

EX-SOLDIER.—The person does not need a chauffeur's license unless he is driving the car for pay or as a business.

40-YEAR READER.—The lawyer does not get any of the interest on the judgment unless he and the client have made an agreement providing that the interest shall be part of his fee.

MORTGAGES.—If the mortgage is on record you are reasonably safe, as you can foreclose on the land at any time. You cannot sue the new owner as he did not sign the notes, but you can foreclose on the land and can also sue the old owner.

YOUNG MAN.—One division of the Court of Criminal Correction has jurisdiction over misdemeanors and violations of the city ordinances, and the other division gives preliminary hearings in felony cases. The felony cases are tried in the Criminal Divisions of the Circuit Court.

HEART-BROKEN.—There will be further dividends paid to Meramec Trust Co. depositors, but we cannot say when they will be paid. If you do not want to exchange your Union Electric preferred stock, the company will redeem at $105 per share and accrued interest up to Dec. 12.

CRUSHED.—In Indiana, if the father had died without leaving a will and without leaving any legitimate children, the illegitimate child would inherit the estate, as the father, during his lifetime acknowledged the child to be his. But as he left legitimate children, the illegitimate child in this case cannot inherit.

S. P. C.—The best thing for you to do is obtain a divorce. If your wife is still living, you are still married to her and she will have an interest in your estate when you die, unless you get a divorce from her. Her seven years' absence unheard from would protect you from prosecution for bigamy if you marry again, but if she turns up later you would be out of luck, so the thing to do in this case is get a divorce.

EX-SERVICE MAN.—Ex-service men and others can "homestead" public land. Ex-service men are given credit for their service during the war, it being counted as part of the period of residence required. Write to the Commissioner of the Public Land Office, Department of the Interior, Washington, D. C., for further information. The Red Cross in the Equitable Building, Sixth and Locust streets, and the Veterans' Bureau, 6801 Delmar, can probably give you information, also.

K. Q. H.—The Federal income tax must be paid in two parts, a one-fourth installment, on March 15; The State income tax must be paid in full on May 31. State income tax returns must be made not later than March 1 and Federal income tax returns not later than March 15. Blanks for the State returns can be obtained from the Collector at the city hall and for the Federal from the Collector of Internal Revenue at the Custom House, Ninth and Olive streets.

MEDICAL QUESTIONS

Health and sanitation questions of public interest only will be considered. Diagnoses or treatment of individual cases will not be given.

J. E.—SPRINGFIELD.—You should consult a throat specialist. It is evident that no one can tell you what condition exists without looking at it.

X. Y. Z.—Superfluous hair may be removed permanently by destroying the hair root with the electric needle. Temporarily it may be removed by any of the preparations for that purpose on the market.

MRS. DISCOURAGED.—You are on the "right track" if you are under the care of a physician who is competent. You should have a careful physical examination of the chest.

HARRY.—We can hardly advise how serious an operation is unless we know what the operation is to be. An operation in the nose, however, is not likely to be a serious operation. Such operations are often necessary in ear troubles.

E. L. B.—If you are not able to pay go to one of the tuberculosis clinics or to Koch Hospital for consultation. Consult the clinic at 1601 South Fourteenth street and have the doctor advise you whether it is likely a stay at Koch Hospital would benefit you. Do not smoke.

ARSEN LUPIN.—Arsenic is a metal, but metals are found in vegetable life. We do not know whether the grape fruit tree contains any. Prolonged eating of grape fruit in some people disturbs digestion; which is said to be caused by the fruit being picked green instead of when it is ripe.

P.-D. READER.—Different manufacturing firms use slightly different dilutions for their vaccums. The vaccine is sterile in sterile glass ampules ready for use in a sterile hypodermic syringe. It is injected either into the tissue or into the vein. The skin of course must be surgically clean when the injection is made.

INTERESTED.—Anthrax (malignant postule) is a fatal infectious disease of cattle and sheep, due to the bacillar theory and characterized by the formation of a hardened swelling or ulcers, or both, at the point of inoculation, with symptoms of marked systemic disturbance and collapse. The baccili may be transferred from the hides of infected animals to man, through an abrasion of the skin. Anthrax in man as well as in animals is a most formidable disease, often resulting in death even with treatment. There is now an anti-anthrax vaccine which is of great value if used early.

When we meet on yonder shore;

Then from you we part no more.

MOTHER.

In loving memory of our dear mother, Dorothea Sandermann, who died Dec. 12, 1921.

Gone in the best of her days,
Blighted in womanhood's bloom;
Torn from the hearts who loved her,

God marked you when he gave you birth,
And took you with a smile.

SHOOTS DUCK BANDED TO TRACE WANDERINGS

W. H. Sanders Kills Bird Tagged With Biological Survey Identification Mark.

A mallard drake shot by Walter H. Sanders, an attorney in the National Bank of Commerce Building, Tuesday, Dec. 5, which had on its leg an aluminum tag stamped "Biol. Surv. 101319," supposed to mean Oct. 13, 1919, was one of 13 ducks caught and banded at Cuivre Island, near Peruque, Mo., by Joseph Pulitzer, on Jan. 11, 1922. The number on the aluminum band around the bird's leg does not refer to a date, but is one of a series of band numbers stamped on these bands by the Biological Survey at Washington for the purpose of identifying birds which have been banded by sportsmen who collaborate with the Survey in the effort to trace the wanderings of migratory birds. The Survey supplies these bands, stamped with serial numbers on one side and the abbreviation "Wash." on the reverse. Persons banding ducks or other birds send in a list of the numbers on bands so used, and these numbers are placed on record by the Biological Survey, which notifies the bird bander whenever one or more of his banded birds is shot, with the date, location and other particulars, such information being the sole reward for his efforts in behalf of science.

Began Experiment Last Fall.

Pulitzer began the experiment of banding wild ducks in the fall of 1921, first at Lake Narraguagus, near Franklin, Maine. Here, on Sept. 26, six ducks were banded. On Sept. 30, ten more were banded. Of the 16, four were shot by hunters, two within a few miles of the trap, one at Cape May, N. J., and one at Silva, Va., On Oct. 17. 20 ducks were banded. On Oct. 21, 14 were banded. And on Oct. 25, 28 more were banded. Two of these were shot in Maine, and one in Maryland.

Later on, at Cuivre Island, on Nov. 21, four ducks were banded, and one on Dec. 9, of which none appears to have been killed.

On Jan. 2, 1922, the trap at Cuivre Island was in charge of Van Walton, the club's superintendent, who showed great enthusiasm over the experiments. That day he trapped and banded 11 ducks; one the next day, and no less than 33 mallards, all under the net at the same time, on Jan. 7. The next day he caught and banded 30, two of which had each a leg missing, probably as the result of being shot at some time previously. On Jan. 11, the ducks were more wary, but after a two-hours' wait, Van Walton caught and banded 13 mallards, one of which was shot Sept. 30 at south end of Lake Manitoba, 65 miles north of Winnipeg, Man. On Jan. 12, the number was only five, 40 being turned loose for lack of bands. One of the five banded was shot Nov. 23 at Yankeeton, S. D. All the ducks were fat and heavy. They were getting so used to the trapping experiment that, after being turned loose they came back and settled down. Jan. 19, with a new supply of bands, 27 mallards were caught and banded.

Van Walton on Jan. 30 caught and banded 27, in two springings of the trap, one hour and 20 minutes apart. Some of those trapped had already been banded, and were of course turned loose. There were about 500 feeding around and at the baited trap. The work was continued on Feb. 16, when only 7 were banded.

Other Returns Reported.

Of these ducks banded at Cuivre Island between Nov. 21, 1921, and Jan. 30 1922, besides the one killed by Sanders, mentioned above, there were three other returns reported by the Biological Survey. One was shot near Beardstown, Ill., one at Russell, Ark., and one was found dead in the Wabash Railroad yards at East St. Louis.

In the fall of 1922 Pulitzer continued the experiments in Maine, over 200 having been caught and banded in September and October. Up to date, 18 of these ducks have been reported as shot, the bands having been received by the Biological Survey. All except two were shot in Maine, not far from the place where they were banded. One was killed at Barnegat City, N. J., and one at Ocean City, Md. Frank Thompson, who did the trapping and banding from Oct. 1 to Nov. 8, found that many ducks came back to the trap after being banded and liberated, and were recaught, some more than once.

BETWEEN "$500-$1000" PAID FOR ONE SQUARE INCH OF LAND

Elusive Bit of Earth at Last Becomes Part of 219-Acre Farm of William Sacks.

One square inch of land cost William Sacks between $500 and $1000, but he had to buy it to get all the 219-acre Tesson farm, Smith and Clayton roads, which he recently bought from Joseph L. Wyland.

A man who owned the farm many years ago, he explained yesterday, chose to retain the square inch when he sold the farm, for some involved reason connected with a mortgage he had given on the property. Subsequent sales of the farm, of course, did not include the one inch.

Sacks said that while the title to the rest of the land was clear, a deed bearing an exception of one square inch wouldn't look right to him, and so he consulted his attorneys and at their direction went through a series of transfers of the 219 acres without the inch and the inch without the 219 acres, finally getting possession of the elusive inch at a price "between $500 and $1000."

CHAUFFEUR IS ORDERED HELD

Coroner's Jury Charges Carelessness in Fatally Injuring Man.

Andrew Kehoe, 21 years old, an unlicensed chauffeur, who was driving a truck which last Monday fatally injured Jeremiah Harrington, 64, of 4028 North Eleventh street, yesterday was ordered held by a Coroner's jury on a charge of criminal carelessness.

A policeman testified that Kehoe, who was driving a truck for the John F. Corrigan Plumbing Co., 2501 St. Louis avenue, ran into Harrington at the intersection of Twenty-second street and St. Louis avenue. The officer alleged that the accident could have been avoided. Harrington was a city street sweeper and was engaged in his work at the time. Kehoe was released on $5000 bond.

BLIND MAN VICTIM OF THE LAW'S DELAY

Case of Joseph Sommer, Who Lost Sight in Quarry Blast 6 Years Ago, Must Be Retried.

An example of the law's delay is presented in the case of Joseph Sommer, 7137 Vermont avenue, whose sight was destroyed in an explosion six years ago, and who, after being awarded $25,000 damages, has been informed that his suit must be retried.

Sommer was permanently blinded in the premature discharge of a dynamite blast in the St. Louis County quarry of the Continental Portland Cement Co., where he was employed, on Aug. 26, 1916.

He filed suit in the Circuit Court a short time after the accident, but the case was not heard until three years later. In October, 1919, a jury awarded him damages in the sum of $25,000. He had sued for $50,000.

Motions for another trial were filed by the defendant and finally, in last March, an appeal was taken to the Missouri Supreme Court. On Aug. 28 the Supreme Court reversed the jury's decision and ordered the case retried on the ground that the trial Judge had erred in one of his instructions to the jury. Motion for a rehearing by the Supreme Court was heard and last Wednesday the motion was denied, and the case was sent back to the Circuit Court.

Meanwhile, Sommer, who was getting $2.20 a day before the accident, has been unable to work and has been trying to eke out an existence for himself and family by peddling shoestrings. He goes from door to door and seldom makes more than 75 cents a day. The highest he has made in a single day was $1.25.

His family consists of his wife and three daughters, the youngest of whom was born four months after he lost his sight. The eldest girl, Marie, who is 14, is employed washing tiles for a tile company. She receives $6 a week.

In addition to this the only other income of the family is $6 a week for 13 weeks each year received by Sommer from a fraternal society which he joined years ago.

"And now, just when I had hoped that financial relief was at hand, I learn that my case must be tried over again," said Sommer. "That is too bad. It probably will mean several years more before I get justice.

"Cold weather is coming and it will be no use then for me to peddle shoestrings. People will not open their doors for a blind man in cold weather.

"But the family is still together, and we should be thankful for that. Last January my wife broke down beneath the strain of trying to make ends meet. Marie cared for her and then became ill herself. The other children contracted diphtheria. Marie just recently left her bed and immediately returned to work. She goes to a continuation school once a week and attends night classes at Grover Cleveland High School."

CITY ART MUSEUM OBTAINS THREE NOTABLE PAINTINGS

One, Portrait of Herself, Given by Mrs. Jonathan Rice—Others Donated by Edward Mallinckrodt.

In its acquisition yesterday of a portrait presented by Mrs. Jonathan Rice of 3733 West Pine boulevard, and two portraits given by Edward Mallinckrodt of 16 Westmoreland place, the City Art Museum gains three paintings which have a distinguished sponsorship.

Mrs. Rice was advised by John Sargent, American portrait painter, to go to London and engage Sir James Shannon, noted British artist, to do her portrait. The painting, done last summer, is a large canvas showing Mrs. Rice seated in a chair.

THE FLAPPER OF TOMORROW

HASKELL COFFIN, artist-illustrator, portrait painter and most adroit creator of magazine covers, has pastelled this lovely Diana of today. He presents her as the new classic girl type evolving from the smart but eventually tiresome flapper. "Flappers are pretty, mayhap; but if they will only quit bobbing their hair, and let a shade of serious thought steal over their vivacious features and give depth to their lustrous eyes, they can become really beautiful women."

So Haskell Coffin says, and he can prove it.

"I never get an inspiration from a bobbed-hair model," declares this artist, "but give me a girl with the crowning glory of picture-plastic hair and I can transform her into a dozen contrasted types of beauty simply by changes of coiffure. Yes, the girl of 1923 will be quite different from the one we have called the flapper—much to my relief."

Secrets of Old Poisons Baffle Science

By E. H. SMITH

Dispersal of great European collections of Jewelry recalls the days when Kings and dictators maintained official poisoners—What fluids were secreted in toxiferous rings so powerful that they caused instant death?—History of poisons as long as the history of man, but modern chemists are unable to discover the nature of lethal substances used by the Borgias

IN ZURICH the other day the public attention was distracted from the plans of Max Oser and his Mathilde long enough to examine a poisoning case which contains a curious and perhaps a sinister interest for Americans. A Swiss antiquary and collector had bought in Turin a curious serpentine ring of the Renaissance period, which is guaranteed to have been made at the end of the fifteenth or the dawn of the sixteenth century. The new owner of the trinket wore it home from Italy and arrived in Zurich with a badly swollen and infected arm.

The ordinary and perhaps the correct explanation was immediately offered by the man's physician, namely, that the ring had been too tight, had caused a blood stoppage and eventually an ulceration of the finger, from which the pus condition had spread to the arm. The victim responded to treatment and recovered. Later he declared that he was not satisfied with the explanation of his illness and caused an examination of the ring to be made by experts. It was found that the head of the golden serpent of which the ring was formed was hollow and large enough to contain several drops of fluid. Moreover, the inner side of the ring under the serpent's head contained tiny sharp points of metal, possibly designed to cut or prick the skin of its wearer. In addition, there was disclosed a minute hole in the center of these fine metal points, through which a fluid in the head of the serpent might have seeped, like the venom through a serpent's tooth, into the fine abrasions of the skin.

The imaginations of the antiquary, his friends and the public were immediately fired to visions of Borgian poisoning plots and strange medieval crimes. Perhaps the ring was one of those made for Alexander VI or Caesar Borgia and used for the destruction of their enemies and rivals. All that weird partisan history of Guicciardini was revived from its sleep, and everyone who had bought any of the antique jewelry and art objects which have lately been flowing out of Italy began to examine his treasure with a new and terrified interest.

Was it possible that a ring, imprisoning one of those subtle and unexplained poisons of the Renaissance, had survived 400 years and come by some strange machination of the fates to exert its evil potency upon an innocent dabbler in antiques? The student of toxicology will find irreconcilable difficulties in the way of accepting this romantic story, yet the explanation seems to have gained the credence of the Swiss police authorities and several men of scientific standing, who were asked to examine the patient and his ring.

The whole account of poisoning by means of minute quantities of some mysterious drug or venom concealed in pieces of jewelry long ago raised a question which is still open to serious debate. Even modern chemistry, with its thousandfold advance over the Borgian age, would likely find it difficult to make such a ring for any modern tyrant who might arise and wish to treat his friends in the fifteenth century manner. We do not know even today of any poisons which might be practically applied in this manner and with mortal results. Naturally, we doubt whether the comparatively ignorant late Middle Ages knew more. On the other hand, the accounts of these ancient poisonings are so convincing that the most cautious investigator finds it impossible to discredit them. Poisoning was a great and much cultivated art in Europe for 1500 years. Popes and Emperors either employed their official poisoners or encouraged the sinister artists and used their products. Again, many thousands of alchemists and magicians were at work through centuries of history, making strange experiments and, it may be, profound discoveries. Perhaps some of their knowledge was lost with other arts that mankind has forgotten. Hence the deadly ring may be left in the limbo of improbable possibilities.

To Americans a close interest arises out of the recent flow of Renaissance imports. The Italian law against the export of old art goods and objects of historical interest remains in force; but apparently there is a good deal of leakage, especially of small ornaments and the like. In addition, many families in other parts of Europe have been forced by poverty to disperse valuable collections, not only of paintings, tapestries, antique furniture and other art creations, but notably of old jewelry. The bulk of Russia's crown jewels appears to have remained in the hands of the new Government, but countless rich and noble families in every European country have been compelled to throw their ornaments on the market, and these have found their way not only to America, but to the Latin countries in South America and even to China, Siam, Australia and the Indian Islands. It is interesting to note that these disgorgements of hoarded jewels were so extensive as to depress the American and European diamond market for nearly two years, beginning in the summer of 1920, and this in spite of the closing of the African mines by the De Beers syndicate, in the hope of maintaining the high war prices.

New York dealers are just now displaying unusually interesting collections of antiques, and, because of the great vogue of the resplendent Italian period, there is almost a preponderance of Renaissance goods of every kind, including much jewelry and personal ornament. Accordingly, it is not beyond the realm of the possible for the experience of the Zurich collector to be repeated in this country.

All this leads us back, once more, into the fascinating mystery of the poisons and poisoners of these specious and forbidding times. It takes us back much further, in fact, to the very beginnings of the use of poisons by humanity. Two things are not too easy to picture—the great antiquity of the employment of poisons and the fact that the poisoner, now an abominable monster, was once the master and king of men.

At a great banquet Locusta did away with Britannicus for Nero, and was lavishly rewarded by the Emperor.

And later, even within modern times, the ruin of great potentates.

The most primitive peoples on the earth know use poisons, usually in warfare and religious The savage tribes of the unconquered Amazon land make darts for their blow guns which are in vegetable poisons and serpent venom. The on Mindanao, in the Southern Philippines, pleasant habit of planting in the tangled jungle sharpened bamboo sticks, the points of which been dipped in a poison extracted from the stin Our soldiers stumbled upon these savage defenses suffered extreme tortures from the slight wounds or died if prompt medical attention was not at

But the Amazonian and the Moro are compara far advanced over the stage in which man came to employ poisons. Anthropologists consider that use of animal poisons, such as both these tribes came thousands of years later than the first employment of noxious vegetable extracts. The latter probably first employed in rites and in battle by medicine men and shamans of neolithic and paleolithic times, and these prehistoric alchemists became the first Kings through their dark knowledge. It is not hard to imagine the power such individuals must have exerted over savage men when they were able to throw rebels into convulsions at their feet or put personal enemies to death without a blow, or the spears and arrows of their tribes with a mysterious substance that turned foes into corpses at a touch.

The Greeks appear to have been most familiar with these vegetable extracts. Theophrastus mentions aconite. Socrates drank the potion of hemlock, and it is fairly certain that the Hellenes knew most of the common vegetable poisons of the modern pharmacopoeia—the foxglove from which we make digitalis, the oleander, the belladonna-yielding nightshade, the Strychnos, black hellebore, thorn apple and poppy. They also knew the sulphides of arsenic.

The Romans were acquainted with some of the mineral poisons as well as mineral drugs of lethal

INNERMOST THOUGHTS of WOOER AS HE PLANNED MURDER AND SUICIDE

The self-dissection of a human soul is seen in remarkable message written by London bank cashier who, disappointed in love, kills successful rival and himself — Determined upon crime many months in advance, set date, worked on confession to Coroner night after night for two weeks —The girl, a pretty typist, had spurned him, and he wrote that life without love is, in a sense, hypocrisy :: :: :: ::

MISS EDITH MARY FERGUSON.

THE inmost emotions of a disappointed lover resolved firmly upon murder and suicide were expressed quite vividly in a long message found in the pocket of a London bank cashier who recently killed his successful rival and himself.

"This letter," said the Coroner, "is one of the most remarkable self-revelations of human nature ever read in any Coroner's court."

The letter, addressed to the Coroner, is almost of book-manuscript length, and it was written with the calm deliberation and the careful method of an author who sits down to indite a novel or a play. In 67 handwritten pages, the composition of an educated man, Lindsay Lindsey, 36 years old, laid bare his soul. He wrote it, he stated in the document, after banking hours, when he could collect his thoughts, the work occupying an hour or two each night for two weeks. Many months earlier, he confessed, he had made up his mind to kill Archibald Grey, a youth of 21, who was a clerk in the same bank, and himself. He had set the date of the murder and suicide. He wrote feverishly, yet by no means incoherently, to finish his task before the day of the double tragedy.

Moving from luxurious bachelor's quarters to a room in a middle-class hotel, he provided himself with writing materials. Each evening, his day's duties at King's Bank in Pall Mall being finished, he retired to his room, ordered a fire laid and, locking himself in, sat down to his extraordinary task of literary endeavor. Page after page of manuscript he turned off, jealously guarding the uncompleted work from other eyes. His handwriting was distinct, evincing excellent penmanship. No sign of trembling fingers did the chirography show. In the entire manuscript was no indication of the tremendous feelings that must have surged within the desperate man's brain. From beginning to end, the message gave evidence of having been written by one who weighed the force and calculated the effect of each word. Considering all the circumstances, Lindsey's farewell to the world is without precedent in the annals of morbidity, eroticism and criminology.

This final message and the other evidence at the inquest showed Lindsey to have been an amorous egoist, who, failing in his quest for an honorable love, had sought solace in what the Coroner termed "a life of debauchery in which he, on his own confession, lost his self-respect."

Lindsey's letter bore date of Oct. 24, the day he began its composition. On Nov. 7, just two weeks later, the missive was signed and sealed. That day, late in the afternoon, the crime was committed. Complete consummation of the criminal purpose set forth in the long document proved quite conclusively that, however lacking in normal sanity the man was, Lindsay Lindsey uttered no idle ravings when he wrote to the Coroner.

The third and the most pathetic figure in this triangle is Miss Edith Mary Ferguson. She is 19 years old and is a typist and stenographer in the bank where Lindsey and Grey were employed. Both men were in love with her. She had accepted the attentions of young Grey and had spurned those of Lindsey. Miss Ferguson and Grey had been sweethearts for more than a year. The girl loved him, she had given him assurance that when she was 20 years old she would become engaged to him.

Edith Ferguson is a pretty girl, with dark hair, deep blue eyes and rosy cheeks—a most attractive representative of the middle-class English city maiden who goes daily to business, lives with her parents in sheltered surroundings, and has a mind as well as an income of her own. She is described as a high type of the common-sense young woman, nothing flapperish about her, yet fond of amusement of the proper sort. Prudent, serious of purpose, sensible, she looked forward to a life of happy companionship with the young man she loved and who was devoted to her.

Archie Grey had only his moderate salary. Lindsay Lindsey, who had been with the bank 16 years and drew a salary much larger than Grey's, had fallen heir to an estate of considerable value. He had the reputation of being a good business man, and his financial prospects were bright at the time he met Edith Ferguson.

"Grey's just a poor devil and always will be," he told the girl, flaunting before her eyes his own financial standing and promising future.

Nevertheless, Edith Ferguson preferred Archie Grey. She was intensely loyal to him. Time and again she told Lindsey to go his way and cease to interfere between the young lovers.

Lindsey, having grown intensely jealous of Grey, tried all sorts of ways whereby he might gain the favor of the girl. He sent her, anonymously, a gold bracelet wrist watch. Edith told Archie about the watch.

"I know who sent it—Lindsey," the youth was quick to say.

Lindsey wrote her several letters, though at the time Miss Ferguson was taking dictation from him as a part of her duties at the bank. His unwelcome attentions caused her, after a few months, to request release from this work. She was transferred, so that no longer was she in such close daily business association with the man she had come to dislike and almost to fear. One of Lindsey's letters, written in May, 1921, read:

"Dear Little Lady: I am asking for a rebuff in writing this, but I am going away for three months, and wish to offer an explanation of my conduct for the past week. I believe you have been willing to give me another chance to seek your company. . . . I have been such a miserable devil that it is a wonder you put up with me for so long as you did. I have been much run down for some time past, and falling in love with you has made me worse. It is a great pity that such a lovely creature as yourself should inspire depression in a man. . . . You are, darling, the most charming girl I have ever met, and there is nothing in the world I would not do for you. Yours sincerely. LINDSAY LINDSEY."

Some time later she received another letter which, she testified at the inquest, virtually asked her to become engaged to Lindsey.

"Did you give him an answer over the telephone?" inquired the Coroner.

"I think that was what it was."

"And did you reply, 'No'?"

"Yes."

Miss Ferguson testified that Lindsey followed her about. He sought her company for the theater, which she declined. Once, early in the affair, she went out to lunch with him. Presently she did all she could to avoid him. One day he met her on a train and tried to renew the acquaintance.

"I said, 'No, it is impossible,'" she testified, "and I asked him to promise on his honor that he never would interfere with Archie or me again. He said he never would interfere with Archie any more."

Early last spring Miss Ferguson wrote to Lindsey declining an invitation to tea, and adding:

"It's no use, and I want nothing more to do with you. It is not fair to you and Archie, and he must have the first consideration. This must be final, and if you come to my home again it will be at my people's invitation, not mine."

On the afternoon of Nov. 7 Edith and Archie left the bank together. They met a friend named Denis Seymour. Grey suddenly remembered that he had left in his locker at the bank a book in which were his "lines" for an amateur theatrical performance in which he and Miss Ferguson were to appear.

"I'll go and get it," said Grey; "I'll be right back."

"That was the last time I saw him alive," testified the girl, who appeared at the inquest in deep mourning.

Seymour told the rest of the story of that day. After waiting some time he went to the bank to learn what was delaying Grey. Already the two bodies had been discovered in the locker room in the basement. Grey apparently had opened his locker to get the book. Lindsey, lying in wait, approached from behind. The murderer fired a bullet from a revolver into the back of Grey's head, almost tearing away the top of his skull. Then he fired one more shot, at himself, and fell dead a few feet from his victim. Seymour took Miss Ferguson to her home, revealing to her, by gradual steps, the horror of the tragedy which had blighted her life.

A WOMAN ALONE AMONG CANNIBALS

Among the wild dwarfs of Papua where human life is at its cheapest—The skeleton hanging from a tree—Walking on the bottom of Pacific with a thousand dangers at hand—The shark that chased the red bathing suit—An alligator under the bed—Keeping a light burning to scare wild boars away :: ::

THIS is the first of a series of three exceptional articles, giving the experiences of a noted woman writer among the dangers of Melanesia.

By BEATRICE GRIMSHAW

ADVENTURES in Melanesia are not regarded as adventures. The very word is discredited. No one says "adventure;" no one talks of risks. That is, in a way, bad form; after long residence in the country one feels that it is more than bad form, it is impossible to talk about "adventures." The term smells of the penny dreadful.

Things happen, they are not adventures, but they happen—unpleasantly—at times. People die in hurried and unusual ways. Serious inconveniences, such as shipwrecks, marooning on barren islands and far-off uninhabited shores, with hostile natives, attacks from sharks, or alligators, occur to traders, officials, miners. Somehow, people get through these incidents, and the tale of "adventure," when it reaches civilization, seems to lack point, because, after all, nothing happened.

The truth is that tales of adventure are always more or less pointless. They are tales of what might have occurred and didn't. The real adventure, the startling thing, is told by someone else, at second hand. Because when true adventure comes along the road you don't go back to tell.

I have never had any real adventures, though some seemed to threaten at times, and I have always been handicapped in telling such incidents by an incurable tendency to stick to the truth. Nearly all adventures need to have their edges trimmed off, their loose ends tidied up, before presentation to the public. In novels and short stories one does this as a matter of course. But in the case of a sober account of facts one does not; and truth—in spite of the proverb—is rarely as strange as fiction.

I have come near adventure a good many times. The thing that might have been—the biggest thing of all—has passed close by, often enough. I know that one day it will not pass by. One day I shall have a real adventure. But somebody else will tell it.

It might have been an adventure, when I was at Thursday Island, the center of the Australasian pearling trade, and felt so curious as to how things looked down below, that I borrowed a diver's dress and went to see for myself. Torres Straits is a perfect aquarium of strange and formidable sea creatures. There is the shark, very large and very fierce, a true tiger of the sea; there is the diamond fish, which wraps itself playfully about a diver's air tube and light-heartedly nips his life in two; there is the immense sting ray, darkening yards of water with its flat, table-like body, and swinging behind it a dagger set on the end of a rope of steel.

There is the devil fish, octopod or decapod, with its cruel, claw-and-sucker-armed long tentacles, which, once twined about the diver or his apparatus, hold until death—his or their own. There is the "Tridacna Gigas," the giant clam of the South Seas, sometimes as much as five or six feet long, which lurks, half-hidden, under weed and thick, live coral, so that a diver may touch it, unknowingly, with foot or hand, to be instantly and horribly imprisoned by the closing of the great marble shells.

There are other—unknown and unclassified—monsters of the sea, which every diver knows about and most do not care to talk of.

And there is always a chance that something might go wrong with the air tube, the life line, the helmet, the dress itself; in which case the diver's expectation of life is measured in seconds.

Any number of things might have happened on that trip. Nothing did. I was told what to do, if I saw a shark: loosen the cuff of the diving dress, so that air bubbles might run out and scare him. I was warned against stepping into holes in the coral. I was given the proper signal code, and let go.

I had a walk on the bottom of the Torres Straits, and made acquaintance with strange, bad-mannered, pushing fish—but no shark; tripped and stumbled over coral holes, but touched no Tridacnas; never saw the light of day above me fail in a sudden eclipse, as it would if a sting-ray as big as a bedroom floor were hovering round. If I had, it would have been an adventure, but, in all probability, no one would ever have known anything about it, and my good, new diving dress would have been a dead loss to the company that lent it—because no diver, white or brown, will ever again use a dress inside which someone has died.

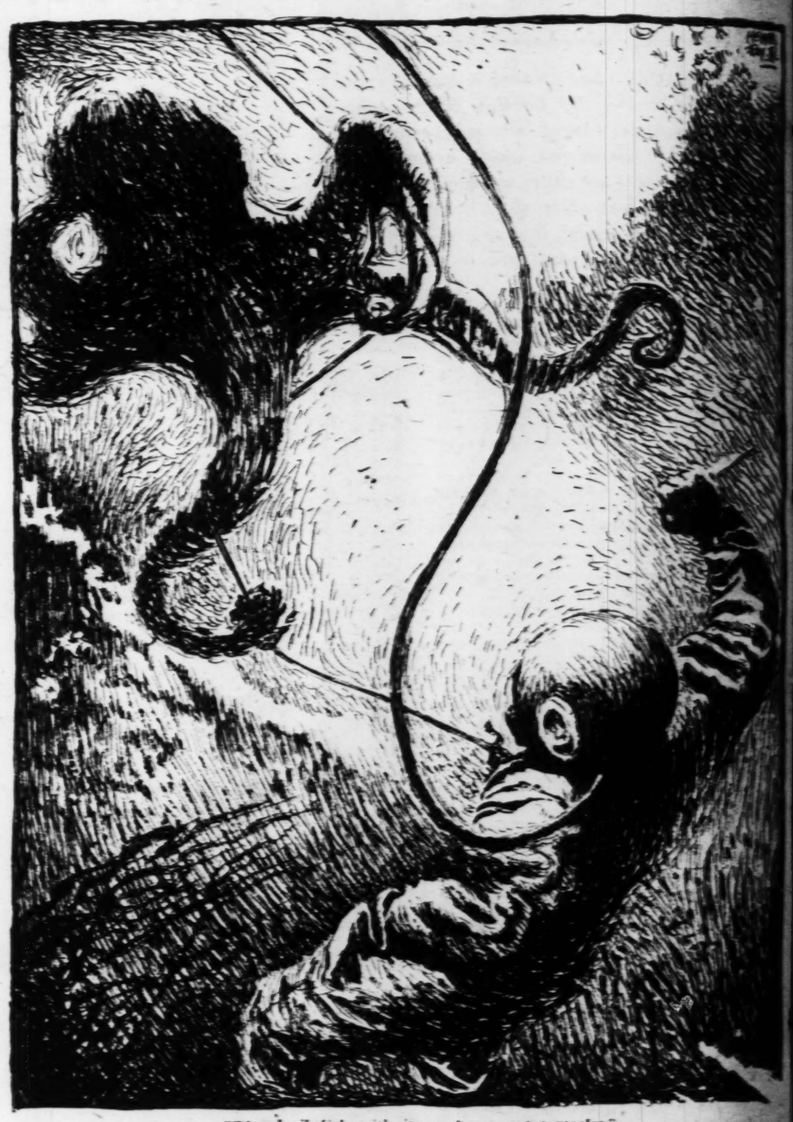
There was a swim once across a Fijian river, known to be infested with a very dangerous variety of river shark, which bit off arms and legs, and, generally speaking, made the victim of its attentions unfit for further adventures. I can remember having been more scared on that occasion than on any other in my life—but nothing got me. I have been chased by a shark with a very large and unpleasant leading fin in the lagoon of Rakahanga Island, Central Pacific, because I was foolish enough to wear a red bathing dress—but I won the race to the guarding whale-boat, and tumbled in.

I have been caught in a hurricane in a small and poorly manned sailing vessel, but the vessel also stayed. I have intruded into a New Hebrides cannibal inland town, with one white man and one black with no arms, and was very impolitely received. Perhaps the town had lately committed a murder or had a feast; took me for a spy but nobody tried to eat me. Many things that have not happened to me would make a good book in themselves, if anybody ever read such books.

I was, several times, not eaten by alligators. Many days before Port Moresby was built, when I was young, a houseboat set upon three gigantic war canoes and moored in a very lovely coral bay now fringed with tin bungalows.

In those days, the bay was what the natives called a "walk-about place belong alligator"—that is, a place where alligators seemed to meet at night for social congress. I had not known this when selecting a spot for my houseboat to be moored.

So much annoyance was caused to myself and friends by the alligators that I was obliged after very few months to move away. To reach the houseboat I had to cross a wide beach and go along a gangplank set on the stern of the boat. Usually after dark the whole place reeked of alligators—the peculiar hideous smell of mingled musk and dead-body which, once recognized for what it is, can never be forgotten.



"The devil fish with its sucker-armed tentacles."

A GRADUATE OF THE SCHOOL OF ADVENTURE.

BEATRICE GRIMSHAW has explored, probably more than any other living woman, the perilous, extensive wilderness of New Guinea. Her long sojourn in that almost undiscovered region "East of East and West of West," toward which she first made her way as a correspondent for a London newspaper, has enabled her completely to absorb its charm, as vividly portrayed in her fiction, besides giving her first hand acquaintance with the starker facts which form the fabric of these articles.

Among her best known volumes are "From Fiji to the Cannibal Islands," "When the Red Gods Call," "The Sorcerer's Stone," "Vaiti of the Islands," "Guinea Gold," "Conn of the Coral Seas" and "The Terrible Island."

Miss Grimshaw was born at Cloona, County Antrim, Ireland, and educated at Caen, France; Victoria College, Belfast, and Bedford College, London. She devoted some time to newspaper work in Ireland before receiving the assignment of the London journal to write a series of articles upon the savage islands of the Melanesia. Upon arriving there, Miss Grimshaw found herself under a spell, she confesses, which has never since been broken.

Daring Fate in Savage Melanesia

Crossing the beach, I carried a lighted hurricane lamp, which is a fair safeguard, and "once aboard the lugger" I thought myself safe. On dark spring-tide nights, with high water swirling round the boat and driving her farther in shore, my friends and I used to sit on the veranda drinking coffee and telling yarns, breaking off now and then to tell one another that there was surely an alligator swimming about under the bedroom window—the smell was not to be mistaken.

One night, alone in the boat, I was waked up by a noise that seemed to split her from end to end. It might have been a steamer siren let off under my bed, or it might have been a bull being drowned on the port side of the boat. I guessed it to be what it was—an alligator in a very big rage, just alongside. The boat had only three feet of freeboard, and an alligator can spring much more than that. I thought it the better part of valor to leave the canvas veranda screens down and keep quiet. By and by the first roar was repeated and then doubled. Two alligators were there, apparently big males engaged in a fight.

I do not know how long the fight went on; the bellowing was loud, and so near that the canvas of the blinds shook and the floor vibrated. It was very dark indeed, a nasty spring-tide night, and nobody nearer than a mile, except the alligators. They had their fight out with no interference from myself, and went away. In the morning all the mangrove bushes standing by the water near the boat had been broken down and trampled, and the smell of musk that still hung in the air was stifling.

I began to think of moving after this, and an incident that occurred somewhat later went far to decide the move. My bed—a low camp cot—was set about the middle of the boat, with one thickness of plank between myself and the underlying water, which ran up in two wide channels between the war canoes.

One night I was awakened by an odd, absurd feeling that there was somebody under the bed. I got up, lit the lamp, and looked. There was nobody—but a very strong smell of alligator came up directly from underneath the bed. I lay down again; back came the smell. Evidently an alligator of good size—they run over 25 feet in Papua—and of hungry disposition was under my bed.

No one likes alligators under the bed, even when a stout of planking separates them from the meal they plainly desire. I could hear faint movement against the floor—it might have been armored hide scraping within a handle length of my person. But there was nothing to be done till daylight. So I tried to sleep, and succeeded, more or less.

In the morning the brute had gone away. In the afternoon so had I. One night spent sleeping practically on the back of an alligator is enough.

Yet this was not an adventure—the alligator couldn't get through the plank. It was only an annoyance.

Some time later I did not have several adventures, camping along in the big main range of Papua.

The inland towns of this region are amazing places, and nothing could be less like the "beaten track" from which adventure seekers turn in abhorrence. But they are hard to reach. Tourist and travel facilities of any kind the country does not know. You must make your own way down the stormy, reef-studded coasts to the spot from which you wish to start in a hired launch or sailing vessel.

Having arrived, together with all the stores you need for the trip, and all the carriers to transport them, you camp for a night, portion out loads, and start next morning on foot. If the tribes you intend seeing are dangerous you may—or may not—ask permission from the Government to arm your carriers as well as yourself. I did not do so on one occasion, which proved to be the start of an interesting and a—somewhat—adventurous trip. I carried my own revolver; the carriers, who were picked up at a coast village, were a rather poor lot, and not fit to be trusted with firearms; also, the five days' journey into the interior lay through districts that were quiet at the time.

It is true that not long afterwards a prospector, Mackintosh by name, was killed in the same district, cooked piecemeal in his own pots, and eaten, but nothing could have been pleasanter and kinder than the treatment I met with myself.

A woman alone, being clearly no war party, is often safer than a man.

I rode a horse for part of the journey, but left him as soon as possible, since the tracks became impassable for horses and extremely risky, winding as they did up and down appalling precipices all the way.

There might have been an adventure at Deva-Deva, a village several days inland, where I camped for a night. The natives had all been the fiercest of cannibal warriors a very few years before, but were converts of the Sacred Heart Mission, and when I visited them, quite polite. They were mountain dwarfs, the men well under five feet, and the women no larger than white girls of 8 years. They wore no clothes at all—either sex—save a piece of string round the waist and a good many beads and dog's teeth round the neck.

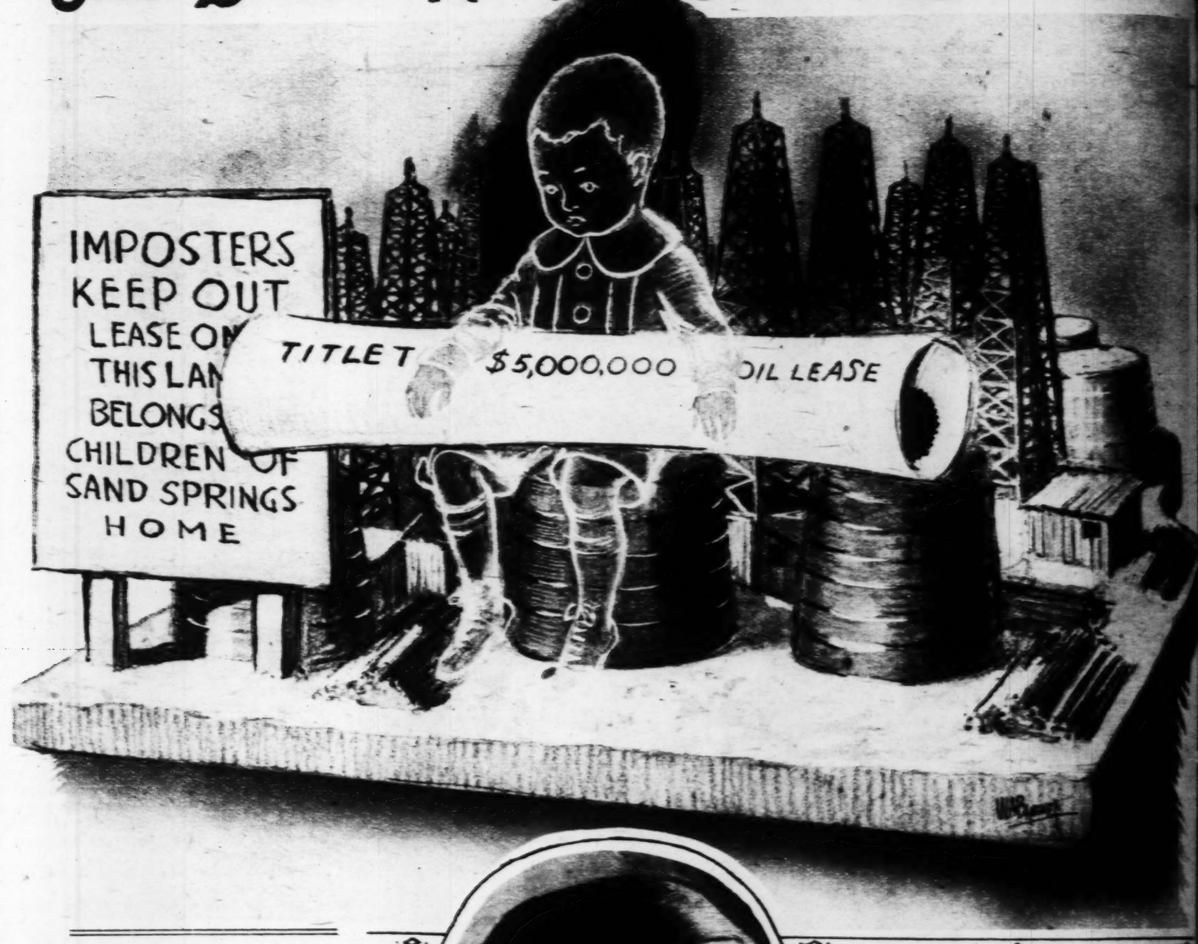
The Dead Negro Baby Who Gives $5,000



By strange turns of fortune's wheel the opulent proceeds of an Indian oil lease are diverted, through recent finding by the Supreme Court of the United States, to beneficent uses of a self-perpetuating home for dependent children in Oklahoma—Charles Page has fought for eight years to hold this property for his wards—"Tommy Atkins case" ends happily at last :: :: ::

WHEN you read the other day in brief Associated Press dispatches from Washington that "the decision of the United States Supreme Court yesterday that Thomas Atkins was the son of Minnie Atkins releases more than $2,000,000 to Charles Page, millionaire Sand Springs oil and gas man," you did not read the real story. In those dispatches you did not find mention of a dead negro baby. It is the dead negro baby that is the real hero of this story—even though that child were but a myth, as the United States Government contended for so many years.

And now, strange to say, the Government's court of last resort has reversed the Government as represented by the Department of Justice. The Supreme Court has found the dead negro baby. Nobody else could find it. Learned lawyers in Oklahoma, in other states and at Washington searched in vain. Litigants, avid for the oily feel of the pretty penny involved, tried and tried, and failed. Three women, each claiming to have been the mother of the child, tried to find it and could not. A white man in Arkansas and an Indian-negro boy in Oklahoma both made the effort, with like result. Charles Page, whose millions are in the multi list and yet are not his own, hired expensive attorneys who searched for years and years and yet failed to find the dead negro baby. Mr. Page, strange to say, is the poorest rich man in the world, as this narrative will prove. Or you may reverse it and call him the richest poor man. This unique fact is an important part of the story. Bear it in mind.

In the several-sided effort to find the dead negro baby hundreds of witnesses appeared. Charles Page, for instance, caused depositions to be taken in more than half the states of the Union. The legal profession in Oklahoma believes that there never has been a suit to quiet title in which so many depositions have been taken in so many parts of the country. The Tommy Atkins case—as such it is known—became long before its final settlement a matter of interest virtually nation wide.

CHARLES PAGE

The Supreme Court decision means that at last, definitely and for good and all, Mr. Page of Sand Springs and Tulsa has won the Tommy Atkins case. For that matter, he has won it several times already; but the opposition always got rehearings and retrials, until after tortuous progress the cause got to the last court and the poor-rich Mr. Page won out.

From the outset the one cardinal point of difficulty presented was that of finding the dead negro baby. This does not mean that it was necessary to find a tiny black corpse or a small skeleton. The job was to prove that Tommy Atkins ever existed at all. Charles Page said yes. The United States Government said no. There were other points of divergence, which would emerge as this story proceeds. If you are looking for a case comprising complications of the super order you need look no farther; the Tommy Atkins case has it. Complications cling tenaciously to every angle of it.

First off, a bit of history. The Creek Indians, one of the Five Civilized Tribes of red men that were removed many years ago from their native lands in Georgia and contiguous states to a part of what was known erroneously as "the Great American Desert." The paleface invaders coveted the homeland of the redskin aborigines. They could raise cotton down there with the basic abetment of negro slave labor. So they told the original population to get off the grounds. They even aided the getting off. The great treks to No Man's Land which comprises now the eastern half of the marvel State of Oklahoma was made. The whites looked after the reds in a paternal way, partly no doubt, to ease the paleface conscience. The transplanted Indians took root and grew, and managed somehow to grub long on the new land which the usurpers to the east figured never would be worth a white man's bother to settle.

Those five tribes created local governments, erecting a little republic within the greater republic. They were unique, interesting, remarkable, those Indian republics. Each of them was a romance, unwritten. The Creeks and the Cherokees, to name two of the five, showed special aptness for local government. They were measurably prosperous, reasonably contented, living their own lives in their own way. Then came the onsweep of the white race on the red. The white won. The white always wins in America, at any rate, nobody ever plays the red. In the closing decades of the nineteenth century the white usurper got his foothold on the Indian lands. He invaded the five little redskin republics. The lands, after all, had turned out to be fertile, not barren in any sense.

"Let us go in and possess them," said the palefaces. They went in, not only as straggling squatters and settlers, but finally, through act of Congress, as homesteaders. Beginning in the spring of 1889, strip after strip, section after section of the Indian lands was opened to white settlement. Ultimately the entire area occupied by the Five Civilized Tribes and already allotted to the Indians was opened. Indian Territory had been its title. Indian Territory became, 15 years ago, the eastern half of the new State of Oklahoma. The paleface invasion was complete. The whites had won!

But as a preliminary to the big winning something had to be done for the Indians. They could not be robbed outright by the Government that had given them a new land in obligatory exchange for their old. They must be made over into regular Americans, these, the only real Americans—they must be erected into American citizenship. That was done, and each Indian received an allotment of land in severalty. Theretofore the tribes had held their lands in common. The celebrated Dawes Commission worked in Indian Territory for several years, early in this century, alloting the lands to the individual Indians. Each individual got a certain number of acres, according to the area of the tribal republic to which the Indian belonged. The Creeks got 160 acres apiece—men, women and children alike.

Prior to the emancipation of the negroes, the Indians of the Five Civilized Tribes held slaves. Under the act providing for land allotments all freedmen and descendants of freedmen were regarded as Indian citizens, sharing equally

Prior to the emancipation of the negroes, the Indians of the Five Civilized Tribes held slaves. Under the act providing for land allotments all freedmen and descendants of freedmen were regarded as Indian citizens, sharing equally in the land.

Here is how Tommy Atkins got his—that is, the Dawes Commission alloted a quarter section of Creek Indian land to the actual or mythical person named Thomas Atkins on the population rolls of the Creek nation. Commissioner Dawes and his colleagues found Tommy Atkins there, by name, and gave him the 160 acres to which as an Indian citizen he was entitled under the provisions made and provided at Washington. He was represented on the rolls as the son of Minnie Atkins, a Creek Indian negress. As to Tommy's father, history is painfully, even perversely, noncommunicative. His father didn't figure—it was Tommy who figured. Tommy, so the record ran, had been born shortly before the dead-line date, April 1, 1899, fixed as a stop to increase in population for allotment purposes. Babies born after that date were not entitled to share in the land. Babies born before that date shared equally with their parents.

Tommy's allotment was located west of Tulsa, which in recent years has become the oil capital of the Southwest. His 160 acres lay in sections 4-18-7 and 5-18-7, in what is known now as the north extension of the Cushing oil field. When the allotment was made, that region was a wild tract, unused by civilized or savage man. A crow flying over Tommy Atkins' land would have had to carry rations or go hungry. Nobody coveted the Tommy Atkins tract. Tommy himself is supposed to have died in early boyhood, before he knew that he was a land owner. His reputed mother, Minnie Atkins, fell heir to his property.

Now let us oil the wheels of this story and move forward more smoothly. For [illegible] purposes, nobody would have given much more than a mashed copper for the Tommy Atkins tract until oil was discovered not far away. The Cushing oil field, one of Oklahoma's earliest and greatest, was opened up. Flowing gold from the earth's bowels drew thither a mob of men greedy for gain. Tall derricks, hundreds of them, thrust themselves 80 feet into the air. New derricks, it seemed, arose overnight. Engines puffed and purred. Pumps began their 24-hour spell of creaking and groaning and gurgling. Huge storage tanks—tank farms they are called in the mass—rose from the landscape, surrounded by their shallow moats to catch the crude petroleum in case of lightning striking a tank and letting its contents loose.

Just here, now, is where the dead negro baby begins to be an important person.

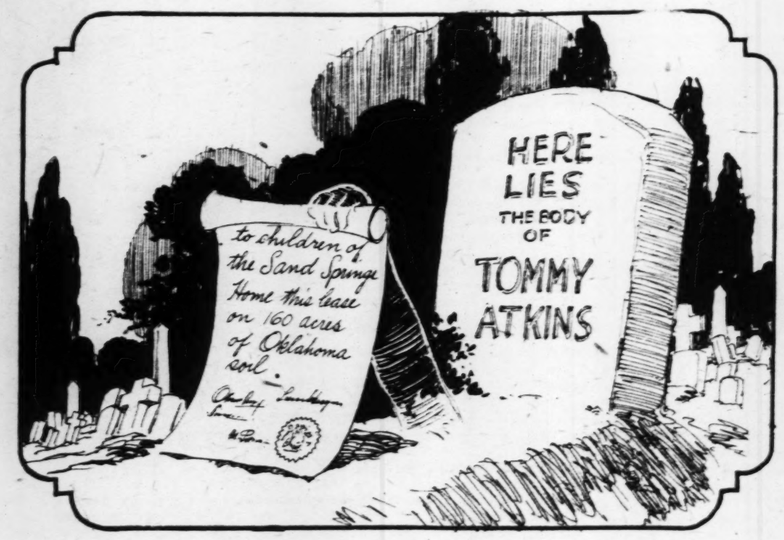
Eight years ago Charles Page, founder of the city of Sand Springs, seven miles west of Tulsa, founder of the Sand Springs Home, a mile or so east of his new town, and founder of a fortune of millions in oil, got into the game in the Cushing field. Oil prospectors and producers were grabbing up leases wherever they thought there was a favorable prospect. For a comparatively small sum Charles Page bought from Minnie Atkins the right of drilling for oil on the Tommy Atkins tract. It was a hit or miss proposition. Page might strike oil, and he might not. As it turned out, he did. Early in 1915 it was stated that the Tommy Atkins lease was producing 8000 barrels of oil a day, which meant at that time something around $16,000 every 24 hours.

Now, if you know anything about human nature, you know why Tommy Atkins became important. Tommy Atkins was dead—that is, there was no such person as Tommy Atkins at that time; there had not been for some years; there was only a vague memory, or possibly merely a tradition, of a Tommy Atkins that had been. On March 8, 1915, this news dispatch was sent out from Muskogee, Ok., seat of the Federal Court:

"A receiver for the Tommy Atkins allotment, said to be worth $1,000,000, was appointed today by the Federal Court. In this case the Government, for the Creek Nation, contends that the allotment was made to a fictitious person, and that it should be canceled and the property revert to the Creeks. An oil company has a lease on the land and is producing 8000 barrels a day. The Government made an arbitrary allotment to 'Tommy Atkins' because his name was on an old Indian roll. Now it contends that there never was such a person, while two oil companies have produced two women, each of whom claims to be the mother of 'Tommy Atkins.'"

Prior to that court action, in the autumn of 1914, the fight against the Page lease had opened. A Creek negro boy named Quentin Garrett, living on a farm near Muskogee, "jumped" the claim of Tommy Atkins. This lad, through his counsel, contended that he was entitled to an allotment and that he could select any 160 acres not already granted legally to an Indian citizen. Oil having been produced on the Atkins tract, the boy chose that quarter section, alleging that "Thomas Atkins, an alleged person of Creek Indian blood, died prior to April 1, 1899, the date upon which the allotment of Atkins was entered." Garrett asked that the patent issued to Atkins be set aside and annulled and that the land be allotted to him.

Complications collected rapidly. Garrett's attorneys declared they could prove that Thomas Atkins died too early to become an allottee. They never proved it. Proof in the Tommy Atkins case was a gay deceiver ever. Quentin Garrett was but one of several who sought to realize on the property remains of the dead—or unborn—negro baby. Several sets of alleged heirs struggled between themselves for the handsome stake. Another mother for Tommy sprang up out of somewhere, or nowhere, by name Nancy Atkins. She, not Minnie Atkins, was Tommy's mother, so she contended through her lawyers. Tommy as Nancy's son was just as dead as Minnie's own son, and consequently Nancy was entitled to inherit his estate.



It was the appearance of Nancy Atkins that caused the Government to step into the case. Certain features induced suspicion in the Department of Justice. Tommy Atkins, for one thing, had too many mothers. He had disappeared, or died, but when and where he died or how and why he disappeared was not made clear. It began to look, to the eyes of Uncle Sam, just as if somebody had put something over on the Dawes Commission away back there in 1899.

Minnie Atkins was defendant in the suit brought by the Government, but Charles Page fought the fight. Several years ago Minnie Atkins died. The Page lawyers kept the home fires burning under the Tommy Atkins oil pot. Page was convinced that there was, or had been, a Tommy Atkins and that the lease he had acquired was legitimate. Nancy Atkins, mother No. 2, lost her mind some time ago and is in the custody of a guardian. Her

ARMY OF GRANITE BEGINS ITS MILE-LONG M

Actual construction is started of Confederate memorial near Atlanta, Ga., where figures of heroic size are being carved in relief upon the vertical face of the mountain, forming a military scene of prodigious extent—Famous Generals of the "Lost Cause" will be shown leading troops into battle, while park and open air theater for 20,000 persons are other features of the project — Gutzon Borglum, the sculptor, in charge :: ::

Preliminary drawing for the principal group to be carved on the side of Stone Mountain, as a monument to the soldiers of the Confederacy.

THE greatest memorial the world has ever known—a tribute to the soldiers who fought and died for the "Lost Cause"—is being carved in the living rock of Stone Mountain, 16 miles east of Atlanta. Before the undertaking is finished, many men probably will have lost their lives, thousands of dollars will have been expended and some of the world's foremost artists will have given of their best. At last, the work has been started in earnest.

For almost a mile across the smooth, perpendicular face of this gigantic rock, all the pomp and circumstance of a nation at war will be carved.

At the head of the soldiers, leading them into battle, will be Gen. Robert E. Lee, idol of the Confederacy and one of the greatest military leaders in history. Behind him, in careful detail, will be shown Gen. "Stonewall" Jackson, Gen. John B. Gordon, Gen. J. E. B. Stewart and Jefferson Davis, President of the Confederate States of America.

Eight years will be required to complete the memorial which, besides the carving on the mountainside, includes a park of several hundred acres at the base; an open-air theater, patterned after the Coliseum at Rome and capable of seating 20,000 people, and a museum hollowed out of the mountain wherein will be deposited relics of the war, and which will be dedicated to the Daughters of the Confederacy.

The scale on which the figures are designed is indicated by the outline of Gen. Lee's head, which already has been sketched on the rock surface. The head is nine feet in height, the nose alone being two feet, while the completed figure of Lee on his charger will be more than 20 feet high. The other figures will be carved in proportion.

Gutzon Borglum, the renowned sculptor, will have complete charge of the work. Hundreds of sculptors from all over the world have written him, asking permission to assist. Borglum has donated his services. He says that he intends to make the Stone Mountain Memorial the greatest thing he has ever done.

Borglum would not allow the Daughters of the Confederacy, who originated the plan, even to pay his expenses while he is in Atlanta at work, but instead has assisted in raising funds for the expenses incidental to the work, and himself contributed. He stated recently that all the other artists who asked to be allowed to assist, simply for the distinction they will attain by having part in it, have agreed to work for nothing.

"People do not yet visualize the magnitude of this undertaking," said Borglum at a banquet in Atlanta. "It will become one of the world's classics. It will be greater than the Lion of Lucerne or the Colossus of Rhodes, and will take its place among the wonders of the world. I am happy and proud to have a part in the undertaking, and I intend to make it my life's work.

"Of course, the work will be filled with dangers. Many of the men engaged in it will lose their lives, for a false step at any time will mean instant death—yet the thought of danger only heightens my desire to overcome it. And what great work has ever been accomplished without its attendant tragedy?

"The Stone Mountain Memorial shall become a reality. It shall live as long as time itself to perpetuate the memory of those stirring days of the Civil War."

Borglum plans to do some of his work at night. For that purpose he has had designed an apparatus of powerful telescopic lense, for the projection of pictures of increased size against the huge mass of granite, by means of which, with a powerful light, ...

"Many people scoffed at this idea at first," he remarked, "but I told them they could project pictures on Mars if they could get a powerful enough light. Carving statues at night will be something new, but it is just as feasible as working in my studio at Stamford, Conn."

Work on the memorial was started in 1916, at which time sufficient money to care for all incidental expenses was raised. However, America's entry into the World War made it necessary to halt operations.

Borglum, assisted by several engineers, supervised the erection of scaffolding down the side of the mountain from the top, and after drawing the head of Gen. Lee, superintended placing it on the exact spot where he will begin to carve. He has laid out all the other principal figures.

At present he is completing a $100,000 project at Newark, N. J., to be known as the All America's War Memorial, a commission which he accepted before the work on the Stone Mountain Memorial was renewed. As soon as this has been completed, he will return to Atlanta and resume his work. He will remain there until it has been completed and the memorial is an actual fact.

That will be in 1930! For eight years of continual work will be required to complete it.

Stone Mountain itself is a natural wonder. Thousands of people annually from all over the United States visit this greatest single mass of granite anywhere in the world.

Rising 700 feet on its sheer side, where the memorial will be carved, it covers a total area of seven miles. It is one mile from the base to the summit on the approachable side. It is the largest monolith known and according to estimates it contains enough granite to pave a highway 70 times around the world.

Sam H. Venable, an Atlanta millionaire, who owns the mountain, and who has deeded the perpendicular side to the Daughters of the Confederacy for the memorial, as well as the tract of ground at its base, which will be made into Confederate Park, acquired the mountain years ago in exchange for a jenny mule. Since then he has made a fortune by selling granite from quarries located on its far side.

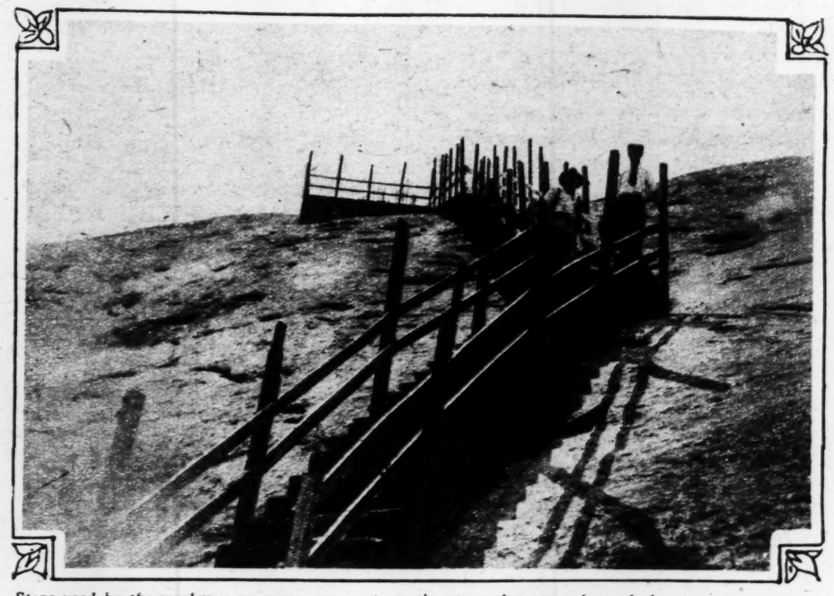
Venable has been one of the most energetic workers for the memorial and the open-air theater, and besides deeding the mountainside and ground, has subscribed liberally to the fund for completing the project. He says that unless the Daughters of the Confederacy build a hotel adjacent to the park he contemplates erecting one of the finest in the country, only a few hundred yards from the mountain, to care for the thousands of visitors to the memorial who are expected annually.

Besides the danger of falling which the stone carvers will meet in their work, there is a rumored peril of an explosion inside the mountain.

Not once, but many times, predictions have been made that Stone Mountain would become a seething volcano, and destroy all manner of living things within an area of many miles. Once a French seeress predicted that Stone Mountain would become a volcano following a disastrous earthquake which would destroy Atlanta and that for hundreds of miles around the mountain everything would be reduced to a desolate waste.

Another legend is that when Sherman's forces made their famous march to the sea they used the mountain for a secret storing place. It is claimed that hundreds of pounds of gunpowder were secreted within a cave somewhere on the mountain and so cleverly hidden that it never has been found.

"Aunt Tabbie," an aged negress who lives about a half mile from the base of the mountain, and who claims to be 105 years old, tells the tale of gunpowder to anyone who cares to listen. She says that one night during the war her husband ran into the house, shaking all over and so afraid that he was almost white.



Steps used by the workmen in passing up or down the steep, dangerous face of the mountain. Borglum says some of the men probably will fall and be killed.

"Dat nigger tole me dat he seen dem Yankee soldiers hidin' gunpowder in de mountain side and dat he heerd 'em talkin' about blowin' it up and all dis hyer part o' de country," she relates. "Me and mah old man we left outen hyer right now, but when we didn't hyer no 'splosion for several days, we come on back, and we's been right hyer ever since.

"But dese hyer white folks 'come borin' into dat mountain, dey's gwine hit dat gunpowder and blow us all to kingdom come. Ah don' like dis hyer idee of men hangin' off de top and borin' into dat rock. De good Lord didn't mean for white folks to come messin' up His creations, and Ah think dey'd better let well enough alone. Dey's enough misery in dis world anyhow, and hain't no use in dem white folks messin' up dat glorious mountain wif dere fool carvin', ain't hit gran' enough now?"

But "Aunt Tabbie's" quaint old ideas and her belief in the legend of the gunpowder have had no effect on this magnificent project.

Just as strange as the old negress' legend of Sherman's forces hiding combustibles there, are many other legends of the mountain. It is a popular belief in Atlanta and adjacent towns that Stone Mountain was once the home of a great Indian tribe and that these Indians were the only people ever able to scale the perpendicular side, whereon the memorial is to be carved.

But, so far as is known, there has never been a human being who succeeded in climbing this side. Many have tried. Some have met death, some have been able to get a part of the way up. But the trip all the way to the top of Stone Mountain can be made only by the one beaten track from the south approach. Even this has several difficult stretches which require real mountain-climbing ability.

The present-day Ku Klux Klan held its first initiation at midnight atop the mountain, and since that time has held numerous ceremonials there. It is said that in the carpet-bag days, just after the Civil War, the real Ku Klux Klan met on Stone Mountain many times.

The feasibility of the mountain as a sounding board was recently demonstrated by Marie Tiffany, the opera singer, whose voice was heard a mile away from the mountain when she sang with her back to the perpendicular wall.

Miss Nan Stephens, district chairman for five Southern states in the National Federation of Music Clubs, long has been interested in the possibilities of an open-air theater at Stone Mountain, with the mountain as a giant sounding board. Through her efforts, various tests have been made.

John Powell, the pianist, tried out the acoustics, and at one time the great Caruso made a pilgrimage to the mountain. The great tenor sang facing the mountain, at a distance of approximately 200 yards, to test the echo.

Miss Tiffany's test was the first to be made. She sang several times, and listeners stationed as far as a mile away heard her distinctly, while within a distance of 600 yards she seemed to be but a few feet away, so well did the mountain wall send forth her voice.

That test assured the building of the open-air theater. The nature of the ground at the base of the sheer side is almost ideal for a large theater. There is a natural hollow and very little blasting will have to be done to construct a stage out of the sloping approach to the mountain.

Forrest Adair, wealthy Atlanta real estate dealer, who raised the money for the theater, predicts that it will be not only the largest but the best open-air theater in the world. He predicts further that people from all over the world will come to Atlanta for the city's annual spring festival of music.

The Metropolitan Opera company of New York goes to Atlanta each year for a week's engagement, and it is expected that if the theater is completed before next spring, at least one opera will be given at Stone Mountain.

The theater is costing more than the memorial. That is because Borglum has donated his services, and so will all the other famous sculptors who assist in the work.

The Daughters of the Confederacy, who have the work in active charge, believe that the amount to be expended is trifling compared with the great value the memorial and theater will be to posterity.

A general view of Stone Mountain, and the precipitous face on which mighty memorial to Confederate soldiers will be carved. The line of figures marching into battle will extend for about a mile, carved in relief out of the living rock. Near the summit can be seen the sheds and wooden steps being used in the work.

Workmen in Rome were excavating for the foundation of a garage when they discovered ancient subterranean chamber—Of 12 large wall spaces, 11 contain figures of majestic men, in long, white, purple-bordered togas, with heads and feet bare—The 12th space, possibly for Judas, shows no trace of a painting—It is practically certain that the tomb belonged to an early Christian community :: ::

By WALLACE N. STEARNS,

Professor in the Department of Biblical Literature, McKendree College, Lebanon, Ill., who recently returned from a visit to Rome and its catacombs.

FROM Rome, city of wonders, comes another surprise. On the Viale Manzoni, where the via di Porta Maggiore opens out, workmen were excavating for foundations for a large garage. A break was made into a subterranean chamber. At once, measures were taken to hush matters so as not to be hindered in the work of construction. But people will talk and before long word reached the ears of the Department of Education. Active steps were taken and a space on the corner was reserved as public domain. At present, a temporary shedlike building has been erected and admittance is special and with the curator present, for a modest compensation, of course. Eventually, when money is in hand, a chapel will be erected, and another added to the more than 500 churches of Rome.

The chamber discovered proved to be richer than was anticipated. It is a hitherto unknown catacomb of underground Rome. Descending by a stairway the room divides into two ramps leading right and left to square chambers below. From each chamber a sloping passageway leads further. The uncertain nature of the rock renders further exploration perilous until suitable supports can be provided. Possibly this very feature led to the final abandonment of the place for burial purposes.

At once questions arise. Is this a pagan monument or is it of Christian origin? Although pirate hands have broken in and despoiled these chambers, there is much left for archeology to puzzle over. The chief interest at this time lies with the outer left-hand chamber. Twelve large spaces provide for 12 large-sized figures of men, most of them bearded and all of them dressed in long, white, purple-bordered togas, reaching below the knees. The heads are bare and covered with heavy, curling hair. The feet also are bare. Several figures are carrying books in their hands. The general demeanor as well as the faces is noble, dignified, even majestic. There are 11 of these figures; the twelfth space shows no traces of a painting, though time may have effaced it. Or was the figure of Judas omitted? These do not seem to be figures from Roman mythology, the attire and general makeup preclude such a conclusion. With two of these figures the names of Peter and Paul have become associated. The face of Peter is much like that we should expect from what we know of him and his manner of life. Of Paul we had likenesses in early art, as one from the catacomb of Domatilla, fourth century, and others from medals and communion glasses of the third century. The Pauline figure here is superb, the features are strong and noble, the eyes compel attention. The art of portraiture is of early date: the Christian world early had commonly accepted ideals of these apostles, and while these are the noblest of all, they bear certain unmistakable characteristics that may well sanction our conclusion as to identity. "There seems to be no further doubt," says Prof. Calza, "that the tomb belonged to a Christian community."

Other details tend to confirm this theory. In another arched panel sits a bearded figure, in his hands a large volume. Below him a flock of sheep and goats are feeding. This is doubtless a representation of Christ the Good Shepherd. Four times the detail of the Good Shepherd appears on the wall. There is some variation, due, perhaps, to the fact that the figures are highly idealized, that of the Christ most of all.

Burial in the catacombs ceased at the time of the invasion of Attila, 410 A. D. In the succeeding centuries frescos were added to the burial places of martyrs, but these are readily distinguished by experts from the earlier, more primitive forms. Burial was not allowed within the city limits. This was determined first by the Servian wall, later by the Aurelian wall, a mile or so further out. By Christian times this area was crowded and built over. There are no Christian cemeteries here, but it is affirmed that there are none outside the three-mile zone. All such belong to ancient adjoining villages. The present newly found catacomb lies back from the Tiber about 2500 meters, a little south and east from and about 1500 meters beyond the Coliseum. The surrounding buildings are modern, many of them new or at least rebuilt. Whatever its past may be, the neighborhood is a modern suburb on the inner edge of the third mile zone.

Within the next few years a chapel will inclose this site; altar and reredos will stand over some spot sacrosanct; candles will flicker and marbles will glisten, and sandaled fathers for a consideration will chaperone tourist parties to dim recesses below and sell souvenirs from this holy spot. From garage to shrine; from gasoline to saints, what a change of fortune!

A Painter Who Is Tired Of Beautiful Women

Instead of dainty sitters and of work in pastels, Artur Halmi says he wants to paint men in oil—The artist must idealize, he declares, for the camera can show a woman as she really is, but portraiture demands more than realism—The wishes of the subject should be "everything"

THERE is a painter in New York who specializes in portraits of beautiful women. He is a Hungarian, but for the past 10 years has been at work in the Eastern states, turning out pictures of lovely American women. Many of his patrons occupy high places socially; in fact he has been rather a fashion.

The United States has more women of pleasing appearance than any other nation, he says. Some, of course, are comelier than others. But this artist frankly sets out to make his pastels pretty, whether or no, and at the same time to produce good likenesses.

Artur Halmi, on the eve of his departure for a vacation in Paris and Munich, divulged his philosophy of art. Incidentally, he voiced his yearnings for some work in oil, and for men as sitters, rather than the eternal round of alluring femininity. He said:

"It's easy enough to make a beautiful woman out of a plain one—when you do her portrait—but ah!—to preserve a likeness, and still make a pretty woman prettier than she already is!

"When a woman comes to me for a portrait, I try to discover and bring out into strong relief the universally beautiful qualities in her face and figure. That is the task of the painter who works for his patron rather than for himself. The lady does not pay her money for a 'Halmi,' but for herself. 'This is you—the best of you—not Halmi,' I say. A camera can picture her as she really is; the artist must idealize.

"I would rather be a realist; I would rather paint a duck or a cow than a pretty face, to tell the truth, but portraiture demands more than realism. To other more 'serious' artists, the wishes of the subject are largely negligible—but for me they are everything.

"In America I find the grist for my mill most abundant. Here the women pay the most attention to their personal appearance, to the setting off of their beauty, and their beauty is one of their best qualities, and they know it.

"Think of your beauty parlors on every block! And the American woman watches herself all the time: How she walks, how she eats, what she does with her hands—it's wonderful! I can stand and look at your shopgirls for hours; it gives me a pure artistic joy. England has, yes, a few more strikingly beautiful women than any in the United States, and for depth of character one must go to the Continent, but here the general run of pleasing feminine externals is far beyond anything in any other country.

"I have been called 'clever, but superficial.' That is right, perhaps. I am not a master—not a Sargent. But Sargent is Sargent, one of the masters, a painter for art and not for his patrons. He will not shrink from putting in a wrinkle. I think of the feelings of my sitter, not of myself. Lightness, transparency, prettiness: these are the qualities that please the people for whom I work."

Halmi sighed—a deep, cavernous sigh. "Ah, it's the end of the season, and I am tired. Tired of pretty women, of light pastel sketching, which comes too easy. I want to do more men: I want to work in oils—there I can display more power, more naturalness. Men are different; they want force and realism."

Handling an immense tray of pastel crayons with a swift-fingered technique worthy of a pipe organ virtuoso, he spends day after day perpetuating delicacy and grace, and winning a reputation as a portrait painter who understands the true meaning of that calling.

Innermost Thoughts of a Murderer and Suicide

Archibald Grey, Lindsey's victim

Miss Ferguson as she appeared at the inquest, in mourning.

Lindsay Lindsey, the murderer and suicide.

Though the romance between Grey and Miss Ferguson was known to everybody at the bank and some members of the staff were aware of Lindsey's hopeless passion for the girl, nobody there ever imagined the latter to be the sort of man who could write as he did in his message to the Coroner:

"It seems to me that if one has failed to find love, one has failed in everything that matters, and to continue to live is, in a sense, hypocrisy."

Lindsey's associates testified that he was a man of quiet demeanor, rather reserved, apparently never worrying about anything. He was not strong physically. During the World War he did not go to the front, but served in the pay corps. It had been observed in recent months that he had developed extravagant tastes; also he had begun to dissipate. He rode about in high-priced taxis or limousines hired for his amusement. He had drawn $5000 from his bank account not long before his crime, and had become what is known as a "high flyer" about town. All this, as it appears from his last message, was but his way of trying to drown his sorrow because of Edith Ferguson's refusal to have anything further to do with him. Before he ended his life he had spent most of his inheritance.

The Coroner read copious excerpts from Lindsey's letter, some of which are appended—self-revelations extraordinary, as the court official said.

"The following is a brief account of the events leading up to the crime that will be committed by me shortly at Pall Mall," coolly began the message. Lindsey went on to say that it was a story of two men and a girl, with the not infrequent problem that arose from such a situation. He hungered for someone. Miss Ferguson was a charming and pretty girl. After a great deal more of this sort and of other matters not bearing altogether upon his love affair, Lindsey came to an evening shortly before he left London for his vacation in June of last year:

"That evening I thought about the matter and decided that I had better lay all my cards on the table and say all I had to say. I wrote another letter telling her it was my wish that she should be my wife. She did not reply. I had at this time started my holiday, and for a day or two I was on tenterhooks of suspense, hoping to hear from her later. I telephoned asking her to come to lunch, but she refused. She politely told me that the answer to my letter was the word 'No.' I was seized with a feeling of great loneliness, and a craving for feminine company I had never felt before.

"Realize the position in which I found myself. I had leisure and money for a long period, no companion, and a keen desire for feminine company. I was shy and diffident at that time. I decided to go up West, meet a pretty girl of some sort or other under conditions that would make an introduction easy, and take her away with me for the holiday. I do not offer any excuse for this, my first step in immoral life. I was simply crazy for the company of a girl—someone to love. Since then I have consorted with about 30 girls for longer or shorter periods.

"I returned to the office without the affection for the girl concerned having in the least abated. It is difficult for me to see her daily in the company of Grey, and the strain is rendered more difficult by his conduct. It is one of the strongest forces which have compelled me to kill him. He adopted the pose of a victor, and incensed me so much by his grins and vainglorious laughter and his strutting about that at times I have had to struggle to prevent myself from striking him.

"I formed a resolve some months ago to smash and utterly destroy him. I resolved that he should not have this beautiful girl, even if it cost my own life. This has been in my mind for many months. I do not think I am to blame. I strove from the very first to avoid anything in the nature of a contest between us.

* * * I lost my self-respect. I am without aim or ambition when I see the girl I love daily in the company of one who daily flaunts the fact in my face.

* * * I am afraid I have lost some of my finer feelings during the life of dissipation of the last year, and I am not equal to that nobility of attitude.

"I have arranged my affairs. All my property is disposed. I shall find an opportunity during the next day or two to finish this business.

"I hope to kill him unawares so that his death will come upon him as suddenly and painlessly as possible.

"It seems to me that if one has failed to find love, to continue to live in such circumstances is, in a sense, hypocrisy.

"I have been writing these pages for an hour or so each night, and the time has come for me to draw them to a close. * * * I feel I have lost too much to carry on. I have lost my private fortune in dissipation. I have lost my self-respect. I am loath to leave the world I have found interesting and in many senses beautiful, but now I look upon it with very different eyes. There can be no sunshine or joy in a life without love." * * *

Elsewhere in his message Lindsey had written:

"I thought life was not worth living. I wanted something to fill the vacant space.

"I met Miss Ferguson. She was my ideal girl. Her girlish charms and gentle grace and loveliness began to affect me very much. She seemed to be everything I desired.

"I went to the girl's parents and had a long chat with her father."

At the interview with Miss Ferguson's father, Lindsey declared that he would rather die than see Edith married to Grey. In his last letter he wrote:

"She gave me a note saying she could not come to lunch, as she had to meet someone, and preferred to leave things until the following Sunday. I worried about it very much, trying to extract some grain of satisfaction. I could only wait until the Sunday to arrive, but on Saturday I was confident that she and Grey were going to spend the afternoon together—an assumption in which I was afterwards proved to be correct.

"I began to feel really ill, and left my office an hour earlier than usual. On that day I had an attack of vertigo, and a feeling that I was about to faint. I became alarmed, and took a taxicab to the nearest hospital.

* * * * *

Lindsey, according to his statement, tried various ways of overcoming his despondency, without avail. "In the last month of my vacation," he wrote, "I made the ascent of 10 mountains, averaging 11,000 feet."

Another extract from the letter reads: "With the thought of death before me and under the shadow of death itself, it is not easy to revisualize the duty of life and love. There was no reason why I should not make her a pleasant husband."

Summing up, the Coroner spoke of the blameless character of Grey, who was a light-hearted, carefree, clean-living youth. The attraction between Grey and Miss Ferguson, the Coroner pointed out, was of the most honorable kind. Grey, he said, was shot from behind—a most cowardly attack. Miss Ferguson it seemed to him, had acted with perfect propriety throughout. Speaking of Lindsey, the Coroner dwelt on the fact that there was a strong strain of insanity in the family, as the testimony showed. It undoubtedly was true, he said, that Lindsey was of unbalanced mind.

The jury evidently did not agree with the Coroner as to this last conclusion. After a few minutes' consideration a verdict was returned to the effect that Grey was murdered willfully by Lindsey and that Lindsey committed suicide whilst in full possession of his senses.

"In other words," observed the foreman, "felo de se."

Napoleon's Last-Surviving Soldier, Aged 132, Wants to Settle Down.

A RECENT dispatch from Warsaw states that Sergt. Jan Krasinski, a Pole, who claims that he fought at the battle of Borodino 110 years ago, and that he is the sole survivor of Napoleon's armies, and one of the oldest men in the world, has just returned to Poland.

He says that he was 22 at the time Borodino was fought, in Napoleon's Moscow campaign, which makes him 132 now. He is still full of life and vigor. He was captured by the Russians at Borodino, has served the greater part of the past century in the Russian army, and fought in many wars.

He now proposes settling down quietly for the rest of his life in the district of Posen, where land is provided by the Polish Government for war veterans.

Jan's "young" wife, as he calls her, died last year in Russia. She had only reached the age of 98.

Jan Krasinski, if he is 132, was born the year after the French Revolution began with the destruction of the Bastile. He was 2 years old when Murdoch introduced gas lighting to the world, was a man long before the first railway was built and the first steamship crossed the seas, and completed his first half-century before public telegraph lines were established.

He was a lad of 15 when Nelson won the battle of Trafalgar. He was 71 years old when the American Civil War began.

A TUB OF SUDS

By Inez Haynes Irwin

"WELL, you've failed. That's the truth of the matter. Poulter knows it and Heyward knows it and I know it. Everybody knows it but you. Why don't you face it"—— Elsie Sawyer paused in mid-breath; searched mentally for further vitriol to pour into the wounds the knives of her wrath were making—"face it like a man?" she finally concluded.

Keene Sawyer made no reply; but he fixed his wife with his blank, bright gaze. His silence seemed only to whip her into further frenzies. "The idea! The conceit of it! To think that you, Keene Sawyer, the superintendent of a baby motor-parts factory in a little town in the Middle West, could come to New York and sweep all before you! Efficiency! Of all the men I've ever known to think that you would be the one to take up efficiency! A man who can't put a stud in his own shirt cuff without fumbling it!"

Again Keene Sawyer made no reply.

"What you don't get," Elsie's voice whirled on, "but what I do is that we're small-towners—you and I. As for me I'm proud of it! I hate this city. I hate it! I hate it! It was bad enough in the winter, and now that summer has turned it into a hell-hole—— And to sit here night after night, waiting for you to come home. Never going anywhere. Nobody to go anywhere with. Nowhere to go if there was. Well, you can do what you please, but my mind is made up. I'm not going to stay here any longer. I'm going home. You can go with me or follow or not—I don't care."

She came to the end of the breath which had volleyed these boiling words into the dead air of the midsummer morning; stood panting. But before she caught it again Keene Sawyer spoke.

"If you go you go alone," he said. But he said it tonelessly; and for the first time since their quarrel began the authority went out of his voice. He arose, casting mechanical, searching glances about the room. His eyes fell finally on the rim of a straw hat, protruding from under last night's paper. He seized it; made toward the door.

Elsie fixed her eyes on his retreating back. Keene was a slight, angular figure, nervously made, nervously organized. His coat, falling over his round shoulders, always creased down the line of his spine. "Come home or not, I don't care what you do!" she called after him, quick to perceive her advantage. All along she had managed to keep her voice low; but now a cutting shrillness gave it something of the quality of a scream. "You'll find me all packed and my ticket bought for home. I'm through!"

At this—his slim, nervous hand on the knob—Keene turned. For an instant he seemed about to speak. But he bit off the word at the very rim of his lips; threw his wife one of his haggard, hopeless glances; opened the door; slammed it; disappeared.

For a while Elsie sat on the couch—motionless, her slender figure bent forward almost at a right angle, her elbows supported by her knees, her face lying in her scooped hands. Then the heat drove her to her feet. She arose and moved listlessly over to the windows, where she leaned out and looked at the day. The high city, pressing it into the long narrow box which was her universe, almost shut it away from her. The top of that box was a strip of sky, brassy with heat; one end, a band of river that seemed to exude a hot, blue steam; the other the dusty clang and clatter of Broadway. Across the way, as though she looked into a gigantic mirror; rose the south side of that box—a high apartment, exactly like her own, zig-zagged along its front with fire escapes. The bottom was a slatternly street lined with rows of ash barrels and garbage cans.

Elsie's weather sense informed her—it had become doubly acute after nine months in the city—that today was going to be warmer than yesterday. And yesterday—the last of three days, hot, hotter, hottest—had seemed to scrape away the very limits of her endurance.

Moving languidly, she walked through the small living room to the smaller bedroom, to, smallest of all, the dining room. Everywhere on the furniture thick layers of dust hazed glossy surfaces; everywhere on the painted floors thin rolls of dust, like ghosts of mice, flurried back from her fanning skirts. In the first room the bed had not been made. In the dining room the half-eaten breakfast had not been cleared away; the stiffened orange husks, the dried-up oatmeal bowls were empty. The eggs lay in ossified yellow pools beside strips of bacon, soldered by their own fat to the plate. Their undrunk coffee, cold and repellant, filled the cups. A little mound of toast sat under a film of melted butter. Her napkin, barely creased, on the table, Keene's, a balled wad in the corner, lay where they had been thrown when the quarrel—begun the night before and resumed on rising—reached its climax.

She had let her housekeeping go in the tropical onslaught of the last three days; now she went to work systematically. She washed and wiped the dishes; stacked them in the built-in cabinet; proceeded to the front room; began to mop the floors. But this was not unconscious protest against the slatternly ways into which she had fallen; it was merely a translation of that fierce, inner protest into action. Afterwards she dusted, made her bed. All the time, the heat of her body grew. Yes, undeniably, this was the warmest day yet. Still, some of that heat was thrown off from her own mind—the result of her swift, violent, intensive thinking; for she kept going over and over again her quarrel with Keene . . . thinking of more bitter things she could have said.

After a while the ice man came—her duties and responsibilities were over until dinner time. In the bathroom she turned on the water tap optimistically marked cold—its coldest was merely tepid—waited until the knitting-needle jet half filled the tub, dropped into it. Still wet, she resumed her nightgown and kimono—lay down on her bed—a palm-leaf fan in her hand—lay, her eyes wide open, the fan languidly swaying—thinking.

She had told Keene the truth; her mind was made up. Just as soon as she could pull herself together she must pack her trunk, get to the station and make her reservation. Two days and she would be in Weenana! Weenana! Just saying the word brought a sensation of coolness, so sharp was its connotation of the town's wide-flung green quietude, tree-shadowed and breeze-invaded. Involuntarily, Elsie stopped her fan as though to substitute for its feverish gusts that clean Western air, dew-chilled, pine-perfumed.

Oh, that morning freshness of Weenana!

It lay, the baby city, on a ridge in a broad valley running north and south. The valley funnel, in cooperation with the lake, first drew over them all stray northern breezes, and then delicately moistened them. The Weenanians were justly proud of a city which maintained a green crispness when surrounding [illegible] sweltered, wilted, scorched, and finally parched.

And Elsie Gammell, who had become Elsie [illegible] had held an accepted position in the Weenana order of things. To be daughter of Rhoda Gammell, a [illegible] invalid, and once the most beautiful woman in the town, was enough to account for this; in addition, to be the daughter of Dike Gammell, the bank president, the finest and perhaps the ablest man in town; and finally; to cap all, to be Elsie Gammell herself. She had inherited not all, but much of her mother's beauty and not all but much of her father's ability.

Pictures of her past self flitted before Elsie's [illegible] eyes as slowly she wielded the fan; gay afternoons with "the bunch"—the small, exclusive core of Weenana youth—gathered on the piazza of the comfortable [illegible] sawed house. Mrs. Gammell, a mass of billowy chiffon in the hammock; Elsie herself in a crisp "[illegible]" the porch table set with a colony of cut-glass [illegible] the big cut-glass bowl, in which an ocean of fruit punch gradually melted a mountain of ice—great plates of sandwiches and cake—striped awnings.

Sometimes, incongruously, her father's lean, crinkled weatherbeaten face intruded its tired but always understanding smile into the picture. She would hear herself asking him for money. Or he would be saying: "Go light this month, daughter. Things rather heavy up on me last month, you know." Father was getting old, she told herself inconsequently; there were white streaks in his blond hair.

More often, however, appeared her mother's face—still velvet-eyed, for she smeared artificial shadows with an astounding verisimilitude about her lashes; and still velvet-haired, for her dye was remarkably successful. Much more often than to her father, she seemed to listen to her mother, to the tales of her past love affairs, to her vicarious pride in her daughter's conquests, her daughter's clothes. And somehow all these monologues ended in the same key:

"And when you do marry, Elsie, dear, I hope you'll pattern your married life after mine and your father's. You can see what it is life—protecting devotion on his part, accepting devotion on mine. No harsh words—no quarrels. Of course, we've got good dispositions, both of us; but I've made it a point always to try to keep as young and as attractive"—here Mrs. Gammell drew the inevitable hand mirror, always easily accessible, from under the afghan and studied herself—"as my illhealth would permit. You don't think I've failed, do you, Elsie child?"

Failed? With their lovely home—and, from the small-town point of view, their luxurious home—a basis for every social impulse in Weenana! Failed! Sometimes her father's tired face intruded itself at this moment; but Elsie always gave her mother—and gave sincerely—the reassurance she craved.

"And one thing more, Elsie, dear," her mother would add; "remember this: Never step down from your pedestal, Elsie. Keep yourself always an ideal. Be sure to insist after marriage on all those little attentions he's given you before marriage. Why, your father waits on me by inches."

But Keene Sawyer—— How did it happen that, out of all the men in Weenana, she had chosen Keene Sawyer? For she had fallen swiftly in love with him, as soon as possible after that dance in which she suddenly realized that of all the men she had met in Weenana, Keene Sawyer was the only one who was "different." What constituted that difference, it was hard for her to say. Other people said he was visionary. But he had a kind of charm. Physically, the difference was obvious enough. His hair, in contrast with the slick locks of the young men in "the bunch," was always storm-tossed. His eyes, in contrast with the clear calm of their eyes, had a—Elsie described it to herself as "a wild sweetness." His whole make-up, in contrast with their square-cut athleticism, was nervous, almost fragile. Oh, yes, she loved Keene—still loved him, for that matter."

"Well, of all things—if it ain't Delia Dolan! But for the love of all the blessed saints, what do ye be doing here?"

These words, drifting across the airshaft, came through the window which opened above Elsie's head into her bedroom. Elsie recognized the voice to be that of Mrs. O'Connell, the woman who once a week cleaned the halls and stairs. Another voice—presumably it belonged to Delia Dolan—answered. It had nothing like so pronounced a brogue as that of its interlocutor; nevertheless, there was an unctuous softness here and there, as of Ireland in the second generation.

"What do I be doing here? Why, looking at an apartment, to be sure!"

"Looking at an apart—— Well, it's up in the world ye are!"

"Up in the world is it! It's more up in the world the children are! What with my Theresa a stenographer and my Mary a milliner and my Tim a ball player, sure it's on easy street we live—Tim Dolan and me. Why, Mrs. O'Connell"——

There followed settling sounds as of highly starched skirts crackling, the faint groanings of a large body lowering itself with care and dubiety, the scrunch of a hastily moved pail, and the slop of overflowing water. Finally Mrs. Dolan was seated.

"Wait—a moment, woman dear," came Mrs. O'Connell's cracked voice, "while I fill me pail at the hall sink. Just a moment I'll be laving you. Then we can talk."

Complete silence as Mrs. O'Connell's trundling steps died down the hall.

Keene Sawyer was an only child. His father was clerk in Dike Gammell's bank; there is little to say about him. His mother was his father's wife; there is even less to say about her. As for Keene himself—he was a strange lad, strong on mathematics, which he seemed to absorb without effort into his system, and the brief, tepid wash of disjointed facts which the Weenana High School presented as science. He was correspondingly weak in literature, language, history and geography. His teachers recognized that he was brilliant and original; but they were puzzled by him.

Keene had a faculty rather difficult to describe. In a sentence, it was a power of doing any bit of work in the briefest possible time, resulting from what was apparently a driving passion to perform it with the fewest possible number of motions. He was a mother's boy. He helped about the house in the most willing and docile way; brought in the wood and coal; washed and wiped the dishes, made beds—swept even, and dusted, whenever domestic crises demanded these services of him. His mother had first noted his "faculty" when it came after meals to the carting of the dishes from the dining room to the kitchen. She herself always brought them out as they came to her hand—the meat platter and the cream pitcher, cheek by jowl. And everything went into the dishpan together: china, glass and silver. As housekeepers go, she was clean; but she was far from scientific. Mrs. Sawyer happened upon Keene once, standing immobile before the dining room table, still spread with the remains of the devoured dinner, contemplating the savory ruin with the fixed eyes of one in a trance.

"Hurry up, Keene!" she admonished. "You'll never get them dishes done, lallygagging like this!"

"I'm not lallygagging!" he retorted. "I'm only trying to figure out how few trips I can get 'em all out to the kitchen in."

This made no impression on Mrs. Sawyer's mind. But a few nights later, passing through the kitchen, her attention was caught by something that did. Keene's performance on this occasion had something of the rehearsed military precision of a vaudeville act; glasses neatly piled; silver neatly gathered; plates neatly stacked came in that order from the dining room plump into fresh relays of hot water. But, dried, they returned in a different order; glasses first, to the glass shelves in the kitchen; china second, to the china cabinet in the dining room corner, nearest the kitchen; silver last, to the sideboard under the window.

By degrees her kitchen was transformed. Mrs. Sawyer's house gradually became the best systematized in Weenana. Then one afternoon—he would graduate in three months—Keene came home from the public library with a book, somewhere in whose title appeared the word efficiency. For the rest of the evening he was deaf and dumb. Books—they all bore the word efficiency somewhere in the title—followed one another in steady procession into the Sawyer household. With the author of one book, he opened a correspondence. The result was letters, which every month grew, on Keene's part, at least, longer and longer. Books came from this friend, pamphlets, catalogues. He haunted the few manufacturing plants Weenona boasted: Curran's box factory; Weir's automobile parts; Darlington's creamery.

Came graduation, came his job in George Weir's automobile parts factory; came three years of work and of promotion so steady that it was apparent Weir had no intention of losing his superintendent if liberal treatment could prevent it; came midsummer and——

"Mother, I'm getting six weeks' vacation this year. You see, I haven't taken any for three summers, so I've got all my vacations saved up. I'm going to Chicago. There's a man I've been corresponding with for three or four years now—he's an efficiency expert. He seemed to be interested to show me some plants in Chicago, and he's invited me to come on and see him."

The visit to the efficiency expert, there need be no secret of the fact that it was Adams, was highly successful. Adams bared the manufacturing heart of Chicago to Keene. It filled Keene with new ideas. It resulted in a friendship so strong that on Keene's announcement of his engagement to Elsie Gammell, Adams suggested that he go to New York; offered to get him a job with the Poulter & Heyward Yeast Cake Co. The salary looked, from Weenana's standard, large.

There followed marriage; the honeymoon trip to New York; the hunt for an apartment; the making of the home—steady chapter after chapter in Elsie's book of disillusion—resistless stage on stage in Keene's experience of despair.

* * * * * * * *

"There—now we can have a talk!"

Again Mrs. O'Connell, returning from the hall sink, broke stridently into Elsie's meditations. Had those long, long thoughts consumed but these few brief moments?

"There's nobody coming up these stairs, this hour, but I'll just be laving my pail here—handy-like if they did. Now, tell me all about everything, woman dear. How often do I mind me when we used to work in Felton Hall together. Sure, my heart was broke when Tim Dolan stopped off long enough from the coal wagon to court you right under me eyes—as you might say. Tell me about the children. When last I seen you, young Tim was getting into throuble breaking windows."

"'Tis true! Oh, the money we paid out for that boys' ball playing. But Tim says it was an investment, for now look at 'm! A ball player with his name in every newspaper you take up. Oh, it's a public character he is. Why, the lad earns"——

Mrs. Dolan's voice sank as she confided financial secrets of a momentous nature. And for an interval the two voices, relating intimate gossip, kept to a uniform level, a bit above a whisper.

* * * * * * * *

That year in New York! What an experience! Bitterness welled in Elsie's heart as her thoughts traversed the smoothly oiled grooves of memory.

First had come the shock of rents that had matched the soaring buildings; then the lowering, notch by notch, of her standard of space in comfortable living, until she clutched gratefully at the combination of four cubicles in a cheaply built apartment in a cheaply built uptown neighborhood. Then followed her gradual realization of the shrinkage of the dollar in the astringent financial atmosphere of the metropolis.

* * * * * * * *

When the Sawyers came to New York they knew nobody; and after nine months of living there, they still knew nobody. Nevertheless, they were young, very much in love—the panorama of that first year's season would almost have sufficed, if it had not been for the summer. It is true that the winter had seemed a long-drawn-out agony of cutting winds, a frost-biting bitterness, almost personal; but they were accustomed to cold winters. And the spring compensated for everything. Indeed, the spring——

It seemed to Elsie Sawyer that she had never seen anything so poignantly pathetic, so accumulatingly lovely as that New York spring. How it came—looking back at it now—was a puzzle; its first timid approach was so tentative, its final onrush so swift. One day the air fermented with an acute soft sweetness; when she walked in the park, tiny, hard, tight-rolled jade green points were pricking out from bare brown stalks. Another day—and whenever she looked down from her window, it was on wagons loaded with blooming spring flowers, the men who peddled them calling in hoarse voices what seemed unintelligible peans to Pan. Balloons bloomed miraculously in children's hands.

Oh, yes, the spring! But the summer——

The steps by which that soft-sweet, fresh, fragrant New York spring merged with the damp-acid, stagnant, dead New York summer were beyond the powers of Elsie's analysis to follow. And yet—she could have stood even that—if Keene had been successful, and if—— But he was not successful.

Poulter, the senior partner in the firm, theoretically interested before Keene's arrival, had, on acquaintance with Keene's ideas, lost all belief in them. Heyward, the junior partner, was interested; but he was difficult, a quibbling, querying bully. Keene had fought for his ideas with every power of his belief in them—with gentleness, with tact, with firmness, with obstinacy, with the courage of his despair and the despair of his courage. But he was losing—losing inch by inch and day by day.

And then, in addition—a much more serious matter—their marriage, as certainly as Keene's theories, was developing into a failure. All the poetry had gone out of it, all that romance, all that high glamour of idealism to which Elsie had determined to hold so punctiliously. Little attentions! Why, Keene showed her no attentions, little or big. He was too absorbed in the business problems that confronted him daily. Her long days were lonely, and sometimes it seemed to her that her long evenings were lonelier still. Keene got home too late for them to think of going anywhere; or, worse still, so exhausted from his daily struggle with Poulter that he could do nothing after his apathetic dinner but stretch out on the couch; and then drift from his newspaper to troubled, intermittent napping.

Elsie often contrasted her marriage with that of her parents. What would her mother say? On what her father would say it never occurred to her to reflect. Well, she would never give up the struggle to keep the little attentions, to hold her place as an "ideal." The pile of Keene's laundry, which had started last night's wrangle, lay on the chiffonier top. Her lips set. She would carry out her threat. If she went ahead to Weenana—Keene was bound to follow. She would go. She would go today.

She rose again to pack. But the conversation began across the elevator shaft. Mrs. Dolan was speaking. There was something pleasant, almost cooling, in the round voice with its ghost of an Irish accent.

——"so old Tim is always saying to young Tim, 'put ut away, b'y!'" As she quoted her husband, Mrs. Dolan's voice assumed a thickness of brogue normally alien to it. "'The time'll come when you'll want ut.'"

"How is Tim these days?" Mrs. O'Connell questioned.

"Fine," Mrs. Dolan answered.

"An' you say Molly Ryan isn't making Joe a good wife?"

"Far from it! There's not a moment that the two be together that they're not quarreling. 'Twas this way: Molly was as pretty and modest a girl as ever you seen. And at first she kept the house as neat as a pin. But then Joe came home every night all white and dusty from the works, and Molly used to scold 'm for dirtying the house. Joe wouldn't mend his ways—it's the contrary lad he's always been. And then—Molly had a perverseness, too. And after a while she grew carelesslike. And now you should see their house—a pigpen it is!"

"'Tis a pity!" Mrs. O'Connell sighed. "For wance they go that way, it's not often they get loving again."

"'Tis the true word you said," Mrs. Dolan agreed.

"And yet, 'tis very annoying to have a man come home and tramp dirt all over a clane house," Mrs. O'Connell observed, pensively.

"'Tis right you are again, Mrs. O'Connell," said Mrs. Dolan. "I remember"—— She paused; her voice seemed to melt away and merge with oncoming revery; but she pulled herself out of it. "It takes me back 25 years, to the beginning of my own married life. I shall never forget the first night Tim Dolan came home after his day's work. Before God, woman dear, I did not know 'm. I was looking out the dure when the gate opened. I looked up, and at first I thought it was a naygur—he was that black with coal dust. But when he kept on coming, I saw it was Tim. It gave me a turn. When he came into my kitchen I felt strange-like—as if it wasn't my own man. Well, he washed his hands and face at the sink, and we sat down to the table to eat. You mind what a clean creature I was"——

"Never have these eyes gazed on the like," Mrs. O'Connell reassured her.

"All that evening I felt strange-like. And all that night in bed—I kept thinking of Tim covered with the coal dust. The next night when Tim came home I had a great tub of suds on the floor in front of the stove, waiting for 'm, and I wouldn't give 'm dinner till he tuk a bath!"

"Oh, the strange craychure you are!" Again Mrs. O'Connell laughed with an exquisite enjoyment. "And what did Tim say?"

"At first, he wouldn't, but in the end he did." Again Mrs. Dolan paused. "And the next night, when he comes home, there was another tub of suds waiting 'm—and the next and the next."

"And how did Tim like that?"

"Elsie, you've done a lot for me tonight—I can't tell you how much. I was all in."

"At first not at all. But I put my foot down. And after a while, he couldn't do without it. For, as you say, the scrubbing craychure I am. How I used to scrub his back! And what fun we did be having! The two of us laughing like a pair of children! And sometimes we'd get throwing soapsuds at each other."

"Throwing soapsuds!" Mrs. O'Connell repeated. "Go along with you!"

"It was 10 long years my Tim kept on the coal wagon before they put him on the weighing. But after he'd got on the weighing, every night when he came home, there was the tub of suds just the same. And the difference it made in 'm! He'd be that tired he was ready to drop when he came in. But after that warm tub, 'twas like a fighting cock he was. Then, when the children began to earn money, they teased me to move into an apartment house where there was a bathroom. 'Twas a proud man Tim was when Tim took his first bath in a bathtub. I scrubbed his back every night for 'm, just the same."

"Marriage was different in them days," Mrs. O'Connell sighed, with a rich, reminiscent fervor. "Young folks getting married these days think only of themselves. What do they be getting out of it theirselves, is all they asks. Silk stockings and high-heeled shoes, and feathers and powde, and paint! Cud ye imagine any one of them heating the water every night of their lives so's to give himself a bath when he got home?"

"Marriage is a quare thing," promulgated Mrs. Dolan. "Mostly the women gets the best out of it. Mostly it's hardest on the men. With a family coming along, there's need for a lot of money. And it's the man who has to earn it. Women has their bothers; but when all's said and done, it's the softest for them. If she don't make it pleasant for her husband as she can when he's in the house, she's no true wife. And if she don't work her hands to the bone to keep 'm healthy and handsome and young, she's no true woman. I have no use for these little slipper-snips who thinks they're queens, and tries to make a tired-out working man wait on 'm by inches every living minute."

* * * * * * * * *

"Mr. Sawyer! Mr. Sawyer!"

Keene Sawyer looked up blankly from his desk. His face was like wet tallow from heat and hard work. "Yes, Miss Draper," he replied automatically.

"A telephone message from your wife. She says you're to meet her at the Eighty-sixth station on the Sixth avenue L, tonight at 7."

"Thank you, Miss Draper," Keene answered, apathetically.

He had just come from an argument, which had become a quarrel, with Heyward, and he was going to a quarrel which would become a good-by with Elsie. On all sides of him he saw only failure. Failure as an efficiency expert, failure as a husband. "I'm a pretty poor stick, I guess," he concluded, grimly. "Elsie had the dope this morning, all right. I can't think what she's stopping off at Eighty-sixth street for, if she's leaving tonight. Perhaps it's some errand." He had long ago given up trying to understand Elsie's caprices, and he gave up this one with a tired sigh. He bent his head to a bristle of figures.

* * * * * * * * *

When he came down the steps of the elevated, a woman came forward to meet him. She was so different from the figure he had visualized in his mind that Keene stared in astonishment. He had expected to see Elsie in a traveling gown; suit case in hand; the look in her eyes of a raging defiance. Instead—it was evident that she was not leaving town that night. She was a vision of coolness. She wore a light, silk gown, such as he had not seen since last summer in Weenana, a transparent, black tulle hat, through which her hair glistened like pulled candy; carries of gloves and stockings and shoes, all of the summery order. It was true, she carried what looked like traveling paraphernalia—a big straw basket. This, she immediately handed to him with a——

"Oh, here you are, Keene! Take this, please. I thought you'd like to take a little walk with me before dinner."

There was in her voice none of the raging acrimony of the morning. Indeed, it was soft, appealing; and her eyes had that misty starriness which experience had taught him trailed her weeping.

"We're going to dine out tonight," she vouchsafed gently, and proceeded east. "Don't talk, Keene!" she added. "You're awfully tired."

They entered the park at Eighty-fifth street. And following what was apparently a familiar way, she conducted him south over a swell of tree-grown rolling down hollows and up hills—curving, dipping, ascending. Soon a green, cool world encompassed them. It was not yet sunset, but the shadows—brown lances thrown over the glowing emerald of the grass—grew longer before their eyes. Presently on Keene's exhausted ears smote the trickle of water. A little quiver of excitement seemed to run over Elsie's slim figure.

"There! Here's the place!" she exclaimed. She stepped off the asphalt walk, onto the grass, threaded her way among the trees until they caught up with a tiny, flashing brook which dropped from a pool near the reservoir and, making baby-waterfalls of its way from rock to rock, ended finally by trickling into the lake. Elsie found a soft spot near the tinkle, in the shadow of a tree.

"There, dear!" she said. "Sit down so that your back is against the trunk. Take your coat off, if you'd like."

Kneeling beside him, she opened the hamper. Appeared a picnic meal, expertly packed, delicately organized.

Elsie spread a cloth over the grass, placed on it sandwiches, hard-boiled eggs, a salad which came, still crisp, from a preserve-jar; a small bottle of iced coffee. Talking busily, as though to forestall comment, she arranged the food with that detailed daintiness which characterized her.

Keene had not yet emerged from his daze. But suddenly he found himself ravenously hungry. He ate with the air of a starving man. Elsie ate with him, but more slowly. Much of the time she was talking.

"I've made up my mind, Keene," she said, "that as long as this hot spell lasts I'm going to meet you every night, and we'll eat here in the Park. You don't need hot food in weather like this, and you ought not to take that awful trip in the subway in the rush hour. We'll have our supper here, and then, when it cools off, we'll go home at our leisure." She rambled off into a description of how, during lonely walks in the spring, she had found this spot.

Keene ate and listened. All the time the shadows grew longer, the little brook purled its song into the interstices of her talk.

After he had eaten, Keene produced a cigarette, leaned back against the tree and listened again.

"Now, there's something more," Elsie said, after a long interval in which, by turns, they had quietly talked and quietly meditated. "It's a special treat I'm going to give you tonight. I'm afraid we can't afford it every night, though."

She led him in the direction of the lake.

An hour later, Elsie was still rowing on the miniature ocean. Other boats passed, but they seemed to belong to another world; to be sliding along another dimension. The sunset had long ago faded away, but a few of shore lights gave a distant gayety to their voyage; their reflections stood upright in the water like long golden comet-rockets. Stars, pricking out one by one until they lay in dense shining masses, had risen off the sky. A delicate breeze floated about them. Keene still lay back in the bow of the boat, his head on the pillow which Elsie had miraculously extemporized from the hamper, his face, from which all the tallowy fatigue had evaporated, turned up to the stars.

"I had an awful fight with Heyward today, Elsie," he said. "And I thought I was going to tell him tomorrow I'd get through Saturday night. But I see now it wasn't all wrong, and that I was a good deal to blame. Of course, I came into the office this morning in a mood that—— This coolness and quiet has given me a chance to think. What you've just been saying now about marriage being different from an engagement—about the give and take of it—and the pulling together—makes me realize that. A business is just like marriage. No one in the concern can have it all his own way. I'm going into the office tomorrow and tell Heyward I'll give in on half of his points if he'll give in on half of mine. He'll do it, too. He's a square guy. As much as he irritates me, I really like him. Some time, Elsie, I'd like to invite him to dinner. Elsie, you've done a lot for me tonight—I can't tell you how much. I was all in—I was at the end of my rope. You've helped me around a hard corner. You've handed me a cup of cold water."

"No, Keene," Elsie said; for suddenly she had a vision of two in a kitchen, a big Irishman and a big Irish woman, throwing suds at each other as they made roaring holiday of their nightly ritual. "It wasn't a cup of cold water—it was a tub of hot suds."

Dead Negro Baby That Gives $5,000,000

lawyers had been unable to prove that she was the mother of Tommy Atkins. She worried over the matter. Various stories are afloat. At any rate, Nancy Atkins has become a mental blank and faded out of the celebrated case.

Arthur Ferguson of Fort Smith, Ark., made the fight on behalf of Nancy. Next to the Government's suit, Ferguson's was the most hotly contested, running through the courts for several years. Other claimants, easily proved spurious, broke into the case and were thrown out by the heels. "Tommy Atkins," alive and lively, appeared in various parts of Oklahoma and in other states. The boy with two mothers, both of whom believed him to have died long ago, seemed to have been resurrected as a large litter of Tommy Atkinses.

Even the Judge in the earlier phases of the litigation passed off the stage in a dramatic exit. He was Ralph E. Campbell, Federal Judge at Muskogee, a Roosevelt appointee, a jurist of wide repute for personal and official honor. He was killed accidentally in Tulsa three years ago when handling an automatic pistol, the mechanism of which he did not understand. Judge Campbell invariably handed down the opinion that Thomas Atkins had been a real person, was the son of Minnie Atkins, was entitled to the allotment in question, and that Charles Page was the holder of a legitimate oil lease. The Government continued to insist that Thomas Atkins was a myth, that there never had been an Indian of that name, and that the property should revert to the Creek Nation as common property, subject, of course, to re-allotment. For nearly eight years Uncle Sam persisted in this contention.

J. W. Cloud, appointed receiver early in 1915, was removed by the Federal Court of Appeals a few days after he took up the work. Then Mr. Page put up a bond of $950,000 cash, deposited in the Exchange National Bank at Tulsa, and was placed in charge of the property, which he has operated continuously.

In the summer of 1918 that bank opened a new skyscraper building as its headquarters. Charles Page attended the opening reception. The bank president was Earl W. Sinclair. Page suddenly remarked to him:

"Earl, if it's not too much trouble, I'd like to know what's my balance here."

"No trouble at all," replied the bank president, instructing a teller to give the depositor the information requested.

"You have on deposit today, Mr. Page," said the teller, "$1,786,214.17."

"Thank you," responded the depositor.

Of that balance, $950,000 represented the bond and was not checkable at the time. It is released by the recent Supreme Court decision, along with about $3,000,000 more which has resulted from the oil production on the Tommy Atkins lease. The Supreme Court finds that the Thomas Atkins allotment was genuine. To put it in another way, the highest tribunal in the land has found in Oklahoma a $5,000,000 dead negro baby. The tract still produces oil at the rate of hundreds of barrels daily, and oil experts estimate that it is good for at least $1,000,000 more.

In March, 1921, Tommy Atkins' third mother made her appearance. This time she was Sallie Atkins. She sued in the State District Court at Sapulpa, Ok., getting judgment for $1,960,000 against Charles Page. Last April the State Supreme Court reversed the decision and remanded the case with instructions that judgment be entered for Page. Out of this litigation grew charges of bribery against the District Judge at Sapulpa, Lucien B. Wright. It was alleged that he had accepted $10,000 to rule in favor of the Sallie Atkins side. The charge was dismissed after a hearing that lasted three days, Judge Wright being exonerated.

Now that Tommy Atkins, whether he ever existed or not, is established by the court of last resort as a fact, what's to become of all these millions? The most remarkable part of the story supplies answer to this question.

Charles Page is of the self-made type of citizen. Up in Wisconsin he used to be a railroad switchman. He went West, made a fortune in gold mining, lost it somehow, then appeared in the Oklahoma oil fields and made a new fortune in oil. He had known what it meant to be poor. In earlier years he had pawned his watch to buy food and medicines for his first wife, an invalid. He had promised his mother that if ever he made big money he would do what he could for widows and orphans. When he struck it rich in the oil fields he remembered that promise. He conceived the idea of building and maintaining a home for children whose parents were dead or were not able to support them. It was not to be an "orphanage." It was to be a home. The Sand Springs Home is the result.

In that home from 50 to 75 children are maintained. They have their own private schools and a home church. They have a farm of several thousands of acres, where virtually everything consumed in the home is raised. There is, close by, a modern hospital, thoroughly equipped, owned by the home. Over the threshold of the original dormitory of the home is the motto, "Think Right," placed there by Charles Page, who believes that if a child is taught to think right it will live right.

When Page wanted to have the Sand Springs Home incorporated, so that it would be self-perpetuating, he was told by lawyers that it could not done. He boarded a train for Oklahoma City, the State capital, that same morning. The Legislature was in session. Page went to the House of Representatives, had his bill for special incorporation introduced, and the House passed it before adjourning for the noon luncheon. Early in the afternoon the Senate took up the bill and passed it. The Governor signed it a few minutes later, and Charles Page returned to Tulsa that night with the charter in his pocket.

The charter provides that all the Charles Page holdings are to be held in trust by him for the Sand Springs Home, as general manager, until he shall reach the age of 65. Then the home is to be managed by a stipulated board, self-perpetuating. Mr. Page's management still has some years to run. The millionaire philanthropist reserved only his own home in Sand Springs and a sufficient maintenance for his family. All the rest of his property belongs to the Sand Springs Home, and under the terms of this special charter the home will go on forever.

Now perhaps you understand why Charles Page is the poorest rich man, or the richest poor man, in the world. Incidentally, he maintains also, at Sand Springs, a "colony" where he supplies rent-free cottages to widows with dependent children, gives them bread and certain other provisions from the home farm, and finds them employment. Thus has he fulfilled the promise he made his mother to do what he could for widows and orphans.

Throughout his long fight to prove that Tommy Atkins was a like negro baby once upon a time, Mr. Page has sought to hold and increase these oil millions for the benefit of the children now in the Sand Springs Home and of those who will come after them in the long years ahead. He is a man of simple tastes. The only thing his friends have against him is that he persists in smoking three-for-ten stogies instead of a good cigar or a pipe.

tentialities. Agrippina conspired with the infamous Locusta to poison Claudius with a dish of mushrooms supposed to have contained some highly mysterious poison, but the modern critical mind must conclude that these women did nothing more subtle than to ply the Emperor with a dish of noxious fungi, of the kind known to every high school botanist. Locusta was put in prison for this unsuccessful attempt, but kept alive to dispatch the Emperor's foes. Later she did away with Britannicus for Nero, an imperial service which won her a pardon, got her established in noble splendors and saw her provided with a number of pupils, to whom she taught her art, in the interest of the State.

It is probable that this historic woman poisoner used nothing but vegetable substances in her official toxicology. Domitian, on the other hand, resorted to an extraction from a species of sea hare, the Aphysia depilans, to poison Titus. A little later that form of arsenic known as orpiment (arsenic trisulphide) was used by the official assassins of Emperors, but white arsenic and the modern metallic oxide were not well understood until much later. Arsenic in its oxide forms was the substance which formed the basis of the poison feasts of the late Middle Ages and the Renaissance in Italy.

Here the great question intrudes itself. From the writings of alchemists, historians and the confessions of convicted poisoners of that age it is well established that arsenic in one form or another was the chief poison employed in the evil work of the assassins who played so great a part in the political, social and private life of men at the dawn of modernity. It is quite apparent that arsenic, some forms of which are practically tasteless, was the favorite drug of Pope Alexander VI (Borgia) and his son, Caesar, for these royal killers usually made away with their enemies by inviting them to feasts and dosing the wine cups. Guicciardini recites that on one occasion Alexander himself got the poisoned chalice and became violently ill, but was saved because he knew in time what had happened and what counter measures to take. The story goes that this terrible Pontiff finally died by the hand of another drug user.

The celebrated Toffana, who resigned as chief poisoner at Naples, a little later, with her Aqua Toffana or Acquetta di Napoli, sold in little phials marked "Manna of St. Nicholas of Bari," appears to have employed arsenic extensively also, and her confession on the rack, in which she admitted the destruction of about 600 persons, mostly the husbands of discontented wives, made no mention of more subtle chemicals. Hieronyma Spara, who plied her infamous vocation in the reign of a later Pontiff, Alexander VII, was similarly prosecuted and failed to reveal any deeper secret of the poisoner's art.

The most powerful of the arsenic poisons and now the commonest, white metallic arsenic, arsenic trioxid or ratabane, to use its various names, must be taken internally in considerable quantities, compared to some other drugs, before the fatal result can be achieved. It is beyond possibility for this drug to be used in a ring whose maximum content would be a few drops. Such a quantity of white arsenic as could be placed even in the largest ring, in the form of a solution, would probably not kill if swallowed and if applied to a cut or abrasion would have only a local effect. Hence, if the stories of deadly poisonings through jewelry, through the inhalation of a vapor, through slight external contacts and the like are to be credited, the investigator must suppose that the Renaissance knew other drugs than those commonly used by its murderers. None of the vegetable poisons seems to offer itself as a possibility here and we are forced back upon animal substances and the minerals.

Neither prussic (hydro-cyanic) nor cyanic acid was known until three centuries after the Borgian period, and it is only these substances, in their rarest and most concentrated forms, that stand out among modern chemicals as possibilities. On this line of reasoning, then, the stories of these ring poisonings are fictitious or the ring assassins knew of animal poisons or other combinations of noxious substances whose powers have been forgotten.

A Woman Alone With Cannibals

They knew almost nothing of white people; their curiosity was appalling, and I could hardly keep the little wild dwarf women from pulling off my clothes to examine them and myself. They did pull down my hair and screamed with fright when they found it was long—"like the grass on the hills"—their own being woolly and short.

They lent me a house set on high piles to sleep in, and told me the place was infested with wild boars, so that I would better go to bed early. I found the house alive with beetles, and preferred to pitch my tent outside, not believing the tale about the boars. Nevertheless, I kept my lamp lit.

Late at night the wild boars did come about; I heard them whetting their tusks on the trees and moving close to the canvas. They are formidable animals, and not pleasant neighbors, when one is practically unarmed, but I trusted the light might keep them from coming too near, and it did. With the dawn the whetting and tramping ceased.

New trouble then arose. My carriers—big, upstanding men, each equal in physique if not so in spirit to any two of the dwarfs, began to cry. When asked to explain, they said they were all going to be killed, for Baiva, the biggest cannibal chief of the whole range, had just arrived in the village, and he would certainly organize an attack upon us.

There was no proof to the contrary, but I had been told by missionaries of the coast I could safely travel alone to the far mountain outpost of these daring fathers, and I banked on the truth of the statement. The carriers had to be quieted, so I looked up the chief, ready to trade feather-work for salt and beads, and to help me in getting food for the men. He had no ill intentions at all.

Next day, when I reached the tiny settlement high up in the great main range of the Owen Stanley, the missionary who welcomed me showed me a huge banyan tree with a human skeleton hanging on it, which had been placed there by Baiva himself, eight years earlier, as a warning to any white person who might attempt to pass that way—Baiva and his chiefs standing guard with stone clubs and spears.

But Baiva since then, though no convert yet, had changed his mind, and the sign of the skeleton had lost its significance. It was not Baiva who attacked the prospector a year or two later. He maintained his friendly attitude for the whites throughout. Mackintosh's murderers, one may add, were found and arrested, under the greatest difficulties, by the Government, and were hanged.

There were two more adventures which did not occur on this trip. One was the swimming of a river pool which contained an alligator described to me as harmless "because it had a spade-shaped nose." The alligator was certainly there, from all one heard, but I should have invaded its home with less confidence if I had known, as I afterwards did, that alligators with spade-shaped noses do not—in Papua, at all events—exist.

I do not know why it let me alone; if it had behaved with less restraint there would have been an adventure, undoubtedly, but no one would ever have heard about it.

On the same day the pestiferous and delirious horse, which made miserable a short part of my journey, got me under an overhanging bough and scraped me three-quarters out of the saddle, hanging me head down over a thousand-foot precipice. It then trotted on to the edge of nothing, dangling me as it went.

The carriers, as usual, began to cry. If the saddle had not been a good, ancient "side" variety it would have been a real "adventure," but I pulled myself up by the crutch and once more a fine story was nipped in the bud.

On the way back again I did a little riding, but this time it was on the back of a bullock, which climbed like a cat, and actually sat down and tobogganed when the track grew too steep and slippery for walking.

Fire Prevention in the Home

Because of lack of proper precautions in caring for heating apparatus there is great annual loss of life and property —Expert tells how to avert danger from furnaces and stoves — Exposed walls and wooden ceilings in cellars should have metal protection—The importance of frequent inspection of chimneys :: :: ::

THE protection of the home against fire is a matter of vital interest to every householder in the winter season when the necessity for furnace or stove heat must of necessity introduce an element of hazard, unless great care is used in handling the heating apparatus.

The following address on the precautions necessary to prevent fire in the home was broadcast by Harold M. Hess, secretary of the American Central Insurance Co., from Post-Dispatch radio station K S D, the night of Nov. 27.

It excited much favorable comment from radio users and because of its general interest it is here published in full.

THE home is the one place where we have supplied the least possible protection against fire and taken the fewest steps to prevent fire. Over 65 per cent of the number of fires in the United States originate in residences. Of the 15,000 persons who lost their lives last year by being burned to death, nearly 10,000 were found in homes. Eight hundred and thirty-six dwellings are on fire for every working day of the year. It is necessary, therefore, that all citizens be advised as to the conditions which exist and which at any time may cause disaster.

At the opening of winter, every true citizen should prepare for the dangers which are incident to winter heating. The stove, furnace and fireplace are put in service frequently without the necessary supervision or inspection.

If wood or coal stoves are used, they should always be protected from the floor by a satisfactory metallic, properly insulated base, and should be set at a safe distance from all walls. Any exposed wall or ceiling which is liable to be overheated should be protected by sheet iron and asbestos nailed to the wall or ceiling with proper insulation, so as to provide for an air space between the protecting shield and the wooden material. Charred wood surfaces or blistered paint are evidences of danger.

A very careful inspection should always be made of the general installation of the furnace, as well as the condition of the smoke pipe and the chimney. It is very important that each of these be carefully cleaned, so that no accumulation may cause a fire. The chimney is frequently filled with soot, which is caked on all sides. This not only lessens the effectiveness of the heating unit, but is also ready to burn out and cause damage to adjoining properties. Soot may be cleaned out by rags or brushes or by burning of ordinary salt for about 30 minutes in a hot fire. A careful examination of the smoke pipe will frequently reveal numerous places where it has been rusted through and unless it is replaced, it will eventually result in the loss of the property. It is better to buy a new smoke pipe than to pay for a new house. Care should be taken that this smoke pipe is fastened rigidly, so that it will not be shaken apart when the furnace is receiving attention. It should also be cemented with asbestos cement around its entrance into the chimney. An inspection of the firebox of your hot-air furnace will very often reveal the fact that the cement has fallen out of the furnace union or that the firepot has been cracked. Either of these conditions will allow sparks to pass through the ducts into the house proper, thereby creating a very serious hazard. It is much cheaper to pay for a new firepot and to have the entire furnace reset than to stand the hospital or funeral expenses which may result from neglect.

So many fires occur as a result of bad flues and chimneys that it is important to have every temporary or makeshift flue replaced with one well constructed, and not subject to any strain that will cause it to crack. Proper specifications for standard flues may be had for the asking.

If gas is used for heating, the stove should be attached by rigid iron pipe connection. Rubber or flexible metallic tubing, when used to connect gas stoves, is always extremely dangerous. Frequently these devices allow gases to escape into the room for days before the leak is discovered. This becomes a menace to health and later must result in an explosion and fire, with its attendant losses to life and property.

On account of the scarcity of coal many homes are planning the use of fuel oil for heating purposes. The piping necessary should be installed carefully and by efficient workmen who thoroughly understand the importance of obviating any leakage from pipe connections. Any installation of fuel oil equipment should be made in accordance with instructions prepared under the direction of the National Board of Fire Underwriters, as the danger is serious unless properly safeguarded.

In many cases, those who are accustomed to the use of hard coal are compelled by the recent coal shortage to make use of bituminous or soft coal for their heating this year. It is well to note certain rules with regard to the storage of large quantities of soft coal, as it is subject to spontaneous ignition. It should never be piled near the furnace or against any wooden partitions.

All woodwork should be kept at least four feet from the furnace. As a matter of economy as well as protection, the furnace and heating pipes should be covered with a heavy coat of asbetos. A clearance should be maintained from the top of the furnace to the joists of the floor above of at least 18 inches, and an open space of two feet between the smoke pipe and any wooden material.

Fireplaces should always be carefully constructed and well screened. Especially is this true where coal or wood is used, on account of sparks which are thrown from the fire on rugs and other material. Even a gas fire should be screened if small children are near, as their clothing easily takes fire.

The ordinary home owner has frequently overlooked the danger which comes from the storage of ashes in the basement. The furnace is attended and the ashes placed in wooden boxes or piled against the wooden partition. Hot coals taken out of the furnace with the ashes retain their heat, and frequently set fire to the box or partition wall, which spells ruin for the home. When ashes are removed from any furnace, they should either be permanently disposed of at once or stored in noncombustible receptacles a satisfactory distance from all paper, wood or other combustible material. Waste paper or other material carried from the house should never be deposited in the sheetiron vessels used for ashes.

If electric current is used for heating, special wires should be run for this purpose, as overloading of house circuits with heating apparatus is always dangerous. Have a regular electrician make any installations considered necessary.

As nearly all fires are small in the beginning, and can be easily extinguished at that time, it is important that a standard, laboratory-labeled fire extinguisher be placed in every home and be made accessible. It is even more important that every member of the household be taught how to use this extinguisher in case of any emergency. In the event of a fire always call the fire department immediately.

Shift Gears Early to Save Gasoline

"IN ASCENDING a hill, don't wait until the last second to shift to a lower gear. If you do, you will not only lose speed and strain your engine, but you will also consume more gasoline." This is the warning to motorists issued by the Bureau of Public Roads, Washington, D. C., and based on tests conducted by Prof. T. R. Agg of the State College working with the bureau under the auspices of the National Research Council.

The common practice of waiting to shift gears on hills until the car has almost come to a stop is one of the principal causes of waste of gasoline, they say. In discovering the economy of the early shift, vehicles were used which were equipped with an ingenious device which makes a continuous record of the gasoline consumed as the vehicle moves over the road and another which makes a simultaneous record of the speed at every instant. Suitable sections of road were selected for the tests and the exact grades of these sections were determined.

The specially equipped vehicles, both trucks and automobiles, were then driven over the various sections, taking the record of the gasoline consumption and speed with the two instruments described. Several trips were made over each section and the rate of fuel consumption and speed for each trip were obtained.

It's a Shame for You Not to Earn $10,000 a Year

—When Others Do It So Easily

He Does It

"Last week my earnings amounted to $554.37; this week will go over $400."—F. Wynn, Portland, Oregon.

WHEN a farmhand steps from $50 to $1,000 a month—when a fireman jumps from $60 a month to a job paying him $500 for two weeks' work—when a former railway mail clerk at a yearly salary of $1,600 changes his job and earns $1,000 in thirty days—and when hundreds of others quickly jump from small pay to magnificent earnings in the same way—then it's a shame for you not to earn your $10,000 a Year!

There is nothing exceptional about these men. They'd tell you that themselves. Many had been clerks, bookkeepers, mechanics. Some had been policemen, farmhands, firemen. And then in one swift stroke, they found themselves making more money than they had ever dreamed possible.

The grind of routine work—the constant struggle to obtain even a small increase—all this was left behind. Today they know the thrill of making big money; they are no longer ruled by an office clock. There is genuine enjoyment in every hour of the day, for their work is filled with real fascination. They can enjoy the luxuries of life, have automobiles, etc., and put money into the bank every month. They have found not only the most interesting, but the best paying branch of all business.

A field that they had never dreamed of as theirs found to be easy and uncrowded. Earnings that they had always hoped to reach and that their jobs could never have paid, were right there in this new field waiting for them. Hundreds of others have found success the same way. You can, too—let us tell you how.

So Does He

"I had never earned more than $60 a month. Last week I cleared $206, and this week, $218. I can never repay you for the wonders you have done for me."—George W. Kearns, Oklahoma City, Okla.

How You Can Do It, Too

What these men have done, hundreds of others have done, hundreds are doing today, hundreds will do tomorrow. And you can be one of them! For now the same opportunity that put these men into the big money class is open to you!

In the first place they discovered a vital fact about business. They discovered that the big money is in the selling end of business. In the second place they discovered a new and amazingly easy way that will make any man a salesman, no matter what job he held before.

Salesmen are the very lifeblood of any concern—upon them depends the amount of profits made. The men who can put a product on the market and boost its sales are absolutely indispensable. No wonder that man for man Salesmen receive the highest pay. For the men who are Masters of Salesmanship—there is practically no limit to their earnings. Some receive almost fabulous amounts. And that is how these men and hundreds of others like them found the way to their present handsome incomes. They are all Master Salesmen now!

Yet previously they had no idea of becoming Salesmen. If you had told them success awaited them in the field of Selling, they would have laughed at you. They would have told you that it was absurd to think of it—for they had never sold a dime's worth of goods in their lives. Then they learned of a great organization of top-notch Salesmen and Sales Managers formed for the purpose of fitting men for the great opportunities in the field of Salesmanship and to help them to positions in the lines that most appeal to them. Step by step—in their spare time at home—this great organization, The National Salesman's Training Association, took them through every phase of selling. There was no magic in the methods they used. Every underlying principle of salesmanship was made as simple as A-B-C. Then as soon as they were qualified and ready, the Free Employment Service of the Association helped them secure good Selling positions. Almost before they realized it they were in the big money class.

and He-

"The very first month I earned $1,000. I was formerly a farm hand. Since then I have earned as high as $2,140 in one month."—Charles Beery, Winterset, Ia.

and He-

"After spending ten years in the railway service at salaries ranging from $900 to $1,000 a year I decided it was necessary for me to make a change. . . . . My earnings during the past thirty days were more than $1,000."—W. Hartle, Chicago, Ill.

Keep Christmas with a Kodak

While far too excited to dress, little Jane has popped into bed again to pose for a picture with mother's new Kodak.

And that only starts the fun. Even now father and Uncle Stan are renewing their youth in a snowball fight —and there's another picture.

Kodak is a gift that slips out of the holiday box into the spirit of Christmas.

Elizabeth Arden Preparations

—for Christmas! Could anything make a more welcome gift than an Arden Beauty Box, snugly packed with creams, lotions, powder, rouge — everything for feminine loveliness? Then too, there is Poudre d'Illusion, as daintily exquisite a powder as the box it comes in. And rouges in gold cases. Each one is a gift of taste and distinction and a quality that only Elizabeth Arden could achieve.

To build health and then to keep it—thousands have found a way

The tireless vitality that means success—the strength and vigor that make life a joy instead of an effort—

They are within reach of every normal man. Yet thousands lose them because they neglect the body's two most vital functions:

—Building up and nourishing the living tissues

—Removing daily the poisonous waste.

The fresh, living cells of Fleischmann's Yeast contain a natural food—with the very elements which help the body perform these two vital functions.

Like any other plant or vegetable, yeast produces the best results when fresh and "green"—not dried or "killed." Fleischmann's Yeast is the highest grade living yeast—always fresh. It is not a medicine, it is a natural food. It helps to "tone" up the whole system and assures regular daily elimination. Results cannot be expected unless it is eaten regularly.

Everywhere physicians and hospitals are prescribing Fleischmann's Yeast to correct constipation, skin disorders and to restore appetite and digestion.

Back to normal weight in six weeks

A recent letter from a travelling salesman tells a remarkable story.

"A year ago," he says, "I was in very bad condition—thin and anaemic—and weighed 140 lbs., though I am over six feet tall."

He began eating one cake of Fleischmann's Yeast at each meal. At the end of six weeks he weighed 170 lbs., and today, "I feel better than I ever have."

Eat two or three cakes a day regularly—plain, or spread on crackers, or mixed with milk or water. If you prefer, get six cakes at a time. They will keep in a cool, dry place for two or three days. Begin at once to know what real health means! Be sure you get Fleischmann's Yeast. All grocers have it.

RICHARD HUDNUT Twin Compact

NO matter how many or how lovely her gifts there is nothing that will mean more to her than Twin Compact.

Your gift to her—

Let it be the season's success —the gift every woman wants this year

WHAT shall it be? Your Christmas gift to the woman you most want to please?

That is not always easy to decide. There are so many requirements. It must be something beautiful, of course. Unusual—different from anything she has. Useful—because the day of useless giving has passed. And, if possible, it must be something new.

Where can you find a combination of all these desirable qualities?

In the gift that women of taste and discrimination everywhere are choosing. In the one article that stands out above all others as this season's success.

The new Richard Hudnut Twin Compact.

Its practical features

Nothing in the least like Twin Compact has ever before been offered to women. First, it contains five times as much powder as rouge. This alone is enough to make every woman want it. For never before have powder and rouge been obtainable in just the proportions they are used.

Many unique features

The two are so separated that there is no danger of their getting mixed. They lie in separate compartments, each having its own ample mirror and its own lamb's-wool puff.

Then there is the refiller. When powder and rouge are gone they can be renewed in the same five-to-one proportions. The refiller is made to fit only the Richard Hudnut Twin Compact and it always does fit!

But quite apart from its usefulness, Twin Compact's beauty appeals to every woman who sees it. There are three charming cases, all the same convenient size and shape, but each quite unique in design.

This is Twin Compact with both sides open. The center section contains powder on one side and rouge on the other. Center section, the refiller, can be renewed in any of three odors for 75c.

Patented April 4, 1922—Patents Pending

Three exquisite cases

One is a simple sun-ray design—just a delicate tracery of fine lines. The second has a lovely old English flower motif. The third, a beautiful scroll pattern, though very different, is perhaps most chosen as a gift because it is a little more festive than the others.

You will like all three, but one will doubtless seem to you more appropriate than the other two for the person you have in mind. Choose the one you think she would be most likely to choose for herself.

Any of the usual shades of powder—white, naturelle, or rachel—can be had with each case. The rouge is always the same, that lovely medium tone that lends just the right color to any skin. In these three famous Richard Hudnut odors, Three Flowers, Gardenia and Du Barry. At all drug and department stores.

RICHARD HUDNUT, Perfumer, New York
